it's pretty obvious by this point that the Blessed Lady is part of general magical girl culture.

While it's a good idea to pay attention whenever she's mentioned, I wouldn't give this one instance too much importance.

The Blessed Lady is a widespread belief among Magical Girls, from what we've seen.
Also, it's possible that Enishi is one of the 3rd Officio girls that were transferred to the 9th after their Incubator decided to cash out of the Magical Girl business.

A thousand direct attacks and plasma horns later, I'd be in command of a major portion of the Earth Sphere. With that in hand, I'd double down on earth technology research. Right. After briefly checking yourself once over to make sure everything is there - the Warmaster Cap on your head, the Golden Desert Eagle in its holster, and the Golden Bracelets still clasped around your wrists, concealed underneath your sleeves - it's here that you undo the locks on Ruri's door and carefully pull it open. Stepping through a moment later, closing the door behind you and wincing a bit at the excessive overhead lighting of the hall.

"Warmaster!" One of the Vindicares gasp, and the squad of five quickly snap to attention, their boots clicking in unison as they stand ramrod straight behind Enishi. The Callidus grimaces at the noise, looking back at the display of discipline behind her - before shaking her head and then bowing into a graceful curtsey. The hem of her long, overtly-ornate and elaborate kimono brushing against the floor.

"By your command, Matsuda-sama." Enishi replies, keeping her head bowed while casting a silk-sleeved arm at the Magical Girls behind her. "Vindicare Squad Hiryu, equipped and optimized for long range surveillance and marksmanship. And yours truly, the Callidus Rank Leader equipped and optimized for Callidus Countermeasures and Crowd Control." She places her hand to her chest, before looking up ever so slightly.

You acknowledge this with a nod, your eyes narrowed behind your glasses as you examine the six Magical Girls Kyuubey had sent you. Vindicare Squad Hiryu - you remember them as the squad specializing at the really long-range markmanship stuff, the sort that would do all their Magical Girling a mile away from the target. Not all that reliable in a scrap, but you needed steady hands and cool heads holding and aiming firearms here, not gunfighters. They'll do nicely.

As for Karasawa Enishi...well. You've never really interacted with her, except for the times when you've seen her call upon Kharn a few times, and having a few dinner dates with Mami.

She's never really gone out of her way to approach you then, as if you were beneath her notice - but at the same time, you weren't really that approachable anyway. Her being here, though, makes you wonder just how seriously Kyuubey is taking this. Enishi makes for two Rank Leaders he'd given you to support this op. Any other day, you'd think this was a serious misapplication of resources, but...the mutant cat seems to be a bit too smart for that, if you'll be honest.

You give them another nod, signaling them to tone back on the formality a notch - and Squad Hiryu relaxes their stance just the slightest bit. Enishi, on the other hand, straightens up with a flourish, a paper fan materializing and unfolding in her right hand with the smallest flick of her wrist.

You clear your throat after a few moments of awkward silence, and it's here that you speak again. Telling them to keep it quiet, as you've only just gotten your client to sleep, and you don't really want to deal with her waking up.

"We understand and comply, Matsuda-sama." Enishi smiles, her almond-shaped eyes crinkling slightly underneath her severely-cut fringe of black hair. ...Seriously, it looks like it's been cut with a micrometer, it was that straight and neat, an impossibly symmetrical line above her eyebrows. "Rest assured that we will reinforce the Warmaster with complete and utter silence. The principal won't even know we're here."

That's something, at least. In any case, have they been briefed about possible interference from the Tenth? And what do they have to report?

Enishi turns to look at the squad behind her, nodding at each of them in turn, before turning back to you. "Yes, Matsuda-sama, we have been briefed about the accursed Tenth, and we have made sure to gird ourselves properly, lest we need to spill Magical Girl blood during this operation." The Callidus' language, unnecessarily flowery and descriptive, is getting a bit on your nerves.

"We have also taken into consideration that there might be civilians in the line of fire, and as such, Hiryu is also equipped to provide a less-lethal response to any aggression."

The less-lethal response, you note, is their rifles, slung at their fronts with ruggedized straps. Not necessarily magic ones - you could probably make a safe bet here that Misaka's provided them - but with ammunition geared towards suppression, rather than out-and-out target elimination. They're also wearing flak jackets over their costumes - not strictly necessary, but a nice way to blend in to the rest of the security detail while not attracting too much suspicion. No one wants to see a girl with her front full of bleeding bullet holes and still be able to walk, much more run. This way, they not only look like overtly-creative cosplayers, but also have a convenient excuse in case they get spotted in action.

"As for report..." Enishi seems to hesitate here. "The Incubator says that the list of potential suspects regarding the matter with Tomoe-sama is underway. And as for Tomoe-sama..." The Callidus holds out both hands beside her, and one of the Vindicares step forward to place a giftwrapped bottle of Kong in them. This she holds out to you, like someone handing off a bouquet. "With her regards, Matsuda-sama. And her reminder to drink in strict moderation, as she realizes how tense you might be."

...Well. That's...that's pretty thoughtful of her. You receive the bottle of Kong, feeling your cheeks burn slightly.

"In any case, Matsuda-sama, we will be conducting a full sweep of the entire building. After that, we will take up overwatch, and I will be nearby to detect any Callidus trying to sneak her way in." Enishi curtseys again. "Before we do so, does Matsuda-sama have any request of us? We are here to do the Warmaster's bidding. Some coffee, perhaps? A massage?" The Callidus looks at you. "If I may say so, Matsuda-sama, you are very visibly tense."

How do you respond?

You blink at Enishi's suggestion, before shaking your head. No need for a massage - being tense is nothing you're not used to. What you do need is a quiet night watch - and possibly coffee. Yes. Coffee would be nice right now. You wouldn't mind some.

Enishi nods at this. "Of course, Matsuda-sama." The polite smile curling her lips fades, and she looks at the squad lined up behind her with the corner of her eye. "Vindicare Kagura, please pop by the Hotel pantry and have them make the Warmaster an iced coffee, as strong as they can make it. And inform them that she will be requiring refills for the night, at her demand. On the double, please, and you will be timed."

One of the Vindicares - a tanned girl with short black hair and fielding what looks to be a rather upscaled Barette M82 rifle - salutes, before breaking into a run down the hallway.

...Well, that wasn't really necessary. You could have just called for room service, or something--

"What, like how proles would do it, Matsuda-sama?" Enishi seems horrified at the thought. "No, no. We are here to serve, Matsuda-sama, let us handle the menial tasks at least. The less you have to do, the more you can focus on guarding the principal." She smiles a self-satisfied smile to herself.

You blink at her. well, uh. You guess that makes sense.

Shaking your head, you continue your briefing. They answer to you, not to the principal, and certainly not to any other idols they may encounter. You will not be tolerating any fraternisation during the job, so you'd better not catch them making nice. You also brief them that the principal believes there is a mole in her protection detail - they are to share as little information with them as possible. Cooperate with them to a point, but never reveal too much regarding their own patrol routes, positions, or capabilities.

"Understood, Matsuda-sama." Enishi nods. "And I do believe Squad Hiryu has successfully jacked into their comms. Am I correct in my assumption, Vindicare Ayako?"

A moment of silence, before the Vindicare in question clears her throat. "...Yes, Enishi-sempai. We've already tapped into their comms, and are keeping track of their conversations." A moment of silence. "As of right now, they're talking about how one of theirs need to treat the others to...beer, after the op. Something about a Sparkle Award."

...At least the security detail seems to be in good spirits.

A series of rapid footsteps, and Vindicare Kagura seems to materialize out of nowhere, grasping a rather tall glass of iced coffee in her gloved hands. She's breathing hard, slightly, but otherwise she doesn't seem to have spilled a drop of the beverage.

"Your coffee, Warmaster," She holds out the drink to you, and...well, you take it. Not after stuffing the bottle of Kong in your inventory, of course. Taking a sip from the provided bendy straw, you watch as Kagura takes her place back in the squad.

Huh. Duncan Hills, again. Well, not too bad, at least. You just wonder, then, how she knew that you liked iced coffee better than its standard hot configuration.

"Just a hunch I went with." Enishi smiles. "Well, if there's anything else you want us to attend to, Warmaster?"

Any other requests to your backup? They'll be commencing their sweep of the building once you dismiss them.

I got bored:

>Magical Girl Noir Quest ED
>Setting is a dark purple ocean, with a murky black sky
>Chiaki calmly walks on screen, completely expressionless and with nothing in hand. She walks on the dark purple ocean like its solid ground. The camera starts following her, and each step on the purple water causes ripples.

>As the camera scrolls sideways to follow Chiaki, featureless shadows holding the golden weapons come into view, standing calmly facing away from Chiaki. If a wielder of a particular weapon has been revealed, then the weapon's owner is there in place of their weapon's shadow.
>As Chiaki passes them, the shadows (or people) holding the weapons vanish, letting the golden weapons fall to the ground where they are slowly stained blood red, the stains emanating from where the shadow was holding the weapon.
>At the very end of the song, after the 19 shadows have vanished, Chiaki, still expressionless, stops about a foot away from a gently smiling Pinky.
>Pinky, her smile never fading, raises the Golden Deagle to Chiaki's forehead, point blank.
>The screen suddenly goes black, and a gunshot rings out, punctuating the last note of whatever song was playing.
If I had to choose, the ED song would be something etheral, along the lines of Sis Puella Magica.

You shake your head. Nothing else - all you ask of them is that they keep communications open and their eyes open. Other than that, they're free to do what they do best.

"Very well, Matsuda-sama." It's here that Enishi bows to you, before turning to the rest of the Vindicares with a flourish. She claps both her hands. "The word has been given, and our Warmaster expects the best of you. Begin the sweep, leave no room uninvestigated, no stone unturned. Anything suspicious that comes up, inform me or Matsuda-sama directly. Engage targets only after authorization from me or the Warmaster."

A moment of silence as she fixes each Vindicare with a cold glare. "Squad Hiryu, the reputation of the Ninth rests upon your shoulders. Do not do anything to shame it or besmirch it." She pauses here again, seemingly for theatric effect more than anything, although you could sense that she is taking this very seriously. "Go."

Squad Hiryu once more rips off a perfect salute in unison before quickly dispersing. Each one heading off in a different direction - some going to the elevator, others to the stairwell, and one of them investigating the other rooms in the penthouse.

"I will be starting from the penthouse down myself, Matsuda-sama." Enishi turns to face you. "By your leave, then."

You nod at this, but not before asking her if she could share some tips with the security detail - about resisting magical control, and all that.

"...I'll see what I can do, Matsuda-sama." The Callidus' expression flickers with hesitation for a moment. "Enjoy your coffee, and please don't hesitate to have one of the girls get in touch with me should you change your mind about that massage." Her smile rises to the fore once more, and you have a suspicion that it's her trademark one - a soft smile bordering on a cruel smirk. Sort of like Mami's smile and Kirika's sneer, combined. "Once more, by your leave, Matsuda-sama."

You dismiss her finally, and it's here that you turn around to go back into Ruri's room - when you very nearly trip and spill your coffee all over yourself as you bump into Deepthroat. ...A freshly-showered deepthroat, it looks like, her hair still dripping wet, soaking the shoulders of her own pajamas. She's...well, she's carrying a folded cardboard box under one arm.

"S-sorry, Miss Chiaki. Um." She looks up at you. "I was...is Ruri-sama asleep, already? I...I'm supposed to report for my time in the Box..."

"Hmm? Who's this?" It's here that you feel the taller Callidus step up behind you, looking over your shoulder - inadvertently smelling the scent of her perfume, a rather intoxicating scent of fresh fruit, something citrusy. "I...oh. I see. Well, this is interesting."

Noriko blinks, looking up at the source of the voice - and you see her immediately pale. With an efficiency that you didn't think existed in the assitant, she unfolds and sets up the box she'd been dragging around, before crawling underneath it and staying there.

...The box is shivering every so often, and you could hear crying inside it.

What just happened here? You turn back to Enishi, the question poised on your lips, before you catch her aiming a rather venomous glare down at the box. A glare that you'd frankly be impressed - and intimidated with.

How do you react?

You look down at the box, then back at Enishi. You don't need to say anything here except match the Callidus Rank Leader, glare for glare - and to your surprise, she's the first to look away, closing her eyes briefly before fanning herself. A small sigh escaping her lips.

"...Nothing more than an unexpected family reunion, Matsuda-sama." She muurmurs. And nothing that will affect the op or how I conduct myself during it, I assure you." It's here that she gives the box a little nudge with her toe. "You. I assume little Ryota is doing well in your care?"

Between snuffling and sniveling sobs, the box seems to nod.

"Very well. Father sends his regards, and Mother continues to be disappointed with your life choices so far." Another nudge with the toe of her sandal. "Eldest Sister wishes you well in your idol career, but she shares my sentiment in wishing that you would start growing up and leave such childish things behind."

"Nnguuuh..." A tremulous, frightened groan rises from beneath the box, and it shakes all the more.

. . .Sisters, then? Older sister?

"Regrettably so." Enishi lets out her breath in a hiss, her eyes narrowing. "We had high hopes for her, Matsuda-sama, you must understand. But...well. Hope can sometimes be a silly thing to follow." She shoots the box another scathing look, before bowing towards you and then turning on her heel. Her kimono fluttering as she makes haste towards the elevator, a blue glow blossoming in her hand.

You wait for Enishi to finally get out of sight before carefully lifting the box up and off of Deepthroat. What you find is the poor girl, curled up like some sort of pillbug, sobbing into her hands.

You wait for her to calm down - and it takes ten minutes and half of your iced coffee for her to do so. "I-is...is she gone?"

"Nnh...she's...she's never stopped being scary..." Noriko shakily stands up, her eyes red, and nose positively dripping of...well. She needs a handkerchief more than anything. Or tissues, really. Something to wipe off the-- wait, no, she doesn't need to use her own pajama sleeve--fuck.

"I-it's okay, this...this is mine, anyway. I'll just wash it..."

How do you react?

Well, erm. You hand Deepthroat the rest of your coffee - you're pretty much wide awake now, anyway - and tell her that she doesn't need to worry about being put in the Box or anything like that. You cleared it with her boss already, and besides, Ruri's already asleep. She can turn in for the night if she wants to.

"C-coffee? Oh, um. N-no thanks, coffee makes me jittery...t-thanks, though. That's really nice of you, Miss Matsuda." Deepthroat smiles up at you in a rather drippy, kicked-puppy kind of way, and you couldn't help but give her a conciliatory pat on the head. Not too much, just one or two.

In an attempt to fill the awkward silence, you comment that no one in her family approved of her career choice.

"They...they wanted me to be a...a real idol," The girl murmurs, looking down at her bare feet. "I...they don't think that being up on stage just to be yelled and bullied at is being a real idol. Father thinks it's just one step from being a c-clown...and at least clowns are skilled enough to juggle." She shakes her head, flinging some rivulets of water your way. "I-it's okay, though. I'm doing things t-the way I want them to, a-and even if she makes me cry..." It's here that Deepthroat's face sets into what could be a determined expression, even if a bit of snot is currently making its way down a nostril. "...What matters is Ryota-kun is still p-proud of me. That's...that's all I need."

Well. There may be something more to this drippy little assistant besides bad hygiene and greasy hair.

...Maybe she wants to sleep next to Ruri? The super idol did mention something about being lonely in an empty bed, or something like that?

"What?" It's here that Noriko frowns. "N-no, no thanks. Ruri-sama's nice and pretty and smells like pancakes when she's not wearing those expensive perfumes, but she snores...I can't even sleep in the same room with her snoring." She shakes her head, misting you again. "U-um. Well. I'll go on ahead and sleep, Miss Matsuda." She trundles towards her own room, pushing the door open and squeezing through the gap she'd made. You make to turn away, before you see her staring at you through the gap.

"...Thank you," She squeaks, before finally closing her door.

Nice kid. You sip what little remained of your iced coffee. Shitty family, though.

"...I suppose we could be a bit hard on her sometimes, Matsuda-sama, but it's something expected of us," comes Enishi's voice behind you, and you very nearly spit your coffee in her face. You hastily swallow your mouthful, and ask her what the FUCK she was doing sneaking up behind you.

"Callidus Rank Leader, Matsuda-sama. But one of our Vindicares, Ayumu, found something in one of the rooms in this floor. Well, besides a discarded cleaning lady uniform." She hands you a calling card. There's a drawing on it, and what appears to be a Chirpee account address.

What.

"...No fingerprints, no traces in the room we found it in. We did, however, find that it's linked to a Chirpee account." She hands you her smartphone, and it's open to that very same account. You narrow your eyes at this as you read the chirps.

Now, erm, just going to pose a quick vote decision for everyone still reading. Do you guys want me to continue to the next day for tomorrow's thread, or would you like a brief flashback to change things up?

Please vote if you'd like to influence this decision! Also, questions answered, I don't think there's any writeups tonight!

Is chirpee a magical girl only type website, or is it public. I can understand there being a niche market for people digging up information on Warmasters or other popular magical girls for magical girls. I bet Murderface has her own fan club. Their website has advertisement links to the MMxMM doujins and news updates for the adaptations.

You discovered this because of the horde of fans crowding around the entrance, all of them eager to see their idol in skimpy swimwear - as well as the bawling children being comforted by their parents, grasping colorful inner tubes and water wings that would unfortunately not see use that day. You'd have pointed it out to Ruri, but you were busy elbowing a fan that got too close for comfort in the face to do so. This, of all things, got you cheers and applause and quite a bit of squealing from the crowd. Sayaka had to bodily drag you to get you walking again, you were that stunned.

One year and eight months ago, you were a Magical Girl.

Your mission: to escort Malal, the Warmaster's Equerry, as she

California, United States of America.

Before that, though, there's a fourteen-hour flight you have to sit through - and you're doing that now, trapped in between the Culexus herself and Kirika Kure, the Eversor Rank Leader and your immediate superior. The former is messing about her tablet, as she's wont to do.

Kirika is enjoying the beverage cart each time it passes by, already building up quite a collection of empty single shot bottles on her pull-down tray. She's slapped the beverage cart girl and the stewardesses two times each on the ass already, and you've had to apologize to them personally about it. And it's only been two hours since takeoff.

You've never been to America before. In fact, this might be the first time you're heading so far out overseas.

This isn't exactly something you've been looking forward to, if you'll be honest. Sure, you accepted the mission with a smile and a salute, and you didn't flinch when Kirika slapped your ass and told you to make sure Malal doesn't get lynched by the American Officio's clinically-insane, hamburger-huffing nutcases - but it's not something you'll be too eager to have displayed in your record.

You've always dreaded interacting with other Magical Girls not part of your Officio. Moreso when they were...well, foreign.

Casual xenophobia aside, it's because you don't think foreign magical girls take being a magical girl seriously enough.

And being a Magical Girl is one of the most serious, if not THE most serious thing anyone can be.

It's not...it's not all sparkles and shiny transformation sequences. It's not all about the power of love and friendship and hugging being able to solve EVERYTHING.

Sometimes, sure. You'll accept that sometimes, all you need is a sense for diplomacy, a quick wit and being able to compromise.

You don't have those. What you do have is the ability to cut through plate steel with a sword you can manifest in the time it takes you to think about it. What you do have is the ability to be able to throw a sword hard enough that it can punch through three yakuza and nick the ear of the hostage they were just about to rape. What you do have is a sick regenerative ability that lets you do the Piccolo thing when you're angry enough.

And you've put all of those to becoming the only Eversor that Kirika Kure herself decided to take up as her own prodigy. THE Kirika Kure.

So yes, you take being a Magical Girl seriously.

>>26285470

There's not much to talk about your career, besides how seriously you've taken everything about it.

You took your training seriously, to the point that you've graduated at the top of your class, even with Kirika Kure herself doing everything possible to drag you down (including setting two teams of Vindicares to target you during an obstacle course, using live ammunition).

You've taken each and every mission you've been given or volunteered for seriously.

Not a single mission failure ever since you've gotten into active duty, and a 100% kill ratio. Except for that one time that...well, you were asked to kill a perfectly-innocent civilian who just happened to see you. It's a black mark on your record, but you don't count it.

People often tell you to tone it down a bit, take it down a notch or two.

Chilling out every now and then wouldn't kill you, they'd advised.

It's hard to be polite sometimes, but you've managed to put the point across that you didn't get to where you are today by 'chilling out'. You didn't become the Rank Leader's prodigy by 'taking it down a notch'. You're not about to take it lightly just because your boss is a fucking mutant cat, or...or because some amnesiac little bitch shot said boss and sprayed you with his fucking innards.

...No matter how much shampoo you used you could still smell melted marshmallow on your hair HOLY SHIT YOU ARE SO MAD RIGHT NOW. You even woke up earlier today with a half-asleep Kyoko chewing on your hair, for fuck's sake.

Ngh. You shouldn't be here. You should be back home, guarding Girl A.

Who knows what she'll do to Mami and Kyoko once she wakes up again? Once she gets another gun in her hands from...from God knows where?

>>26285494

You glance at your smartphone. You've called Kyoko three times already. All three times she'd told you that everything's okay, with Girl A still comatose, Mami staying by her bedside. She'd also told you to bring back something neat. A cowboy hat, or something. You told her you'll try, but you're not sure if Americans even wear them anymore.

You can't shake off the feeling that Girl A is just bad news. Bad news for the Officio, bad news for everyone. Yes, Kyoko talked to you about not judging people right off the bat - even if they very nearly blew your head off and instead got your boss all over your hair. But ever since you dragged her comatose ass out of that Barrier - very nearly killing yourself and Mami in the process - you've been having dreams. Dreams of finding yourself in a large concert hall, full of empty seats. Towering over everyone with a horrendously large sword in your hand. Looking down at a tearful Girl A, a grenade in her hand.

She flickers out of existence before everything explodes around you, and...that's when you wake up, your head swimming, feeling as if you've been underwater for a while.

...Bah. You have to focus. You have to take this seriously.

What do you do now?

[X] Talk to Malal

I'm not sure what's more shocking: Kirika being a molester, Sallaka dreaming of losing it, or confirmation that coobies are marshmallows.

You decide to talk to Malal, the Warmaster's Equerry.

No, you're not really in talking terms with her or the rest of her overdressed, helmeted rankmates, but, well, you'd like to know more about this mission. It'd help you get up to speed on what to expect as soon as the plane touches down - as well as pass the time, if nothing else. You've got the best part of the flight to kill.

...It's not that the Culexus - or any other member of the rank itself - is hard to approach. No, they're legitimately nice people, not beholden to the hubris that seems to infect anyone who's just had her contract established and thus was told that she was now practically invincible and peerless (at least, to the rest of the world's population).

But it was the Culexus' abilities themselves - the ability to disrupt magic just by simply being in the same vicinity - that made pariahs out of them in the first place. They were the veritable nerds in the high school officio cafeteria. No one wanted to be around them, no one wanted them in their missions (although, strictly speaking, having one in your team all but guaranteed the best support and the best equipment available). It's not to be cruel, of course - but no one wants to hang around with someone that makes you feel like puking your guts out and shitting your pants at the same time.

Culexus Near-Proximity Sickness. That's what Kyuubey explained it away at first. A Culexus, without her suit activated to blunt and focus her abilities, would make any Magical Girl around her react in a...violently messy way, before becoming completely and utterly incapacitated. Normal, mundane folk would simply feel uncomfortable, or oddly aggressive against the Culexus herself.

With the suit on and activated, this effect would of course be countered, but...as you personally found out, its efficacy is quite varied, differing from Magical Girl to Magical Girl. For some it blocked out the effects completely, while in others it simply reduced it to a tolerable sense of nausea. To you, well - if the Culexus sitting beside you had her hardsuit's setting set to anything less than its maximum blocking capability, then you'd be ruining the blouse you're wearing with the pancakes you had for breakfast earlier.
Well, you're not making a mess of yourself now, so Malal must have been considerate enough to do that without you asking.

Still, it couldn't hurt to check.

You tap at her shoulderplate - a spiked metal pad with her trademark skull symbol imprinted on the molded surface. The Culexus makes a small noise in her helmet, and you see your face reflected on her visor as she turns to look at you.

"What, you're not going to call Kyoko again, Sayaka? It's only been thirty minutes since your last call." Her helmet's vox-speaker, digitizing her voice and robbing it of all warmth, makes her little joke sound like a future robot overlord mocking you. You hate that voice. "...You must be very bored to talk to me, though. Usually you're watching me from ten paces away, with the biggest frown on your face."

What? No. ...No, you don't do that. What's she talking about?

"...If you say you don't, you don't." Malal nods slightly, but even the amusement in her voice couldn't be erased by her vox speaker completely. "Well, what do you want to talk about? Probably about the mission or something, right? Ask away." A moment. "Oh, you're probably wondering about my suit, huh? Don't worry, I'm not going to make you blow chunks all over the stewardess."

Beside you, Kirika lets out a lofty chuckle. "Ha-ha! ....Blow!"

What do you ask Malal?

To be fair, that's only happened once so far. She got really jealous of how quickly Chiaki hit it off with Kharn, and that's been the only instance so far.

From her internal dialogue during the barrier arc, we do know that she feels ridiculously insecure about how much Chiaki likes Mami. The other instance that might count is when she got drunk and stole Wendy's panties to confront us about later.

"Diligent as always, huh, Sayaka?" Malal chuckles, before nodding once more. "Well, it's not exactly classified, so I suppose telling you about it isn't going to hurt anyone." She taps at her tablet, and turns it towards you. Showing you a picture of a...rather sickly-looking girl in a bloody, grimy hospital gown, her white hair unruly and disheveled. The picture's grainy, as if it'd been taken with an old-fashioned film camera and someone fucked up the job of developing it.

"Sabrina Blackburn. The Eighth contracted her some time ago, they're not really too clear on that. But what is clear is that her Wish turned her into a biological hazard." A horizontal swipe of a gloved finger on the screen, and the next image makes you wince and turn away - it's a picture of the same girl, standing in the middle of a...well, there are just a lot of decomposing corpses in the shot, with most of the corpses wearing SWAT gear. "Melts and decomposes biological matter just by being around it. Anything - wood, paper, even human flesh, just starts to rot in her presence. And it's not something that she can control - it's just what happens. She doesn't even need to be transformed to do it."

Another swipe, this time showing the girl huddled in the corner of a rusted prison cell, with the bars all eaten through. "They tried locking her away while they figured out what to do. As it turns out, get her anxious enough and she can make metal rust into powder in no time flat, too." It's here that you detect a hint of melancholy in the Culexus' voice. "The Eighth threw her into a Silent Room afterwards. ...She's been locked away inside it for more than a year."

An entire year? More than that, even? You couldn't even stay in the same room for an hour.

"Yes, well, you can imagine how she feels, right?" You could her the smirk in Malal's voice. "I got in touch with one of their Eversors - one of them seems to be smart enough to figure out that you can't solve everything just by shoving ." Kirika laughs at this, chuckling 'Fuck you, Malal' into her drink.

"We decided that since Sabrina's powers work the same way as a Culexus does, then a hardsuit would probably work. After a few modifications, and all." She turns the tablet's screen back to her, tapping a few times. "Don't worry, it's not anything experimental. Nothing that could blow up in our faces or anything like that. And we'll be doing it inside the Silent Room where she's in, so if it doesn't work..." She shrugs. "It doesn't work. No one gets reduced to mush."

Well, why does she have to be the one to bring it over? Certainly this could've been done by anyone else in the Officio--

"I designed the Culexus Hardsuit," Malal says patiently. "Well, with some help from R&D. But I know the design in and out, and I can help out a lot in making sure the mods work." Another vox-corrupted chuckle. "And before you ask, yes, this is sort of us trying to establish relations with another Officio. A first meeting on friendly terms."

...Shouldn't the Warmaster be here, then? Is Kharn slacking off again?

"Did YOU think Kharn didn't want to tag along?" Malal tilts her helmet towards you. "She was livid when I told her that she couldn't go. Sulked in her office the entire week. I had to do the daily inspections myself!"

But...but why--

"The Eighth Warmaster and her Equerry are blonde," The Culexus states flatly.

Ah. Well.

That's...yes.

God dammit, Kharn.

"This shouldn't take all that long, though." Malal shrugs as she places her tablet on her pull-down tray. "Probably two days, tops. We'll be back before you can even start missing Kyoko."

...That's...that's good news, but you weren't thinking of--

"If you say you're not, you're not. I'm just saying it as a point of reference."

Right. Okay.

"Save your breath, Mal," Kirika giggles. "Miki's got it hard for Sakura, although I can't fucking discern WHY. She's already missed her the moment they had to kiss each other goodbye." She cackles at this, the scent of alcohol strong in her breath.

N-no, no. That's... You feel your cheeks heat up, and you inwardly grimace at how Kirika's doing this kind of shit again: a kind of humiliating ribbing that could only be inflicted on a junior by a particularly sadistic senior. And she's done this to you many times, already - from having you challenge other Eversors from other Officios to a sparring match, to running errands that would make a lesser Eversor just break their own Soul Gem underfoot.

You still haven't forgotten the time when Kirika had you slap Mami on her bottom, completely out of the blue.

Someday, you'll pay her back for it. All of it. Someday.

You were waiting for Malal to get her cackles in, but all you got was another stare, before turning back to her tablet.

"Must be nice to be missed by someone," You hear her vox-speaker crackle. "Everyone should have someone that misses them when they're away."

Well. At least you know why you're on this milk run.

What do you do now?

[]Ask Malal something else.

[]Let Malal do her work. Ask Kirika something.

You turn to Malal again. If she invented the suit, then...what'd Culexus do before that?

"You're still talking to me?" Malal seems to be surprised, here, before chuckling as she shakes her head. "Well, let's see. From what I remember from Kyuubey, they ended up as isolated agents. Solo missions only - no one could last long enough around them to actually work together." It's here that she looks down at her own gloved hands, resting on top of her tablet. "...Some girls couldn't take it anymore and just did away with them the old-fashioned way. Retired them even without the notice. Others, well, they retired themselves. Couldn't handle the fact that their wish made them into something that made people around them sick enough to hate them."

A moment of silence, before Malal turns to look at you, once more. "They didn't last very long, is what I'm trying to get at. Even those who isolated themselves from others became prime targets for normal folk, you know? Yakuza and such can't get affected. They don't see a Magical Girl, they just see someone in a costume and somehow she makes them really, really angry. Guess what they do to her when she runs out of ammo?"

"Exactly." Malal shrugs. "Soon after I made the prototype, we offered to distribute it to other Officios. Kyuubey put a price tag on it, shrewd little bastard. Of course we got a lot of offers, despite being marked up to hell and back." She taps the piece of tough-looking luggage under her seat. "Resting my ass on ten million yen of cutting edge technology and premium grade leather, here."

Ten million yen, huh. That's...kind of expensive, isn't it?

>>26287200

"Only for those who can afford it," Malal grins. "Kyuubey lets me hand over a few suits for free, from time to time. Special cases only. Other officios can afford the price tag easily enough." She shakes her head. "No one needs to suffer like those girls did. Not anymore."

You can't help but think that you're digging too deep, here, so you try to change the subject.

What does she think about Girl A?

"What do I think about Girl A?" Malal echoes you, her helmet's vox speaker crackling. "Well, now. I was wondering when you'd ask about her." She drums her fingers on her tablet's ruggedized casing. "Hmm. Where to begin? There's so much to talk about her that I suddenly don't know how to put it across..."

She can start with her opinion of her, anyway.

"Hah. Well." Malal chuckles. "I...well, I think she's a strange case. No Officio's owned up to her. She's not in our registry, Kyuubey swears up and down that no Incubator on the planet's contracted her...and you found her in a Barrier of a Witch that should, by rights, should have had her for a snack even before you got there." She nods to herself. "She's someone special, this Girl A. It'd be good for us to find out who she is and where she came from - and get her to join us."

But what if she turns out to be a spy? Inter-Officio spies aren't unheard of, and she could be one of them.

"...If she is, she used one hell of a cover." The Culexus laughs, as if finding the entire thing funny.

You don't find it funny at all.

"I know you don't," The helmeted girl replies. "But I've got a good feeling about her." She taps the side of her helmet's visor. "As long as she doesn't try anything stupid, we'll treat her as a rescued POW, not a prisoner."

But what about the thing with Kyuubey--

"Reflex, probably. Trauma. It's obvious." Malal shrugs. "She wasn't aiming right at you, she was aiming at Kyuubey. I'm apologizing to you at her behalf. Just...be more careful, next time."

"Sayaka-chan's just angry she got Kyuubeykakke'd," Kirika giggles beside you, her glass of whisky sloshing about in her hand. "Was it hard to wash out of your hair? It was, wasn't it?"

...Yes. Yes it was.

"Aww. Poor thing." She shoves the glass of whisky in your hand - it's half-full. "Here, drink this. You'll feel better." The raven-haired Eversor grins lewdly at you. "And that's an ORDER."

You look down at the solitary ice cube swimming in the strong-smelling glass of dark amber liquid.

...Urgh. You're...you're not a drinker. Sure, you can understand why Magical Girls, more often than not, turned to the drink to try and forget what they've done and seen on the job - but you could never understand why they'd get into the stuff like salarymen, drinking enough to necessitate being carried out by their friends before they made a scene. Drinking enough that they'd turn up the next day late, weary and hungover, unable to explain to you with a straight face why exactly they felt to do such a thing to themselves.

"Stop bullying Sayaka, Kirika," Malal says, but if anything, that only made the Eversor beside you smile even wider.

"What? Bullying? Perish the thought, Equerry!" Kirika scoffs, here. "I'm just trying to get Sayaka to relax, that's all. And the quickest way to do that is to get a few shots inside her. Right, Sayaka-chan?" You feel her elbow dig into your side. "Your sempai's got your best interests in mind, right?"

...Right. You shoot Kirika a dirty look, before jerking away from her elbow and downing the shot in one sharp gulp. Even the half-melted ice cube, which you hastily crunch on the way down.

Khh. This is why you don't drink. No matter what you do, it always tastes like gasoline. Burning your throat all the way through, to settle with a painful warmth at the pit of your stomach.

You manage not to cough the rest of it out as you hack and wheeze and try to breathe through a scorched throat. Kirika cackles here, slapping her tray and making the empty one-shot bottles rattle and clink, while Malal herself only shakes her head.

Handing back the glass to Kirika - who immediately refills it and knocks it back, grinning all the while, a grin you staunchly ignore - it's here that you resume your conversation with the Culexus.

Doesn't she think that the Warmaster misses her? Even in her own twisted way?

"...She only misses me because I'm the only one she can boss around without feeling bad," Malal chuckles from behind her helmet. "Anyway, that's neither here or there. I'm not lonely, if that's what you're wondering." She nods, more to herself than to you. "...Yeah. Not lonely at all."

If she says she's not, she's not.

"Hah!" Malal snorts at this reversal, before flipping her tablet back up into her gloved hands. Resuming whatever she was doing before you started talking to her.

Awkward silence aside, you've learned a lot, now. You don't have anything else to talk about with the Culexus.

What do you do now?

You decide and settle back and sleep away the best part of the plane ride. It's easy enough to do so - one of the things an Eversor first learns is to be able to fall asleep on demand, whenever and wherever she is. Sure, a Magical Girl can potentially be on active duty for an entire week without sleep, but the human body can only be pushed for so long. Stretch yourself thin enough and you start making mistakes, mistakes that could cost you everything in no time at all. Sleep is important, and Eversors are taught to be able to catch it whenever they can.

...If you'll be honest, though? That glassful of whisky you just downed is going to make it easier to do so. You're...a bit woozy at the moment. Better to just sleep it off than meet the Eighth Warmaster tipsy and unreliable. Less chance of you making an embarrassment of the Ninth, either.

You turn to tell Kirika that you'll be catching some shuteye - only to find that she's already doing the same, snoring rather loudly and making the baby across the aisle wake up and cry. You shake your head at this, and tell Malal instead, who seems to be playing some sort of game on her tablet.

"Go ahead. We've still got a way to go, anyway." Her helmet reflects your slightly-flushed face. "I'll wake you up when we're there. I'll make sure Kirika doesn't do anything funny, either."

That's...yeah. You thank her, before leaning back on your chair and closing your eyes.

Hopefully, you won't get that dream again.

Goddamn Girl A and the way she worms into other people's dreams.

keep it outside the trigger guard (like it is currently, along the side of the gun) and all is good, trigger discipline is pretty much the first thing you teach someone learning to shoot, and seeing as Chiaki does love to shoot, one would hope she has a healthy appreciation of the 4 fundamentals (or I will murder Decu)

True to Malal's prediction, you did sleep through the entire flight, which is a bit disturbing in its own right. You woke up to her gently shaking your shoulder, and you very nearly screamed as the very first thing you saw upon opening your eyes was her skulled helmet. You managed to stop yourself, then, and with Kirika giggling for some reason, the three of you filed out of the plane along with the rest of its passengers.

Getting out of the airport was easy enough - a flash of something that came from Malal's wallet had the airport authorities ushering you through the gates, no questions asked. You didn't even have to pull out your passport.

"Where's our contact, then?" Kirika asks as you hurry to catch up with them - your sempai having loaded you down with her own luggage. She'd also volunteered you to carry the hardsuit - and it is the heaviest thing you've ever carried. Seriously, you're breathing hard as it is. "They're not expecting us to commute to their headquarters, are they?"

"They should be just around here, keep a look out." Malal replies, the harsh afternoon light glinting off of her visor as she looks around - and it's then that all three of you turn as you hear the purr of a well-maintained engine eating road, before braking to a stop on the airport driveway.

It's...well, it's a nice car. A rather ordinary-looking car, painted in complete black. Typical company car of any Officio, actually, used to mainly transport agents around. ...If anything, you felt a bit let down at this. Where's the American flag, painted in garish colors all over the hood? The ornaments? The bald eagles shrieking? The explosions?

The driver's door opens up, and someone climbs out. Someone wearing what looks like a traditional witch outfit - not Witch, that has to be made clear, but a witch, with the black vest, the poofy sleeves and the ankle-long skirt capped with boots.

The only thing missing is the wide-brimmed black hat with the crooked peak - which is, hilariously enough, replaced with a wide-brimmed cowboy hat, a star-shaped buckle with the word SHERIFF engraved on it glinting brightly on its flattened peak. You also spot the leather belt hanging loose on her hips, weighed down by the leather holster where an oversized, double-barreled pistol is sleeping in.

And blonde hair. Long, unruly blonde hair, reaching down to her waist, a lock of it braided carefully with crimson ribbon.

"You girls from the Ninth? From Japan? Come here to help out with Sab?" The girl says in English enthusiastically, a wide, open grin on her face that reminded you immediately of Kyoko. You understand her well enough, but her accent is almost impenetrable, making her very nearly unintelligible. She must have noticed your expression, as she tries to repeat the same in halting Japanese.

Kirika giggles at this, making the girl's cheeks crimson, but despite this she tries again. After a few moments, Malal finally nods, replying in perfect, unaccented English.

"From the Ninth, yes. Totally Awesome Sweet Alabama Liquid Snake, I presume? And yes, we're here to help out with the situation regarding Sabrina Blackburn." She holds out a gloved hand, and the American is all too happy to take it, apparently eager to make a good first impression herself as well as dispel the awkwardness. "This is Kirika Kure, our Eversor Rank Leader, and her prodigy, Miki Sayaka."

"Oh! Pleased to meet you, then, Curry, Mickey!" The girl named after what sounds like a super-deadly designer drug grins at the both of you, before turning back to the Culexus. "Miss Malal, I think? Did I say that right? Oh, and please call me Mary Sue, that's just my codename, hahaha!"

Totally Awesome Sweet Alabama Liquid Snake?

...Curry? MICKEY?

. . .Wait, she's the Warmaster in training, and...she's sent to pick the guests up? Isn't that something someone else less important gets sent to do?

"They do things differently here in America," Malal tells you this quietly, before handing it back. "Right, thank you. It checks out."

"Yeah?" Mary nods as she takes back her ID. "O-oh, lemme take care of that for ya!" She reaches for the luggage, and you glance at Malal for help. She only nods here - and you take it as permission to indulge the American, passing the luggage to her.

...For a indicare, you were expecting her to almost drop the hardsuit. Even if this is America, Vindicares aren't usually trained for physical strength.

She carried it with no trouble at all, stuffing it into the car's trunk as if the luggage was filled with air - and soon after that she ushers all three of you into the car. Malal, as always, takes shotgun, while you and Kirika slide into the back seat. In no time flat, you're now being driven into Santa Destroy proper, towards the Eighth Officio Headquarters.

"Ah, thank God you guys got here just in time!" The American Warmaster in training seems eager, as with all things, to fill the silence of the car. "Sab's gettin' to be too much for th' Silent Room t'handle! She's puttin' holes in the walls already! The sooner we get her into that hardsuit, the sooner can relax!"

"That's what we're here for," Malal says smoothly. "How is Miss Marigold, by the way?"

"Tendin' to her garden, that's all she does now." Mary replies quickly enough, although with a note of clear disappointment. "Rest of the Officio's takin' her voluntary retirement hard, but she says it's time for her to settle down, or somethin'."

Voluntary retirement, huh...?

"That sounds awfully familiar." Malal turns to look at you pointedly, and you look away after a moment.

"It does? Huh. Well, I dunno." The American's considerate enough to sense the lull in the conversation. "Oh, hey, Mickey! Miss Malal here told us it's your first time here in America! Anything ya wanna ask about or see while you're here? We can probably arrange it if ya want!"

"How gracious of our hosts." Kirika drawls, before grinning at you and gesturing towards Mary. "Mickey, prease."

>"Of the Blessed Lady." Wendy takes another sip from her glass. "...Like you, Kong, I died once before. Shattered soul gem and all that. Dead as a doornail." A sad, wry smile. "And then she brought me back. Sparkled me up a new soul gem. Didn't even feel dead afterwards. Just...hollow, I guess. Cold." The smile disappears. "Tried to hide it, but...yeah. Never worked out."
>You take a sip from your own glass, the soul gem swimming in the alcohol, the bauble gently tinkling against the glass as you drink.
>So she's met you before. Kharn must know who she is, then. And Sayaka. You make a note to ask either of the two about any Wendy that they know of. Kyuubey must know something too, at that.

I don't really think a soul gem can BE "empty." My understanding is that it doesn't HOUSE the soul, it IS the soul, removed from the body and crystallized.

Except Decu already explained in thread that sufficiently skilled culexuses can empty their soul gems and move their souls

The gems aren't really the souls. They are more a phylactery or soul jar. They hold the soul after it has been removed from the person and normally you can't move it again but certain people could

Yet we still get manifestations of her assaulting us and fucking with our shield all the time.

Normal death doesn't seem to apply to the Madokas.

I don't doubt that it is within Malals coding skills to have our phones content transfer wirelessly to a new phone from a backup server should it break. Or that she is using her god powers for the purpose. But I think it's also within the realm of possibility that she is still inside a soul gem.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 07/29/13(Mon)08:23 No.26305437

This is going to be a thing, now, you think. Kirika just putting you on the spot and making you uncomfortable in the company of the Americans. Fine, you think. Fine. You'll play this stupid game, if only to keep Kirika amused long enough for her not to do something even more stupid. Like challenge whoever the Eighth has for an Eversor Rank Leader.

You clear your throat, before asking in slightly-accented English - thank God you had Mami teach you the language, just in case something like this happened - if there could be a chance that you could get a...hat like Mary's, sometime later. You'd like to buy it for someone back home, and she's got a thing for cowboy hats.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

>>26305437

"Oh, cowboy hats?" The Eighth Warmaster-in-Training blinks, before nodding. "Hnn, yeah, I guess we can hack that! Area 51 sells mostly shirts but they probably got hats and stuff! If not, there's always the mall to hit up, we can send someone to pick one up there."

Malal clears her throat, here. "Perhaps after we see to Blackburn, then, Miss Springfield? You did say that it's an urgent situation."

"Oh, right, yeah! Definitely!" The car suddenly gives a swerve as the American makes a sharp turn into what looks like the business center of the city. "Can't keep Sab waitin', that's a fact." She gives a rather embarrassed sort of laugh, before swallowing audibly. "Sorry about that. I...I'm sorta nervous too, if I can be honest. First time I'm meetin' really important overseas folk myself...usually we'd be sendin' our Callidus Prima, since they're trained ta be the most social." Another laugh. "Not someone like me. Usually just get sent when someone or somethin' needs shootin'."

Malal nods after a moment. "We understand, Miss Springfield, and you can relax. We're here to open up the channels of communication between the both of our Officios, not judge each other. And we do appreciate how challenging it is for you - or anyone - to be training as a Warmaster. Rest assured that we won't need any special treatment or anything of the sort during our short time here." It's here she looks back at both you and Kirika. "Right?"

You glance at Kirika, before replying to the affirmative. Kirika merely grunts.

"Hah, that so?" Mary replies, her voice sounding considerably more upbeat than it had been earlier. "Wow, you girls aren't all that bad! And we keep hearin' nightmare stories 'bout the Ninth, really!" Mary makes another turn, but it's considerably smoother than the first. " It's a relief to hear that you're not really gonna try stealin' our skulls and panties after all, stuff like that!"

Steal their skulls...? Panties? What?

>> ☐ Deculture 07/29/13(Mon)08:26 No.26305468

"Kharn," Malal's vox-speaker gives an amused snort. "Don't worry, Miss Springfield. Regardless of our Warmaster's reputation, we're not all that hot on skulls or underwear." A pause. "Most of the time."

"Really?" Mary looks back at you again from the rear view mirror. "So, uh, when does it really come up--"

"When another Officio pisses us off." Kirika replies in a tone slightly resembling that of Mary's native twang. "That's when we're in the mood."

"A-ah. Ahahh. I'll...I'll keep it mind, for sure," Mary laughs nervously. You shoot a glare at Kirika - and the Eversor simply sticks out her tongue at you, before giggling silently.

This is going to be a long two days.

The car ride comes to a stop in front of one of the biggest skyscrapers you've ever seen, and probably the most garish. The extravagant front of it home to a golden statue of a bald eagle with its wings spread in flight, grasping an oversized sherriff's star with the roman numeral VIII engraved upon it. The entire thing serving as a massive capstone to a rather classy fountain.

"They're not really invested in a front, are they?" Malal's vox-speaker crackles as all three of you follow Mary up the stairs leading to the building's lobby. "I guess they really do things differently here."

"What did you expect, Equerry?" Kirika replies as she fastidiously straightens her blouse. "Typical unjustified American arrogance. Typical unjustified American swagger. They show all their cards right at the start of the game, hoping to scare everyone into backing down before their inflated facade pops from too much hot air." It's here that she wipes at her forehead with a handkerchief. "Urgh. Did we really have to do this during their dry season? Couldn't we have done this during their winter?"

"...They don't have a winter here, Kure." Malal replies quietly, as Mary loudly greets the receptionist, and is cheerfully greeted in turn. "It's hot and dry all year round."

"Wonderful! I hate this place already." Kirika groans. "Goodness, I hope their Eversors can at least put up a halfway decent fight. It's been a while since the last exciting one."

"Kure..." Malal growls out a warning. "We're here to make nice, not to kill people."

"It is making nice, Equerry! To us Eversors, it's the nicest thing you could do! Giving a great fight is equivalent to a love letter!" Kirika grins. "Isn't that right, Sayaka-chan? You're eager to show these Americans just how much better we are than them in anything, right? ...Sayaka? Sayaka-chan?"

"Sayaka-chan? Sayaka-chan, are you...are you ignoring ME? HEY!"

You tell Kirika hurriedly that you'll just be a moment. There's just...someone you need to talk to.

"EH? What's--hey! Really!"

Your senior huffs at you, and you catch the tell-tale gleam of light reflected off Malal's visor as she turns to look at you as well. But you ignore both of them as you walk forward, towards the girl with the pink dress and the sunless eyes.

You catch a whiff of...something, as you step closer. A scent both repulsive and tantalizing at the same time - the rotten-egg stink of bloated, decomposing corpses mingled with the tang of horribly-expensive perfume. The shock of it very nearly makes you backpedal, but something forces you to get closer, pulling your forward step by step by step. Until you're close enough to touch her--

"Where's your sword?" The girl asks, her dark, pupilless eyes looking you up and down. "You were supposed to receive a sword! I made it for you, and you're supposed to get it!"

What...? What sword? You haven't commissioned anyone for one, and...does she mean your usual sword?

"And your tail! Why do you still have legs, Sayaka-chan? You're supposed to be some sort of freaky mermaid! What the hell is this?!" She stops a maryjaned-foot in frustration. "Where's your armor? And your ruff that looks like a eighth-grader's art project?! Why are you still in this ugly form, Sayaka-chan?!"

How do you react?

Except we didnt dump her in public. We just elaborated more clearly on something that we already told her.

Telling her off was long overdue and if anything it wouldnt surprise me if Iori came up with the cafe just because she thought we wouldn`t dump her when around people. Women are batshit insane after all, teenage girls even moreso.

Lastly, handling relationships in an awkward manner was perfectly in character for Chiaki.

We had some Chucklefuck-Votes before. Get fucked and Coobie-Barrier were the most prominent.

Dumping Iori and approaching Pinky as Sayaka were none of those so chill your pantsu.

This whole exchange reminds me of an idea I had.

One of the nameless ones 'features' is that he was immune to fate. It comes up when a gambler refuses to play with him and a fortune teller mentions that she can't read his future before refunding his money.

Perhaps the idea Homura's plan was to create a being that was immune to fate, because despite how strong homura got. She was not above fate.

And perhaps this being also can change other people fates just by interacting with them. Sayaka was supposed to go witch soon or at the time Charlotte appeared but because she had to rescue girl A, her fate got changed.

Then again. There is no proof behind his idea. I'm just importing one of the nameless ones characteristics onto Chiaki.

UGLY FORM?

You frown at this, your sudden irritation overriding your sudden confusion. Is this some sort of Big American Joke On The Foreigner? Some sort of punishment game, huh? Because if it is, it's not funny. It's not funny at all! And how the hell did she know about your Halloween costume last year? You were only going as a mermaid because it was the last costume you found in the rent-a-cosplay shop, and Kyoko was into a heavy Disney phase at the time!

The girl's black eyes go wide as she looks up at you, before backpedaling. "What? I...I don't--"

And what's she doing, calling you ugly? Is this the famous warm American Hospitality you've heard so much about? Figures! Upstart magical girls with weird goth eyes calling strangers ugly - TYPICAL AMERICAN LACK OF ETIQUETTE! Not even one goddamn shred of humility! If you'd only known it was this bad, you wouldn't even have volunteered--

"W-wait! Wait! I'm Japanese! I'm not...I'm not from around here!" The pink-haired Magical Girl tries, seemingly cowed in mid-tirade. She shakes her head, taking a breath as she calms down herself.

"Jeez, Sayaka-chan, you could have just told me the date! If Kyoko-chan's still alive, then that means it won't be a while still, hee hee!" She sneers at you. "Nnn, I guess I've got a really skewed sense of time now, huh..."

...What? Kyoko? What about her? What about her still being alive?

Despite yourself - despite swearing that you wouldn't make a scene here, with the reputation of the Ninth at stake - you find yourself moving forward, a hand snatching out to grab a fistful of the girl's frilly blouse and pulling her towards you.

IS SHE THREATENING KYOKO?

"W-wah! No, no! Of course not, Sayaka-chan!" The girl squeaks as she tries to bat at your hand. "O-ow, you're hurting me! It's not going to be my fault! I'll tell you who, but you have to let me down first!"

How do you react?

Lets see

>You can't shake off the feeling that Girl A is just bad news. Bad news for the Officio, bad news for everyone. Yes, Kyoko talked to you about not judging people right off the bat - even if they very nearly blew your head off and instead got your boss all over your hair. But ever since you dragged her comatose ass out of that Barrier - very nearly killing yourself and Mami in the process - you've been having dreams. Dreams of finding yourself in a large concert hall, full of empty seats. Towering over everyone with a horrendously large sword in your hand. Looking down at a tearful Girl A, a grenade in her hand.

If I was to over-analyze things.and assume that all the worlds Decu rights are correct

1.She mentions 'everyone' which could mean that there is more them one person in the room. In the third timeline, homura gathers the entire magical girl party
2. It mentions that girl A/Homura/Chiaki was holding a grenade. From what I remember in the third timeline. Homura used time stop to cover oktavia with bombs like a christmas tree and then pressed on a detonator which killed her.
3. However the only thing that is against this being in the third timeline is that the 3rd timeline Oktavia von Seckendorff had two swords instead of one.

You let her back down, enough that her feet can touch the floor again - but you keep your hold on her, even tightening it so as to make sure she can't suddenly run away. You tell her that you're officially not in the mood to fuck around - so she should talk, and talk fast. Who's going to get Kyoko killed?

"T-two! Two of them!" The girl in your grasp gasps, her own gloved fingers trying to worry at your own. "The first one has no name, but you've given her one already!" She struggles to pull herself free. "The other one...the other one is someone who you secretly hate, but recognize as your superior!"

What? Someone who doesn't have a name, but you've given her one? And someone you hate, but...

You tighten your grip on her. Enough of this mystic crap! You want names, and you'll get them now!

It's here that the pink-haired girl suddenly stops struggling, before narrowing her eyes at you. "Goodness, Sayaka-chan. I've forgotten how much of an absolute BITCH you can be." It's with a disgustingly fluid and almost boneless grace that she worms her way out of your grasp, the fabric untangling itself from your fingers as she skips away. "This is why you turn into a fucking WITCH every timeline, I guess! Serves you right for being Bitch-Emperor of Bitchkind!"

What? Turning into a Witch? Every timeline?

What the fuck did Kirika put in that drink?...Hey, you're not finished with her yet!

"But I'm finished with you, Sayaka-chan!" The girl calls back at you as she seems to fade away with every step. "Don't worry, though! You'll see me again real soon, ahahaha!"

You growl at her to get back here, stepping forward - before finding yourself hitting a painting in front of you, facefirst. You step back at this, rubbing your forehead - and it's then that you feel a chill stab up your spine as a gloved hand clamps upon your shoulder.

"Sayaka?" You hear Malal's vox-speaker twist all warmth from her concerned voice. "You alright? What's wrong?"

Nothing! Nothing, you were just talking to a girl here! One of the Eighth's Magical Girls! Pink hair and everything, flawless Japanese! She's...

"Huh?" You hear Mary's voice pipe up beside you. "Ain't no one else here but us." A moment. "Er...maybe it's the heat, yeah? Heat exhaustion's pretty common here, you folk probably aren't used to this kinda weather--"

No! No, you saw a girl here! And she was talking about Kyoko! She--

"Sayaka-chan, you're going crazy." Kirika's voice joins the peanut gallery. "Pink-haired girl? You were talking to a PAINTING?"

What fucking painting? A girl, not a goddamn--

Your senior points past your shoulder, and you follow her - turning to see the painting that you headbutted earlier.

It's an expensive-looking oil painting of a girl with long pink hair, tied off into two long twintails with white bows. Her grand white gown flowing down her shoulders, her waist, past her feet. Bringing light to the darkness surrounding her as a brilliant pair of wings unfold from her back.

It's...it's...she doesn't look the same, but it's her...

"Christ, Sayaka. You should've told me that you were this much of a lightweight, you know." Kirika shakes her head, the disappointment in her voice a rich, thick sludge. "Not even an entire glass. Disgraceful."

How do you react?

Except not really. It basically means that we will use Kirikasword to stab the shit out of Kyoko should we decide to use it.

If this happened back in the past it also means that Sallaka was to dense to figure out that Pinky meant Chiaki otherwise I´m pretty sure she would have given Chiaki more than just some flak.

Also, I don`t think we mentioned Pinky when explaining to our friends that the golden weapons are bad and why they are bad.

I'm action on the knowledge that she is a hothead. In this timeline as well as the anime one.

I actually didn't vote for anything this time around, I am just trying to validate the choice that I think is going to win. I think she should say something like, "I'm fine, I'm ready to eviscerate some magical girls now." With a little bit of venom injected into her tone, just a little. But it's a bit late for that.

You force yourself not to say anything...too disrespectful to your senior, although you've spat hatred at someone's face for much less. You know what you saw, you know what you heard. It wasn't some goddamn hallucination or vision! That girl, she was talking about you Witching out after--

"Alright, Sayaka. Relax." Malal moves just so that she's blocking Kirika from your view, interposing herself between the both of you. All while keeping a hand on your shoulder. "Just hold on for a moment, okay? We don't think you're crazy. Miss Springfield, can you get us some cold water, please?."

"O-oh! Sure, right away!" The Eighth's Warmaster-in-training runs back towards the receptionist, her spurred boots clinking with every hurried step. You hear Kirika scoff loudly, murmuring under her breath, before turning away and crossing her hands under her chest.

"Just breathe, Sayaka. Inhale, exhale. Slowly, deeply. Focus on my voice and nothing more." The Culexus' voice, despite her vox speaker corrupting it utterly, has a hypnotic calming effect, and you feel the tension in your body slowly dissipate. "Feel better? Alright. Tell me what you saw, and what you heard."

You do so, just as Mary comes running back, an ice-cold bottle of water in her hand. You thank her for it as you twist the cap off, taking sips every now and then as you murmur to Malal just what happened. What the girl looked like. What the girl told you about Kyoko, and...what she thought you were.

...You don't tell her about Kyoko's would-be murderers, though. That you keep to yourself. You don't...want to sound crazier than you probably already do.

And on the off-chance she was telling the truth, you didn't want one of your prime suspects to know.

"...Right. I'm not going to say you're crazy, but Mary's right. Heat does crazy things to your perception." You open your mouth to protest, but Malal holds up a hand. "No, all I'm saying is that it's possible. I'm not saying that it was. But you haven't eaten anything since the flight, and you haven't drunken anything except a half glass of whisky. It's not just the heat, but a combination of all those things." She shrugs. "Again, we don't know for sure, but I'm just trying to offer a plausible explanation."

...Well, you did sleep through the in-flight meals...

"You're actually lucky you did," Kirika grumbles, not turning back to look at you. "Airplane food never fails to taste like anything but garbage."

"Well, I liked the fruit plate." Malal replies, before turning back to you. "But don't worry about Kyoko. She's not currently in active duty, right? Just training the FNGs. If you like, I'll make some calls and have security increased in HQ to be safe. How about that?"

That'd...well. That'd certainly help.

"Alright. I'll do that, then." The Culexus nods at the water bottle in your hand. "Finish that, and then I want you to go to their cafeteria and get something to eat. I'll have Mary send someone over to fetch you then, because I'll need your help to put the hardsuit on Sabrina. Do you understand?"

...Yeah. Yeah, you get it.

After more jabs from Kirika about crash dieting and Malal basically telling her to shut up, you part ways with them temporarily, with you heading towards the cafeteria while they went on ahead to the Silent Room Department. Mary's directions were straightforward enough - just a short elevator ride and a few doors to walk past - and soon you find yourself in a large cafeteria hall, full of Magical Girls getting their lunch in the noisiest racket ever.

You pointedly ignore the fact that the racket suddenly stops - and resumes in hushed tones as you step into the hall, making an unhurried beeline towards the food line. Every table you pass has its occupants turning their head to follow you, some with curious glances, others with narrowed eyes. The scent of fried, oily western food thick in the air, along with the saccharine-sweet carbonation of different flavors of soda.

You don't mind this at all, because you're too fucking busy turning over in your mind what the girl said to you.

The first one you're not sure about, but the other...either it's Kharn, or Kirika. Kharn could be annoying, but she's never lifted a hand against Kyoko - you don't see the Warmaster even thinking about it. Kirika, though...maybe. She'd said as such a few times, during sparring - how she hated Kyoko for distracting you, for making you soft. Making you weak.

You shake your head as you glance down at the food available. If it was Kirika, then...it'd only be a question of catching her unaware and off-guard long enough to push a sword into her cackling face. Easy enough, if not for the fact that the Eversor Rank Leader never was unaware or off-guard. Ever. As if she never slept.

Choosing the least likely to clog up your arteries - pointing at a rather miserable salad and a helping of gravy-drowned mashed potatoes, along with a glass of what the locals call Iced Lemon Tea but is actually a kilogram of sugar dissolved in lightly flavored water - you carry your tray towards the only empty table in the joint.

Sliding into the booth seat, you've barely picked up your spoon to start at your potatoes when a group of Magical Girls from the table across make their approach. Their leader, a blonde-haired girl with a nasty smirk and a bandolier of knives strapped across her chest - leans forward, her hands on the table.

"You ain't from here, ain'tcha?" She drawls, her accent bordering on the ridiculous. "This table's reserved, stranger. Best get out before the real owners come 'round an' see a filthy Jap sparklie eatin' at their place."

Jap...Jap sparklie? No, you're not in the best moods, but that shit is hilarious. You look up at them, and tell them neatly in English that you won't take long. You just need to eat, and then you'll be out of their hair--

"We said this table's reserved, BITCH!" The leader howls, slapping your iced tea towards you - causing the sugary, ice-cold liquid to topple backward and spill down your blouse. Down your jeans. Soaking you to the fucking bone, giving everything a cold, sticky feeling. "NOW GET THE FUCK OUT!"

This....this Officio.

Is there a corporate hierarchy for the Officio's? Like, do they have varying levels of corporate pull depending on their number?
The First Officio is the effective Home Branch, or at least, considered the representative of the Incubator's home planet, and is the most powerful of the Officio's.
But is the Fifth more important or powerful than the Fifteenth, by its nature of being the Fifth?

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/02/13(Fri)08:59 No.26388898

One year and eight months ago, you were a Magical Girl. Sent over for a typical delivery mission to the Eighth Officio in America. Currently, you're trying to get some food inside you, until something happened that made you feel like you're back in Middle School, again.

Trying your best to hunker down and eat your lunch without attracting too much attention. Friendless and alone at that table in the corner of the packed cafeteria, everyone else - including your own classmates - afraid to even so much as wave at you, for fear of being associated with the transfer student.

The LOSER. The NERD. The weird kid whose family didn't even have enough money for a school laptop, who saved every yen she could spare so she could commute to the record store downtown. To listen to demo CDs, all afternoon, until it was either closing time or the store's owner finally took notice and ushered her out.

You're not that kid anymore, but you recognize deja vu when it's all but cackling right in front of your face, after drenching you in the crotch with the ice-cold glass of icy, lemon-flavored realization.

This has happened to you before. This exact same situation.

The only difference was that back then, you were just a clumsy, tall rail of a girl who liked music too much, and your assailants a group of particularly-nasty upperclassman looking to make themselves feel better by stomping on the new kid. And when they knocked your soda over into your lap, you merely apologized and cried as they laughed.

But you're no longer in middle school, now. You're not even in Japan anymore. And no longer just a harmless, bullied student, but someone who could, if they put their mind to it - take a tank shell right in the chest, keep moving, and then cut in half the tank that had the temerity to shoot you.

And you're not even left handed.

A fact that probably would be lost to your current aggressors at the moment - seeing as it's that same hand you reached up with and grabbed a handful of the smirking Eighth Officio member's hair. Using that as purchase to jerk her head down and forward - right into the deadly headbutt you've practiced a thousand times since then. The headbutt your friend and one-time savior taught you. A pink-haired friend, loud and cheerful and rough around the edges, who greeted you with a grin as you passed by the convenience store she was squatting in front of, a cigarette pinched between thumb and forefinger.

...You don't really know what happened to her, though. She just disappeared all of a sudden, during your second year. She stopped showing up at the convenience store, or any of the other places you've seen her loiter around in.

Vanished, just like that. And no one seemed to remember her or her name.

Except you, of course. You remember her name.

Kaneda.

You also remember, of course, how she advised you to keep hold of the person whose face you've just slammed your forehead into, and to use that hold to follow up.

And that's exactly what you did. Right after savoring the sound - and sensation - of the girl's nose breaking in the impact. Sure, it stung, and the headbutt did make your ears ring - but you were already moving, pulling the girl downward again as you stood up. Driving her face down into your plate of barely-touched mashed potatoes. The girl in your grasp squawking in pain and rage, spitting curses this way and that before being cut off in a wet, mashed squelch.

Yes, this could be considered puerile, immature by your standards. Taking the low road, so to speak, a thing you've lectured your fellow Eversors for.

But you don't really care about that. Not right now.

"An' when she's sufferin' the indignity of havin' her face ground into the table, that's when you give her what little left of her dignity back, an' throw her to her friends," You could hear her voice lecturing you in that thick Kansai accent she had. "'Ain't really right to hold on longer'n that. After that, well...it's up to you. Let 'er lick 'er wounds and slink away with her support group, or...y'know. Give her another opportunity to embarrass herself by throwin' down the gauntlet. One on one."

"And then?" You asked her, eyes wide, voice hoarse from crying too much.

She grinned at you. "An' then you have fun."

You didn't even need to transform, but you wanted to make a point. A single thought had your soaked, sticky clothes replaced by your costume - fresh, crisp, and smelling of mint and promised bloodshed - the energy gathered by the transformation released in a thunderclap of pressure, knocking over other glasses and billowing skirts and hair. With one hand still keeping your victim's head firmly mashed against your plate, you bite into a gloved finger, ripping off the magically-created white silk and grasping it flat against your palm.

The moment you pull the girl's head back up - her face covered with clumps of processed, buttery potato - it's then that you deliver a roundhouse slap with your degloved hand, putting your entire upper body into the rotation. Your bare hand making a satisfying CRACK of a noise as it connects, sending the girl flying and into her clique - all of whom seem commendably quick-witted and loyal enough to catch her. She stands up, nose bloody, face coated in artificial butter - and you glove sticking to her reddened cheek, an adhesive palmprint of a bitchslap.

"You...you rice-eating, raw fish-huffing WHORE of a sparkle bitch," She spits, hand going to her own weapons. "You can't fucking DO that to me--"

"Satisfaction." You cut her off, growling out the single word in the now-deafening silence of the cafeteria. "I demand satisfaction."

Then.

"Fight." It started as a murmur from across the cafeteria. "Fight." The single word, spoken in English, starts to catch on to the rest. "Fight. Fight. Fight." A few moments more, and it's now being shouted, a single word mantra, a roared taunt, the baying of blood.

She can deal with that afterwards. Sayaka can cut pain receptors down, though as Kyubey said, it "makes you slower to react". An easy kill is simply to get stabbed, make sure nothing too vital is hit, and stab them back more securely while their weapon's engaged.

It's fine as long as long as you care more over stabbing the fuck out of the other guy more than getting stabbed.

Uh wasnt Malal named Kanade Madoka not Kaneda?
Does this mean that there are two shorthaired badass Meducas running around this timeline?

And if Decu just had a typo then all the Implications make my head overheat.

I mean, god damnit Malal, why did you never tell Sallaka? Just like taking Kirika along with you, this is one of the decisions that are Kharn-Levels of stupid!

Also, lets sum that up: This worlds Kanade Madoka made a wish that turned her not into god, but into Psyker-Freakshow in a leathersuit, she is the right hand of Kharn whose lust for battles is only diminished by her lust for pantsu and may or may not have had a secret crush on Kharn in the past before she was killed by a possibly crazy or just plain retarded monster Kharn just like the majority of the Culexus-Hikis to do.. stuff, which only Kharn survived who continued to be pantsu-on-head retarded even after being shoved off to Siberia.

Eh, Sayaka isn't at all fond of Kharn. Get something for Mami instead. It'll be thoughtful and nice.

Also, Malal's secret is probably because the costume. Considering that Chiaki found the costume familiar when looking at the photograph, it's safe to assume that Madoka's costume remained unchanged under the Culexus suitin this universe.

Kinda wanna see flustered and angry Malal in her default costume now, haha

Her wish was very different from any of her cannon wishes. She had a lot of time to think about it.

From the 83rd thread:
>"Dreams," Malal explains, tapping her temple with a gloved finger. "Always got them ever since I was a kid. Not the sort you get from eating too much before bedtime, stuff like that - but really detailed ones. Dreamed of myself in that getup, and I thought to myself how silly it is. Fighting monsters in a DRESS? Yeah, no thanks. So when the mutant cat came to me with the contract, I knew what wish to make. How to make it, too." She smiles again, seemingly full of pride.

We're talking about close to a thousand Megucas from one Officio alone, with ten (or was it twelve?) Officios.

Even if the numbers vary between those, it'd still make for a heck of a lot of Megucas to keep supplied with Grief Seeds, which may not cut it with simple hunting unless you've got witches up the wazoo.

I still think he's "factory making" those grief seeds, so to speak.

In major japanese cities where there are large enough populations for witches to congregate and feed. 1 seed ever 2 weeks at the least for each girl maybe? that is a lot. a lot of witch victims. a lot of grim dark.

This is actually something he didnt have anything to do with. In the series it was heavily implied that the wishes were fueled by your Karma and this is why your wish always came back to fuck you over: Because it created a karmic imbalance.

Basically: The more unhappiness in your life = the more powerful your negative karma = The more powerful your wish = the more powerful the backlash.

This is what was implied by the Mutant-Spacecat in the series, that Megucas fuck themselves over by making a wish when unhappy and the Incubators just use them to harvest the karmic energy.

>Oh, as for Q and A, How does Kyubey and the other officios get enough Grief Seeds to support all of their magical girls? Do the coobs just suck the despair out and reuse the same grief seeds, or are there just that many witches running around to kill? Is it just one officio that mainly focuses on killing witches and they sell excess Grief Seeds to other Incubators?

>Part of the answer is secret, but I'll tell you what I can.
>The part about recycling grief seeds is correct, but there are witches all over the world to fight, yes. There's also the deal with Officios having an active duty roster - at any one time, only a fraction of the Magical Girls in an Officio are using their Soul Gems. The rest are going about their daily lives, untransformed and not accruing any 'despair' but still earning money by doing other mundane assignments (such as research, clerk work, or even community service). There is also one Officio that is dedicated completely to hunting witches, but we'll get to that soon.

Your pink-haired friend - your only friend during Middle School, at that - seemed to have a lot of wisdom and experience, even when she looked younger than you by a few years at least. She was way shorter than you, anyway. And her hair was cut in a rather boyish style that you always thought looked cute on her, despite how much it made her look like...well, a boy.

With the stuff she talked about and the things she taught you...she might as well have been.

Besides teaching you how to properly headbutt someone without hurting yourself too much - she also taught you how to play the crowd you'd be attracting if you took action. She knew that you didn't really have that kind of violence in you back then, besides that one surprise attack - and you'd inevitably get ganged up on if you let her recover.

This was, of course, the same situation back then. As confident as you were about your abilities - you have no doubt that you could easily reave this cafeteria clean of enemy heartbeats if they let you get a blade each in both hands - but you remember that you're not Kharn. You're not Kirika. You hold yourself to a different ideal, even if it was a constant uphill battle.

Kaneda taught you to intimidate. To not resort to violence - and murder - the first opportunity that presents itself. Looking dangerous is just the same as being dangerous - the only difference was that the former tended to involve much less needless bloodshed. Much less needless dying.

You will not be the first to start a war between two Officios. You will not be the one to spoil this first meeting. You will not have that kind of mark on your record, and on your conscience.

So, like you've learned - you're going to play the crowd.

"Well?" You ask the girl softly, gently, your voice carrying across the cafeteria despite the din. The shouting dwindles, then stops, the pregnant silence slamming down hard on the bloodthirsty crowd. "Are you a bitch or a coward?"

The crowd's jeers and catcalls make the girl's potato-ensmeared face redden. Her hand still on her holstered weapon, the joints of her glove creaking with how tightly she's squeezing on the grip. You could see it in her body language - she wants to do this, but at the same time she's...hesitant. Unwilling. Only now recognizing just what she's done, and is completely flabbergasted that you've managed to turn her entire home team advantage against her.

You'd have let her leave with what little of her dignity remained here, but...well. She did ruin your clothes. Clothes that Kyoko bought for you, on the rare occassions she went with you during a shopping trip.

Stepping forward amidst the jeers - the girl immediately backing away and bumping against one of her friends - you thrust your gloved hand right into a discarded slice of strawberry cake. You take hold of a familiar grip, before drawing it out in a slow, silken hiss. The brilliant blade of one of your manifested swords so pure, so sharp, that it sang as its edge cut the very air that you dragged it through.

"She's got a sword!" One of the Eighth's girls gasp, and the chanting starts again. Apparently thinking that you're about to turn this little encounter into a bloodbath.

Americans.

The chant stops dead again as you throw the blade over to the girl - a mere flick of your wrist sending it spearing at a downward angle, stabbing right into the floor between the girl's booted feet.

The moment she looks up at you is the moment you spread your arms open.

"You know what? Here. Take the first shot."

You couldn't help but grin the grin Kaneda had flashed you, once, before walking up and punching your bully right in the teeth.

"Take that sword. Cut me anywhere you want. And don't hold back."

There's a moment of stunned silence before the entire cafeteria explodes in a long, loud roar of cheering.

"Play the crowd, Sayaka-chan. Anyone can win a fight, but winning the crowd? You can get your ass beaten to a pulp and they'd cheer for you no matter what. And whoever had the balls to fuck with you won't even have a face to show her mom."

Amidst the cheering, it's here that the girl finally seems to capitulate. She rips your glove off of her cheek, before spitting on it and then throwing it at your feet.

"FUCK YOU, WHORE!" She screams. "YOU'RE NOT WORTH THE FUCKIN' AMMO ANYWAY! I DON'T NEED THIS!"

She leaves in a huff, pushing past the baying crowd, her clique in tow. Just like how your bully stormed out, covering her mouth while grasping the front teeth Kaneda had broken off.

Deja vu indeed.

The entire crowd slowly gets back to what they were doing before the altercation happened - but not without you getting friendly taps on the shoulder and your hand being shaken. You allow this to happen, trying not to appear too relieved that it didn't turn out to be a massacre - and how friendly they seemed to be, even after you practically humiliated one of theirs in their own headquarters. You even got a nod from a particularly-important looking Magical Girl at the far corner of the room - the insignia on her simple-looking black baseball cap, along with her coat, marking her out as the Warmaster of the Seventeenth.

...Well. You also avoided getting into a scrap with a Warmaster AND starting a three-Officio war.

This day is full of surprises.

With things more or less settling down, you walk toward the sword you'd just offered to your opponent, for her to cut your stomach open with - and it's here that you hear a voice behind you. Speaking in perfect, if slightly-accented Japanese.

You tap your fingers against the blade's handle, and it immediately disintegrates into nothing as you turn around, your cape unfurling behind you. Whoever it was wasn't Kirika, and it wasn't the strange girl from earlier.

What greets you is...well, you're not too sure how to describe her?

But the words 'thieving, scheming cat' comes immediately to mind.

No, she's not an actual cat, but if anyone could have such a cat-like expression on their face...she had it. The kind of cat that smiled and purred while you petted it, all the while planning how to best disembowel you in your sleep.

...Same color of hair as Kyoko's, though, just cut in a relatively shoulder-length hairstyle with most of it tied in a neat blue ribbon. A rather slender, shapely frame encased in a brilliant sky-blue...china dress, was it called? Cheongsam or something. Yeah. A thick leather belt, much like Mary's, slung loose over her hips, with some sort of metal rod with buttons and ribbing and wires hanging from a metal ring attached to said belt.

And amber eyes. A darker sort of amber than Mami's own.

A maid for the Tohno family, the family that the game's MC was pseudo disinherited from, and personal servant of the head of the Tohno family.

She is also a scheming, cruel, and heartless plotter on par with Gendo Ikari when she puts her mind to it, and she orchestrates the conflict of three of the five routes in the game

You glance at your ruined...lunch thing, then at your ruined glove, before shaking your head and looking back at the girl. You remark, dryly, that not everyone can be like Kirika Kure - and you say this with such dryness that it's obvious that you would rather throw your own Soul Gem into a blender than be like your rank leader.

The amber-eyed girl in the fetching cheongsam giggles at this. "Hah! A sense of humor, too! And someone frank enough to speak her mind, even if the person she's talking to can easily relay such insubordination to her direct superior!" She crosses her arms underneath her ample chest, staring at you pointedly as if waiting for you to plead for her to look the other way.

You disappoint her then by shruggiing here, returning her look - clearly conveying how little you care about being told on. What's Kirika going to do - demote you? One of her ideas for a disciplinary hearing is for you to fight her barehanded while she used her fucking claws. If you managed to get a hit in without being cut once, you got away with whatever you did scot free. Get even so much as a nick and it was spending a night locked in the Silent Room with three blades sticking out of your stomach.

You've stopped fearing what Kirika Kure can do to you, is what you're trying to get at.

"...You know what? I'll add 'stupidly brave' to your Traits," The girl says, still grinning, and apparently still going on with the RPG terminologies. "It makes me kinda miss home, you know? But then again, I've been here nearly all my life." She holds out a hand. "Amber. Amber Nakajima, Eversor. Miki Sayaka-chan, right?" You glance at her hand for a moment, before reaching out and shaking it. With your bare, ungloved hand. "Mary picked you up earlier, right? Did she make the Mickey Mouse joke yet?"

Yeah. Yeah, she did. And called Kirika a spicy dish that originated from India.

"Hah! I should've known!" Amber giggles. "...Sorry about that. New Warmaster's still a bit new to this, and she's one of those simple types that really don't mean any harm to anyone but has a way of saying the wrong thing without meaning to. A bit naive, but she tries her best. Can't really fault anyone like that, now can you?"

No, you suppose not. ...Wait, so she's actually Japanese?

"Yeah." Amber blinks at you. "I...thought the last name and perfect Japanese would give that away." It's here that she suddenly switches to a stilted, almost stereotypical mockery of your native language - the overly-melodic, overly-elongated vowels of a typical American trying their best to get their tongue to work. "Or should I speaking like this day-soo ka? Nay, nay, Mickey-chawn? Mitsubishi, Sashimi, Nissan?"

"Aw, not even a giggle?" Amber's smile falls. "That usually gets at least a chuckle! Or a sensible chortle!"

It wasn't very funny, anyway.

"Ah, well. Them's the breaks." The red-haired Eversor shrugs, seemingly giving it up for now. "Anyway, I got sent by Malal-chan to pick you up, lead you to where Operation Blackburn's taking place." She grins again. "I was having a bit of trouble picking you out from the other girls, here - we have a few visitors from other Officios too -" Amber nods at the Warmaster from earlier, getting a nod of her own in return. " --but you were kind enough to help out by breaking Cooper-chan's nose and embarrassing her in front of half the Officio."

Well, you didn't come here to start a war, and that bitch shouldn't have started something she couldn't finish. You're glad it helped out, though.

"Hee. Well, I also thought you wouldn't like what they're serving here, so..." She takes something from behind her, and you spot it as soon as she brings it around. "Come on, you can snack on that while we blow this joint."

An apple. Fresh, red, plump. Looks pretty crunchy, too.

The same kind of apples Kyoko loved to chomp on.

She tosses this your way, and you catch it easily. "Here, snack on that. Should help with the dehydration and get you enough sugar for what you'll be doing."

You thank her just as she leads you out of the cafeteria. After buffing it slightly with your new gloves, you take a large bite of the juicy fruit as you follow her deeper into the building itself. Heading towards one of the waiting elevators nearby. Your eyes somehow getting drawn to her rather curvy posterior, enhanced by the tightness of her dress and teased by the high slit of the dress itself. ...It's almost up to her goddamn waist, that slit. Quite a bold fashion statement.

...Probably would look good on Kyoko, though. You make a note to get something like this for her.

You still couldn't help but examine her posterior as the both of you step into the elevator, doors closing behind you. She steps forward to press at one of the many buttons on the lift's control panel.

"It's really nice of you guys to fly all the way here to do this for us, you know. For Sabrina-chan." It's here that her voice loses its sing-song, lively quality - delivered now in a sincere, sombre voice. "Did Mary tell you that even our biggest silent room can't hold her any longer? Sooner or later, either the entire thing's going to give out or she will. One of them, anyway. Either way, it's bad news." She turns to look at you for a moment, before facing forward once more. "Thank you, Sayaka-chan."

How do you react?

[]Don't thank me. It's Malal's idea. I'm just here on an errand.

You take another bite of the apple Amber had given you, chewing for a bit and swallowing - before replying. As much as you appreciate her gratitude - something rare nowadays, anyway - you can't take the credit for this benevolent mission yourself. This is Malal's - the Equerry's - idea, and you're just tagging along on an errand.

...This is a really tasty apple she's given you. Not too sweet, but delightfully crunchy and juicy. It doesn't make you feel like you're eating sand like Washington apples do, either.

"Ah, I see. But still, the fact that you're here...well, it gives me hope that not all of the other Officios are cutthroat and selfish, you know? I'm glad at least some people can still stand to be nice every now and then, even though it doesn't really pay off in the long run." She turns to glance at you again, and she smiles as she sees you eating the apple with gusto. "Tasty, huh? Grew those myself, you know! My own crossbreed, too! Genetically modified to be one hundred percent delicious!"

Really?...You've heard about genetically modified fruit before, but you've always bought organic. It is pretty delicious, though, and...surprisingly, you feel somewhat lighter, more energetic, after polishing it off. You must have been more thirsty and hungry than you thought.

You wipe your gloves on your skirt as you ask her about what she said, earlier. Of course people can still be nice now and then - and what does she mean, it doesn't really pay off in the long run? That's a cynical way of looking at things, isn't it? People are nice not because they want something in return, they're nice because it's the right thing to do, period.

Amber blinks at you, before shaking her head, a small smile curling her lips. "...Hee. Well, don't change or anything, Sayaka-chan. I think we need more Magical Girls like you."

...You shake your head as well. She's not making sense again, but whatever. You're not about to lecture someone else that you've only just met on morality.

You instead ask her what kind of underwearing she's wearing with her dress. Nothing weird, of course, you just want to know.

"Oh~? Sayaka-chan wants to know?" The cat-like expression slides over her face like an automatic mask. "Hnn, well, if it's Sayaka-chan..." Amber simpers, before reaching down with one hand and lifting the hem of her dress. Pulling it up and out of the way, the slit helping here immensely to show you her underwear.

...What the hell?! It's normal, everyday, white underwear!

"What were you expecting?" Amber says innocently, smiling.

Well, for one, you weren't expecting any!

"W-what! How...!" You get the satisfaction, here, of making her blush, her eyes going wide. "That's...that's lewd, you know! You can't go commando in this, everyone would see!"

It's then that her expression turns sly despite her blush, looking at you with a sidelong stare. "Or...or is that what Sayaka-chan wants? Does Sayaka-chan have that kind of taste, wanting me to walk without any underwear whatsoever, for everyone to see everything at the slightest breeze...?"

You blink to reply, before realizing that she'd been closing in on you as the two of you had been talking. Close enough that she's backed you up against the elevator wall. Her soft frame against yours, enough that you can feel her warmth through your own clothes. Smell the milk-scent of her skin.

...HER FACE IS TOO CLOSE. HER FACE. TOO CLOSE.

How do you react?

You're no stranger to unwanted advances yourself, but...for fuck's sake, you didn't even feel her get close to you until it was too late. All but pinning you against the wall of the elevator. Briefly, you contemplate grabbing her by the arm and then slamming her down into the lift floor with a hip throw - that's usually your tactic for anyone who tried to get fresh with you - but again, she was from an Officio that Malal, and therefore the entire Ninth, wanted to make nice with. Some...concessions had to be made.

And she's just teasing anyway, right? ...Right?

It's with both gloved hands, gently resting on her bare shoulders, that you firmly but carefully push her off of you. Telling her that...that you're flattered, yes, but you're taken. You could see how she would have taken what you said earlier the wrong way, though, and you...you apologize for the confusion. You only wanted to know because you were buying the same outfit for your significant other, and you wanted to make sure everything was to spec. You had no desire to have sexual relations of any sort with her--

A look of utter despair and defeat replaces her sultry smile, and Amber hangs her head. "W-why...? I can't...am I going to be lonely the entire time here? I can't even score with someone from my own country...?" A low, mournful wail rises from her throat. "Is my tombstone going to read, 'Here lies Nakajima, She Never Scored'?"

...Well, now. That's a bit harsh! You're sure she'll find someone--

It's here that her shoulders start to shake, as if she'd started sobbing, and you couldn't help but feel sorry. Probably had really slim pickings among the Officio, with only Americans to choose from. Maybe you could--

"Ahahaha! Did...did you really fall for that?!" Gone is the tragic, mournful tone from Amber's voice in an instant as she looks up, all smiles and bright eyes. "Hahaha OH MY GOD YOU DID! OH WOW, the others won't believe me! Lemme just..."

So she's dancing in a chrous line, so she's guarding her while she's changing, so she's having a bath with her, so she's checking out the ball field. It doesn't mean Sayaka wants her dick, just being friendly.

Admit it, when you were in the showers in high school, you looked, you hang out with the guys, horseplayed with towels and shit. Same thing for girls, just cuter, and sexier.

...That wasn't very funny.

You're not going to recount what you did to Amber after that, because it doesn't need repeating, and frankly you're appalled at her. Resorting to that kind of humor...people who can trick other people, acting that way? That's the worst.

The Elevator Ride ends continues in silence, and ends in silence - with Amber clutching at her bottom while walking on ahead. You follow close behind, your cape trailing behind you.

"Did you have to hit me THAT hard, Sayaka-chan? And that many times...?" She murmurs to you, sounding quite petulant.

Just enough to teach her a lesson, you tell her quietly, keeping your eyes firmly set ahead.

Amber pouts at you, before turning away. "Hunh. I'd like to see you try looking so cool when I tell you that I actually got turned on by it."

...You've no reaction to that. Well, you do, but you have the sneaking suspicion that you'd personally lose if you dignify her statement with it.

Anyway. You're supposedly at the very basement of the building - fifty stories underground. Where the most powerful Silent Room of the Officio was placed, designed for high-profile, high-powered prisoners. Legend had it that the Warmaster before Mary - Dahlia Marigold - had wild, berserker rages that warranted her being locked in that particular Silent Room. To calm her down long enough for her Soul Gem to be cleaned. Every single time, a hundred Magical Girls died simply getting her into the room itself.

At the very end of the very long corridor you followed Amber in - you see Malal and Kirika, talking in hushed tones with Mary. The American Warmaster-in-training gesturing at what appears to be a pile of shoddy-looking metal by the massive iron doors leading to the Silent Room. Malal seems to notice you finally, and she nods at you and Amber. Kirika and Mary do the same, the former smiling while the other looks...well, quite sombre.

"I see Nakajima found you." Malal's vox-corrupted voice echoes in the sterile chamber. "Nakajima? How many bodies?"

"None whatsoever. No-kill run, although there was a nosebleed. Other than that..." Amber shakes her head, and somehow this warranted Kirika cursing rather audibly underneath her breath. Reaching into the pockets of her coat, she hands Malal a single hundred-dollar bill.

...Wait. Did they just bet on you...?

"No time for that," Malal cuts you off. "We need to do this as quickly as possible. This Silent Room's Anti-Magic Field is just about to be breached." She hands you what looks like...well, it looks like a heavy obsidian collar, solid black except for a single hinge, with a rubberized inner edge. There are faint lines of crimson light etching themselves on the black metal. "This is the main and most important component of the modified Culexus Suit. Lengthy explanations aside, this is what regulates a Culexus' abilities. It's modified to match hers exactly, but it won't turn on unless it's properly calibrated."

Okay. So why isn't it being calibrated now?

"Because it needs to be worn by the user to calibrate it." Kirika cuts in, a sadistic smile curling her lips and baring her teeth. "This is where you come in, Sayaka-chan. You'll be going in there and putting the collar on Sabrina-chan."

Wait a fucking minute. This Sabrina person just melts people's faces off, doesn't she? If you go in there, you've got no Magic! And thus, no regeneration!

"That's why we're going to turn it off." Malal replies patiently. "She's...well, I won't sugarcoat things, but she's been in there for a year. She's probably gone crazy, maybe even feral. We can fix that easily, but we need to get this first around her neck." She holds up the collar, again. "Open it like this, then fasten it like so. Simple, right?

Yeah. Simple enough. But wait, why couldn't Malal just go with you, then?

Malal is about to reply, before Kirika cuts in again. "Isn't it obvious, Miki? The Equerry's too valuable to risk being killed here. Without her, the entire Ninth would go ass-upwards--"

"--I was about to reply that I'll be guarding the entrance if she tries to escape." Malal finishes sourly. "There's a possibility she'll fight too much and we can't get the collar on her. If she gets out of here, well...it'd be like bringing in an infection vector of flesh-eating bacteria into a playpen full of babies. The rest of the world'll be slime in their empty shoes if she gets out. I'll take her out before she can even cross the treshold." It's here that you could somehow feel Malal smiling at you. "I'd like for us not to et to that stage, though - so try your best, Sayaka."

"Oh, don't be such a baby, Miki. You're the strongest regenerator we got. You probably won't even break a sweat." Kirika grins as she leans back on the corridor's walls, frilly-sleeved arms folded underneath her chest. "This'll be child's play for you."

Well, it's just that you've never encountered something like this before. Burns, sure. Dismemberment, sure. But this kind of thing? Never.

"It's almost like burning in a way, I guess," Amber murmurs. "Just not without the fire and the happy, warm feelings. Everything just starts to melt or fizzle out into a soft, smelly heap of mush."

Wonderful. ...So do you have any equipment to help you at least?

"Oh, yeah, of course!" Mary nods, before pointing to the loose pile of metal earlier. "We were gonna give you bomb squad armor, but the last one disintegrated after the last time we tried. That's all we got left. Should help in getting closer to her at least!"

What? All they had left is some misshapen sheets of iron--

...Wait. No. They're not just loose metal - they're actually a serviceable suit of armor. The greaves, the gauntlets are sort of workable, and the chestplate would fit you, you think. The only thing you're not sure about is the helmet - it looks like someone was trying to install too many circular eye holes and didn't stop at 'two'. The visor eyeholes, molded to look like gaping pits or something, seem to take up nearly eighty percent of the actual helmet, bringing to mind a looming monstrous creature from the deep. The grinning mouth grill, now trapped in an eternal grimace, doesn't help things much.

"Like it?" Mary grins, completely misreading your reaction. Or disappointment. "It's not typical metal, so it should take a few minutes or so for Sab to eat through it. ...Well, dependin' on her state of mind, anyway."

It's here that Amber looks down at the disassembled knight armor instead. "...Hey! Wait a minute, you stole that from my lab!"

"Yeah, I...did?" Mary blinks slowly at Amber, before turning back to you. "Anyway, Mickey, just put 'em on. Malal and I'll help you get some of the trickier bits."

"But that's from my lab!" Amber protests. "That's a collector's item, you know! I stole that off someone rich!"

"Well, whatever it was, it's gonna help us get Sabrina back," Mary says, seemingly determined for some reason. "I promised her. The Officio promised her. And I'm not about to start my fuckin' carreer breakin' promises." She looks at you. "Mickey, uh...I'll just go right out and say it. This'll really hurt. Sabrina ain't here in Sub Zero just because she gets cranky. I'm askin' you to step into a world of pain, here." She takes a deep breath. "If...if you don't want to..."

Both Malal, Kirika and Amber are surprisingly silent as Mary waits for your answer. You glance at the Silent Room doors, before shaking your head and picking up the helmet from the disassembled pile of plate armor.

You'll do it, of course. You can't say no, not now, and less so when she told you about the promise. You're not about to break someone else's promise, too, even if you were to carry it out for them.

That's not the kind of person you wished to be, after all.

"...What did you wish to be, Mickey?" Mary asks, then, as you take the armor and start putting it on yourself. You've never seen this kind of armor before, but...somehow, you know how to wear it. What piece goes where. How to cinch the fiddly leather straps that secure everything in place.

With the helmet in place - the visor up to let you see more, before entering the Silent Room - and the Culexus hardsuit collar gripped tightly in one hand, you chuckle a reply.

You wished to be a hero.

Isn't that what Magical Girls are supposed to be?

I know there's some serious non linearity in the time lines here, but isn't this a flashback? Or is it an alternate timeline compared to the Ruri arc?

What if this is actually a timeline post Ruri and post another reset? One were Faust got upset things didn't turn out the way she wanted or expected, so she reset it and tried to set things according to her canon, namely Sayaka being Oktavia, Mami deceased (we haven't seen a single mention of Mami in this flashback(?)) now that I think of it?

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/04/13(Sun)08:21 No.26427722

One year and eight months ago, you were a Magical Girl.

Sent to visit the Eighth Officio in America, along with the Equerry of the Ninth and your direct superior.

You'd expected this to be just a simple milk run. Just be the requisite honor guard for the Equerry, not that she needed guarding in the first place. A decent chance to get out of Mitakihara and go sightseeing, bring back a couple of souvenirs for your significant other.

As it turned out, it was completely the opposite.

>>26427722

You didn't expect the weather being so fucked up that you hallucinated a pink-haired girl with black pits for eyes cackling about how Kyoko was going to die in the immediate future. You didn't expect being reminded how shitty your school life was, to the point that you very nearly started an war between three Officios - including your own.

You didn't expect being asked to go into a deactivated Silent Room, where a Magical Girl was being caged like an animal. A crazed animal that could corrode anything metal and flesh just by being in the same vicinity. To get close enough to her to slap a Culexus collar around her neck, which would...make her easier to deal with, or something. You're not too sure about the particulars, there, but that's what you've been told.

But of all the things you didn't anticipate, it's wearing this...strange suit of armor that they've stolen from god knows where, and actually being comfortable in it. As if you've worn it before, somehow. As if it was made to fit you exactly, molded to your own shape.

It's probably just a convenient coincidence, though. You probably would have been weirded out by it, how the armor seemed to fit you like a glove, if you were just as superstitious and irrational as most of your fellow Magical Girls. You've heard some of them murmur prayers and appeals to a 'Blessed Lady', whispering her name for luck just before throwing themselves into the fray. Nothing harmful, all told, but it spoke of a reliance to something ethereal, something unknowable - something that probably doesn't exist.

...Then again, you've seen weirder things in your tour of duty. Things that really have no right to exist, no matter how much Kyuubey reassures you that they're nothing to worry about. There were also your dreams, which you've never really taken seriously, despite them being so frighteningly real that you stayed awake for nearly a week after a particularly-harrowing one.

>>26427727

Afraid that if you closed your eyes, you'd see Kyoko impaled at the end of your sword again, her limp form twitching around the blade as it cut into her spine.

Maybe...maybe a Blessed Lady isn't really that far fetched, considering you usually fought a twisted manifestation of despair incarnate two, maybe three times a week.

Maybe it wasn't such a sign of weakness to at least say something. If she didn't exist, fine, all you wasted was a breath and a couple of words you won't be needing back.

But if she's real...well, it probably coudn't hurt. May at least improve your chances of getting back to Kyoko in one piece.

Not a bad tradeoff, then.

"Alright, Sayaka, do you hear me?" Malal's vox-corrupted voice is scratchy through the headset you're now wearing underneath the helmet. "Checking to see if we've got comms straightened out."

You reply to the affirmative as you stand in front of the inner entrance leading into Sub Zero, the Eighth's biggest Silent Room. Malal, Totally Awesome Sweet Alabama Liquid Snake, and Amber are outside the outer entrance, which had slammed closed and locked behind you earlier with the sepuchral finality of a heavy coffin door being shut.

"Good. Now, you've got the collar with you, right? And the two Grief Seeds in case you need them?"

Yes. You've got them. Malal saw you place them in your inventory. Reckless as you've sometimes been, you're not as stupid as to get into this kind of thing without a spare Grief Seed or two.

"Good. Now, the Anti-Magic Field for the Silent Room proper is still up. The moment we open the inner door is the moment we're turning it off completely. So you need to get inside the room as quickly as you can, because we'll only be giving you a couple of moments before we close it again. This is in case Sabrina gets it into her mind to try and break out."

>>26427729

Of course. Perfectly logical. It's what you would do, anyway.

"...Right." A moment of seeming hesitation from the Equerry. "Is...is there anything you'd like to say before we get this op started, Sayaka?"

What, your last words? Your chuckle echoes around the metal helmet you've clamped down on your skull. What does she think this is, some third-rate anime or soap opera?

"...No. I'm just trying to ask you if you've got a message to pass to someone, just in case."

You roll your pauldron-encased shoulders, trying to get used to the armor just a bit more. Sure, this is all nice and snug and maybe comfortable, but you're not going to be able to move as quickly or as fluidly as you could with just your costume.

Just in case, huh...?

How do you respond?

You bounce on your feet a couple of times, trying to get rid of the tension in your frame, amused at how much of a din you're making. With all the armor plates banging around with your every move, you sound like a fucking kitchen during an earthquake.

"Sayaka? Sayaka, are you there? Mary, are you sure the Anti-Magic Field is off where Sayaka is? I can't--" You hear Malal panic slightly on air, and you chuckle again before replying.

No, no last words, you say with a grin hidden by your helmet's faceplate. Nothing you can't tell the person concerned in person when you come back - and besides, even if you were that much inclined to leave a message, it's none of their business anyway.

"...Alright, Sayaka. We'll open the door and shut down the field on your mark. Once you've got her collar on, just send a signal and we'll get you out of there. Good hunting--"

There's a sudden fumble of microphones at the other end, followed by a muffled vox-corrupted squawk of surprise - and suddenly, Mary Sue's voice comes on.

"Sorry 'bout that. Sorry, sorry...Mickey!" She all but shouts your stupid nickname into your ear, making you wince. "I'm just, uh, I meant what I said earlier! If you don't want to got through with this, it's okay to chicken out! We'll just send someone else--"

What? She's telling you this now? ...No, seriously, it's fine. For fuck's sake, you already told her in the coolest way possible. Is she trying to upstage you or something? ...Goddamn americans, really can't read the mood...

"Hahah..! S-sorry, just...t-this really means a lot, ya know. Not just to the Officio an' everyone here, but...to me, too." Mary Sue's voice, excitable and irritatingly cheerful as it is, becomes subdued, low-key. "Whatever happens, Mickey, I owe you one. An' a Springfield never forgets."

What, like an elephant, then?

"Exactly! ...Wait, what? Didja just call me an elephant--"

You shake your helmeted head, before telling Mary to get off the frequency and get Malal back on. Besides, it's too early for any gratitude - you haven't even stepped into the room proper, for fuck's sake.

"Y-yeah. Sorry." A giggle. "Uh, Miss Malal, here you go--" Another series of muffled talking, and the reassuring voice of the Culexus replaces that of the Warmaster in Training. "Right. Before we were unexpectedly interrupted...good luck, Sayaka. The Blessed Lady protects."

...Heh. The Blessed Lady protects, indeed.

You give them the signal, and the metal double doors in front of you unlock themselves with a series of clicks, before sliding apart. Showing nothing inside beyond a misty, smoky darkness.

Well, here goes. You step forward, your new armor clanking with every step. Into the room, into the darkness.

The door behind you slams shut literally a moment after you've cleared the threshold.

Right. Operation Start, indeed.

You walk forward, deeper into the room, making sure to keep your eyes open and your ears sharp. ...As sharp as they could be, anyway, trapped inside a strange helmet that looks like something out of some eldritchian nightmare.

For a Silent Room belonging to the highly-funded, much-lauded Eighth...the insides of Sub Zero resembles that of an untidy, abandoned stockroom.

Even in the horrible lighting conditions - with only a few flickering lights here and there to provide illumination to some of the wide and vast room's corners - you could easily see that Sub Zero didn't start out, exactly, as a holding pen for contracted prisoners.

From the suggestion of what could have been living areas, and the still-disassembled frames of bunk beds, and the rusting lockers...this was supposed to be a Culexus housing facility. For Culexus to be able to enjoy interaction, at least with each other, without fear of making people around them throw up or get an embolism or something.

...As much flak as you give them, as frank you are to their faces that you're uncomfortable around them - you can't help but admire someone who'd sacrifice so much to serve. You're pretty sure they didn't wish for something that'd benefit themselves, as no one would probably wish to live such a cursed existence. No, they probably wished for something so altruistic, so selfless, that they ended up cursing themselves. Their wish benefited someone else completely, with nothing left for them but the karmic check to pay for. Not a wish at all, but a curse.

...Well, that, or they just wanted to be able to wear leather 24/7. Who knew, really?

With nothing but your own breathing at the clanking of your armor as company - and no Sabrina Blackburn spotted so far - you let out a sigh in frustration, before stopping as you see a dark form huddle against the corner of the farthest end of the room. A light flickers above it, making it flinch - revealing itself as a young woman, slightly taller than you, wearing a grimy hospital gown, her dirty ashen-blonde hair hanging down her shoulders in tangled clumps. She seems to be pressing her hands against the metal of the walls, making wet handprints the color of rusting blood.

Visual on the target, you notify Malal. She acknowledges this with a burst of static, before reminding you not to damage her too much. Just to subdue her, nothing more.

Right. Well. You're not melting yet at least, so maybe this could turn out peacefully.

How do you approach Sabrina?

You decide to go for the friendly approach. Hopefully it goes over okay - friendly isn't something you do very often. Or very well, at that.

"Yo!" You raise an armored hand towards her, slowly and carefully, trying your best to be as non-threatening as possible. Your voice sounding weird and hollow from inside the helmet, and spoken in the thin air of the Silent Room. "Sabrina, right? My name's Miki Sayaka, I'm from the Eighth Officio."

The silence in the Silent Room - even if Malal had all but confirmed that the Anti-Magic Field's been turned off - is so thick it's palpable. The girl doesn't even turn around or even move to acknowledge you. You take this as a good sign - at least she's not being aggro, which is the main thing here.

You try to fill the empty air, here. Get her accustomed to hearing you talk. "Listen, I know this armor looks freaky as hell, but I'm here to help you." You pause here, to see if she'd react at all. The girl remains motionless, and you continue. "You wanna leave this room, right? I can help you get out of here--"

"Why?" Sabrina suddenly speaks, her voice rough, hoarse, deep from too much crying, too much screaming. "Why'd they turn it off? I'm hearing their voices again. I-it was fine, it was quiet, before they turned it off."

O...kay. Apparently she wasn't even listening to you.

Probably means the Anti-Magic Field, huh...

"I was okay before they turned it off, I...I couldn't hear them before they turned it off." She rests her head against the blood-smeared wall, her shoulders shaking as she continues to speak - her words tumbling out of her mouth in a panicked, desperate torrent. "W-why'd they turn it off? Please, they need to turn it back on again." Sabrina's voice rises to a keening wail as she bangs her bloodied fists against the metal wall.

"TURN IT ON! PLEASE, TURN IT BACK ON! I DON'T WANNA HEAR THEM AGAIN, PLEASE! TURN THE ROOM BACK ON, I PROMISE I WON'T TRY TO SNEAK OUT AGAIN! I PROMISE TO BE GOOD! PLEASE!"

You step forward, to try and calm the hysterial Magical Girl down - before you catch a whiff of scorched metal. You glance down, and see that the tips of your gauntlets are glowing red, as if you've just stuck your hands into a furnace. You grind thumb and forefinger tip together carefully - and you notice flakes of crimson rust fall down to the ground from the point of contact.

It's not even warm, despite all appearances - but even you know that the metal's being slowly eaten through. You look down at the rest of your suit, and notice the same thing happening to the various points and edges of the armor's plates. Burning, smoking pockmarks here and there, rust flaking off with every movement.

...Shit. Not much time to fuck around, then.

How do you react?

Sabrina is referencing Sabitsuki from .flow, a Yume Nikki clone notable for trying to have some discernable story (although it's still very vague and open to interpretation). The gist is basically as we've seen here, Sabi is host to some form of virulent infection or biological agent that "rusts" everything around her, eventually including her own flesh and mind, and is either pursued or held captive by a squad of gas-masked nurses with violent tendencies.

Malal wasn't kidding when she said that Sabrina might have a few screws loose after her stint here, fine. But this isn't just being slightly unhinged - this is crazy. Pure, undiluted, the sort you don't get involved with. Someone broken hard enough that they're just desperately clinging into whatever scraps of sanity they had left.

...You can't help but feel sorry for Sabrina. No one deserves their Wish to turn around and bite them in the ass like this. In fact, you feel sorry enough that it loops around to being...well, slightly puzzled about the Eighth. About Mary. Surely, even with their often overbearing sentimentality, the Americans would've recognized a lost cause the moment they saw it? That keeping Sabrina locked away like some caged animal was far more inhumane and cruel than just giving her the bullet to the Soul Gem that she deserved? ...You could do that, right now. Grant her the mercy she deserved.

You let out a sigh between gritted teeth. ...No, no time for doubt, not right now. Your orders are to get the stupid collar on her, nothing else. And orders are rarely up for interpretation, no matter how much you wanted them to be.

Pulling out the collar from your inventory - the obsidian ring glowing a faint red, as angular veins of crimson light pulsed across its surface, in time with an unheard heartbeat - it's here that you step forward. Carefully. Cautiously. Slowly, with both your hands raised.

You try to tell her - above her sobbing - that you have something to help with the voices. You just need to put it on her, and the voices'll stop for good. And it won't hurt a bit - it's just some sort of fancy collar, after all. She just has to wear it and it's done. Nothing to be afraid of, right?

"It...it can help?" Sabrina seems to snap out of her crying, turning to look at you with bloodshot eyes. "You...you can make it stop?"

You nod, trying to look as reassuring as you could while wearing a helmet with eyeless, gaping pits for eyes and a fanged, toothy grimace for a mouth. You take another cautious step. And another. Closing the distance between you little by little.

She seems to be calming down, at least. Sneaking a look at your gauntlets, the scorch marks seem to be cooling, no longer glowing red-hot as before. Good. That's good. Maybe this won't be too bad after all. Maybe this'll go off without a hitch--

By the time you spotted the rusted length of metal pipe in her hand, gripped by fingers wrapped in blood-encrusted gauze - it was already being swung towards your face in a brutal arc towards your face. Even with the helmet on, you could tell that this was going to hurt.

And it did. In fact, she had enough force in the blow - a blow she shouldn't have had enough room to gather that much momentum - to send you hurtling backward, the bell-toll of the pipe's impact against the helmet still ringing in your ears. Even with the armor weighing you down, she managed to make you fly. You only had a moment to curse your fucking horrible luck before a rotting wooden bedframe broke your fall, crumbling into soggy, worm-tunneled flinders underneath you.

Only as Sabrina started to stalk towards you, her back hunched as she gripped her rusty pipe in both hands - did you idly realize that her sudden attack had made you lose grip of the collar as well. It would be somewhere in the room, on the ground, in the dark.

Fuck.

"LIAR! YOU...YOU MADE THEM TURN IT OFF, DIDN'T YOU?!" Sabrina shrieked, the unclean edge of insanity making her accusation shrill, scraping painfully against your ears. With surprising agility - almost bestial, feral in how she flung herself on top of you, she brought her pipe down right into your already-dented helmet in another crushing blow. "TELL THEM! TELL THEM TO FUCKING TURN IT BACK ON! TELL THEM IT'S NOT MY FAULT! IT WAS NEVER MY FAULT!"

...Man. That's not even fair at all.

"TELL THEM OR I'LL MELT YOUR OTHER ARM OFF, YOU FUCKING METAL DEMON THING!" Sabrina shrieks again, this time trying to jab the end of her pipe into one of the eye holes of your helmet. ...She's not succeeding, but it'll be a few moments she'll be punching it right through your brain.

How do you react?

Say, are you retarded?

Did you see that she melted our arm off before we even noticed? Are you really that demented that you think getting physical with her will help us of her ability is that fast and potent?

Struggling will only make her freak out more. Right now she thinks she has the upper hand so we can talk to her.

Sweet unbelievable fuck. It's 10am and the thread's still up? Awesome.

I'd like to take this time to point out to everyone theorizing and speculating and so on about the Eighth Officio that ALL KINDS of shit has already been explained, mentioned, described, and covered in Wendy Cooldown's writeups.

You know, those things that used to come after the end of an MGNQ thread that you breezed right past and probably dismissed as pointless faggotry?

http://pastebin.com/u/WendyCooldown
It's all in there, guys. Go fucking read them already. They aren't crappy, and from what I can see, they're definitely canon.

...And if that little mention of the Seventeenth's Warmaster last thread was any indication, then Prose Magica (the story by archivalfag) is canon, too. I don't know if the Toronto Officio is going to figure prominently at all at some point, but if nothing else, it's been acknowledged in the main story, now.

http://pastebin.com/u/Grizzlyniisan
So go read that, too.

You reach up with your other hand - the entire gauntlet there already glowing magma-red, rust flaking off with every movement - and you take a hold of the pipe the crazed Magical Girl on top of you is trying to fit through the eyehole of your helmet's visor. Stopping it in mid-stab, making its wielder scream and shriek and shake in frustration.

"TELL THEEEEMMMM! TELL THEM TO TURN IT BACK OR I SWEAR I'LL FUCKING EAT YOUR FACE--"

...Hahaha, really? REALLY? Yeah, no. You've had enough. Actually, you had enough the moment you realized that she was too far gone to reason with. It shouldn't have taken your left arm being melted to slag for you to catch up with the situation. Way back then...you'd have gone for the most obvious option. The quickest and easiest.

Putting everything you've got into your grip, you grit your teeth as you clench your fist around the pipe. The moment you feel the metal give the slightest bit is when you all but tear the bludgeon from Sabrina's own white-knuckled grip. You fling the makeshift weapon away, before reaching up again and grabbing a fistful of the crazed girl's gown and hauling her face towards your metal helmed forehead.

...The second nose you've broken in one day. If only Kyoko was around to see it.

Sabrina tilts back on her mount, dazed by the blow, blood pouring out of her nose and mouth, to drip down her chin - the fresh crimson already clotting, already decomposing even before it's dried on her gown. On her skin. You prop yourself up with your remaining hand - and throwing fair play to the wind, acknowledging that this was somewhere you had to play dirty, it's here that you punch her in the face. As hard as you possibly can.

With your freshly-regenerated hand, grown back with pure and utter rage, at the cost of searing pain comparable to that of dipping a limb into slow-burning lava. Plainly said, it hurt like a fucking bitch.

The skin on your knuckles hadn't even had time to set yet before it's already split by the force of your punch - Sabrina's eyes going wide, before going blank as she crumples to the floor. Her jaw curiously and amusingly dislocated from the rest of her skull.

You kick her off you, spitting curses and oaths against the entire Western world in general, before scrambling back onto your feet. Reaching up with both hands to tear your helmet off - which, at this point, was a rusting, dented mess. It drops to the floor with a clatter as you suck in deep, rasping breaths, tasting your own blood in your mouth, already turned rancid by the corruption of whatever the hell Sabrina actually does. ...You wince as you feel some of your teeth come loose. Fucking hell, Expiry Date Chick! You'll pay for that!

Spitting out a molar, you look around for the collar, squinting at the ground, hoping to catch a glimpse of its crimson glow. Luckily, you find it easily enough, and you slip your arm through it, this time, like a makeshift bangle. Should at least help you from losing it so easily like the last time.

Shit. Shit shit shit.

"Sayaka?" Malal's voice is disjointed, but there, on your headset speaker. "Sayaka, report. We heard something happen in there. What's going on? Sayaka!"

"...Fuck this. I should've gone instead. Malal, I'm takin' over, I'm gonna send in--"

"No. Shut up and let us do this."

"But Mickey's not--"

"Sayaka will see this through." Malal's voice, while patient, was clearly irritated. "Sayaka? Sayaka, respond, please. What's going on? Did you get the collar onto her?"

A lone girl walked the streets of Mitakihara, ruby-red eyes scanning the streets around her as the cool spring air brushed across her face. She hunkered down in her jacket, wondering for a moment if it was worth trying to wrestle her long, green hair into the hood. …Probably not. It wasn't THAT cold. No colder than it had been the last few months, anyway, the gently-falling snow a cruel underscore for the wild changes in her life lately.

Not something she wanted to think about, at the moment. Not when she'd finally gotten a little peace from a certain senselessly cheery redhead and the sycophants surrounding her…boss. Someone she would have liked to call her friend, even with the circumstances as they were. …Despite all her worries, this city made her feel warm. An old, nostalgic glow filled her soul gem, along with the gentle gnawing of an old, obnoxious friend.

She was trying to quit. Really, she was. And for a while, in spite of everything, she was winning. But the siren call of the cigarette machines made the old, forged Taspo card in her pocket burn. One of the passerby gave her a look as she stepped up to it – she was a little young, wasn't she?

…No, it was his imagination. A trick of the light. The woman he'd thought was a teenager just then was most assuredly an adult. Not a nice, productive office lady or some college student, though. Just a curvy young woman with tired, sunken eyes and a bustline that was working hard at demolishing an old yellow t-shirt. An escort, most probably. He was entirely sure he'd seen her walking here from the red light district…

An old, smoky bar. An ageless black man. A bottle of expensive whiskey. That was what she'd resorted to that night, in the end. A thousand and one memories rushed back to the green-haired girl. Maybe this wasn't where she needed to be – no, she knew this wasn't where she needed to be, thanks to years of experience in her field and the Chirpee app on her phone. Murderface – Matsuda Chiaki, this time around – wasn't going to be out. She was babysitting now. Warmaster, now. Part of the Idol Voices Around the World event, or whatever it was. She might have even been safe in bed right then, with Kirishima Ruri's head between her legs.

…No. That didn't sound like her. But it made the girl's blood boil just thinking about it, and the only way she could think of to cool it down was another shot, under the watchful but indifferent eyes of Charles. Not that it mattered. She couldn't afford to get falling-down drunk. She never could, anymore. She was a Callidus. A professional. Not even when she was here, back in this bar, in this city, thinking about that person, could she just drink like a normal fucking person anymore.

The red-eyed girl reminded herself after another couple of shots that she didn't have much time to waste here. It wasn't a vacation, much as she wanted it to be. The air had changed in Mitakihara. It had gotten heavier, or maybe it was a sort of underlying scent; a sugar-and-corpses smell that lingered in her nose now, no matter where in the city she was. Or maybe…

Maybe it was just that, as she knew better than anyone, things here were going to get much, much worse.

'Used to frequent' seems a bit strong, did we really go more than once? You'd think we'd be less...mythical to Midori if we were even rare regulars, since she worked there a ton. Plus, if we'd met anyone from her family there, would she REALLY not have mentioned anything about it? I've been assuming that if it's her relative, she hasn't said anything because she didn't know, which goes out the window if we got to know them right in front of her.

Except that it doesnt make much sense. If she wathcing the Webcast like we think she did anyway its pretty obvious that we`re not very fond of Midori.

If this Shotstory is supposed to show how Midori REALLY is like then this would be a HUGE retcon if you remember that we were in head in the Syberia-Arc and while it was apparent that she has a fairly low self-esteem there was nothing that ever hinted she is like that.

tl;dr: If this is canon its a huge asspull.

Guys, it's obviously not Midori based on (in addition to the fact that this person is completely different from when we controlled her):
>Murderface – Matsuda Chiaki, this time around - wasn't going to be out.
Even if Midori actually was like this somehow, only people we knew before the first thread who actually used the 'Murderface' moniker would think that way. Midori has no reason to think of Chiaki as Murderface at all, and she 100% definitely wouldn't give any particular weight to our changing names (unless we secretly knew Midori before everything and she's a master of deception, which would also be a huge ret-con).

also despite everything, the idea of Midori being so good a callidus that she hid her previous knowledge of Chiaki not only from everyone in-story, but even people literally reading her thoughts and moods, is amusing.

Midori did call Chiaki Murderface at first.

Everyone knew Chiaki as Murderface because Murderface is the most infamous magical girl worldwide.

Midori only started calling Chiaki "Matsuda-sempai" when she was driving us to Garcia's mansion and we told her to stop calling us Murderface.

Oh definitely, but A: there's no reason (or sign) that she thinks of her as Murderface over Chiaki, B: using Chiaki's last name makes it seem like the person doesn't know her by that name at all, and C: she has no real reason to tie the name-change with our amnesia (she could probably reason out the connection, true, but there's no reason for that to have any meaning to her beyond that since she used the name Chiaki both before and after the only time she - presumably - observed said memory-loss).

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You tell Malal that you're still working on it, what with this one being feisty enough to put up a fight. Damn bitch melted your left arm right down to the shoulder, too. You managed to get a few solid hits in, though, before you lost sight of her. If you're lucky, she might be hurting just enough that she'd already be thinking of throwing in the towel, instead of insisting to go the entire twelve rounds with you.

Either way is fine - in fact, you're hoping she fights again, and harder at that. You want to feel good about getting back for her melting your fucking arm.

>>26447963

"Ah. I see." A moment. "No backup for the moment, then? You believe you can still reliably do this by yourself?"

You very nearly spit a curse at the Culexus, before taking another blood-rancid breath and re-framing your response in a much more socially-acceptable manner.

"Fuck no," You rasp into the small mic, before turning to the side and spitting out another bloody tooth. "No one else gets sent in, Malal, do you understand me? I'm taking this bitch down and I'm slapping the collar on her. No one else needs to get involved - especially not the same fucking people who let her rot in here instead of doing the right thing and just giving her the Peace."

You pull in another breath, the mere act of doing so setting fire to your lungs - and you suppress the spasm to go into a coughing fit through sheer will alone. "Malal, this place is a shithole. No wonder she went fucking insane."

"...I'm inclined to agree with you, but let's try to be a bit more diplomatic about that little detail." Malal's voice is tight and controlled, a hint that the usually-unflappable Culexus is more than a little annoyed. "The Eighth has grossly mishandled Sabrina's situation, but it's not if they didn't try to do it properly." A digitized, vox-corrupted sigh. "Just try not to hurt her too mu--"

You didn't get to hear the rest of Malal's words - what with finding yourself suddenly being choked from behind, the length of a rusty metal pipe being crushed against your windpipe. Only by mere reflex and a bloody-minded malevolence in everything you say and do got one of your hands up at the very last moment, preventing the choke from being pulled all the way in, allowing you some breathing room at least.

>>26447979

"DIE YOU FUCKING MONSTER MERMAID, FUCKING DIE!" Sabrina shrieks into your ear, and you desperately claw at her with your free hand, managing to grab a fistful of her own hair. You twist and pull downward, hoping that would be enough - but to your dismay, her hair comes away in your hand easily, tearing off her skul with bloody chunks of scalp.

Jesus Christ that's just disgusting.

"Sayaka? Sayaka, respond-" Malal's voice is tinny and scratchy as it comes from the headset's earbud, now dislodged from your ear. Not that you could reply to her in any capacity at the moment - Sabrina's got her choke locked in nice and good, and despite your grip on the pipe preventing it from being cinched any tighter it won't take long for you to pass out. You start bucking and trashing against the girl trying her best to murder you, hoping to fling her off of you before it's too late.

...No such luck. She seems like she's putting everything into holding on, even crapping her legs around your waist to keep her hold on you. And you're starting to feel lightheaded - the edges of your vision turning white with every heartbeat thudding in your ears.

"...Sayaka? SAYAKA!...Fuck it, I'm going in--" You hear Malal's voice again, and suddenly you feel the chokehold loosening for the briefest of moments. You brace to wrench yourself out of Sabrina's grasp, to get back into an even fighting ground - but it seems she had other plans for you. Namely, one involving her rust-encrusted iron pipe, a good swing and the back of your head.

...It didn't hurt as much as you expected it to? Or maybe you're just used to that kind of pain. But what you didn't expect was your entire world going completely black, and your entire body turning numb, nerveless, slack. Feeling nothing except the sensation of your body crashing to the floor, face first.

Well. Shit.

This is how it ends, is it? It's not...it's not what you expected, god dammit.

Not what you fucking expected at all.

Jesus Christ, you can't die here. Not here. You don't even fucking live here. You're not even in Japan, or near people who care about you. You won't even be able to say goodbye to Kyoko.

"Sayaka..."

What kind of face can you even show Kaneda-san now, huh? Wherever she is. What kind of face can you show the person who you made that promise to? Do you even remember what you promised her, you blue-haired music nerd who kept stuttering even while she tried to sing idol songs?

"Sayaka-chan...!"

You could feel the sting of tears in your eyes, but if you still had feeling in your arms - if you could move them now, despite them being nerveless, useless limbs on either side of you as you lay facedown in the blood-encrusted floor - you'd have angrily wiped them away. Miki Sayaka does not fucking cry. NO CRYING HERE, EVER. The last time you cried was finding out that your best friend had left you without even saying goodbye. You did all the crying you could do in your lifetime then. No more tears to shed.

Shit. Sorry, Kyoko. Sorry, Kaneda-san.

You weren't strong enough.

What? What the hell?

That voice, you recognize it. It's...it's that girl from earlier, right?

You try to lift your head - and it's then that you find that you could. The world's still dark around you, an impenetrable murky blackness - but you could easily see the girl from before crouching in front of you. Holding out a gloved hand, as if offering assistance.

"Need a hand, Sayaka-chan?" She giggles, her black eyes glistening. "It looks like you do! Come on, we'll get that mean girl together and put her back in her place!"

How do you respond?

Kharn gets barbecued by Ahriman and nearly dies? Access golden weapons.
Sayaka losing consciousness and about to get melted to the bone? I'm the Alpha Bitch. I win this and go home to fuck the prom queen.

I just hope it actually works out for once, hahaha.

You find yourself reaching out toward that hand with your bare own. She smiles widen at this - and you catch the suggestion of a toothy, fanged grin being bared as your fingertips touch.

But even before she could get a hold of your hand, you slapped hers away with a weak flick of your wrist. The sound of your own skin smacking hers a satisfying sound, despite the blood roaring in your ears.

"...What? B-but Sayak-chan, don't you--" The girl stammers, off-guard, confused. Her brow furrowing. "Can't you see I'm trying to help you?"

You answer her confusion with a chuckle, before you start to work into getting up off of the floor. Is she fucking serious? When has Miki Sayaka ever accepted help from anyone? Not since that one person, you've never relied on anyone else. It's always just been you, and that's the way it will be until you retire. If you can't pull your own fucking weight then you deserve to die, anyway.

"That's...no!" The pink-haired harpy screeches, stomping a foot in frustration. "I chose you! You're supposed to accept my help! SO ACCEPT IT ALREADY!"

Chose you? What, like a fucking Pokemon? No. Thanks. You grit your teeth as you force your entire body to move, both numb hands pushing against the blood-encrusted tiles below you to prop yourself up. ..It feels like trying to do a push-up with an entire ton of weights on your back, fuck. You even feel your elbow joints creaking in the attempt.

"You...you..! I HATE YOU, SAYAKA-CHAN!" The girl roars. "FINE! SEE IF I CARE WHEN YOU WITCH OUT AGAIN!"

The hallucination - or whatever it was - disappears in a flash of crimson light - and it's then that the world's lights seem to flicker back on again. Revealing the filthy, dimly-lit Silent Room again, with no sight of the pink-haired girl around.

>>26448502

Well, at least you're still alive, but...fuck. Maybe you need to talk to someone about these hallucinations? Some kinda therapist or what?

...No. No one needs to know. It's probably...just the fatigue, yeah. Nothing serious.

You stagger into a standing position - before feeling a strange, itchy sensation on your right cheek. Glancing around just in case Expiry Date Bitch tries anything again, you tear off your remaining gauntlet to feel at your face with your bare fingers - and flinch as you realize that you're touching bared bone and flesh. Your hand coming away with thick, clotted blood.

That bitch. YOUR FACE. SHE FUCKED WITH YOUR FACE. SERIOUSLY.

Literally half your face, the skin melted off, revealing flesh and bone. Your right eye can't even fucking close because YOU HAVE NO MORE EYELID LEFT. FUCK.

It's then that you hear her voice at one corner of the room. Fervent. Desperate. Scared. You take a few shaky steps forward - following her voice - and you see her come into view, holding up your headset to her ear. Blabbering into the mic.

"M-Mary! Mary, please, get me out of here! You promised that you'd get me out of here! Please...! Tell them I'm sorry for everything I did! MARY! GET ME OUT OF HERE YOU PROMISED ME YOU WOULD!"

You take another step forward, and it's here that she notices your approach - her eyes widening in stark fear. You couldn't help but grin at this.

"M-MARY! SHE'S UP AGAIN! I-I JUST GOTTA KILL HER, AND EVERYTHING'LL BE OKAY AGAIN, RIGHT?!" She giggles, a shrill breathless sound, before dropping the headset and grasping her pipe. "I gotta...I gotta kill you now. They won't let me out unless I do!"

Heh. You're actually pretty angry at the moment, after finding out that this bitch messed with your face while you were down. ...So angry, in fact, that you're actually quite lucid. Probably looped back into calm because of how angry you are.

In any case, Sabrina looks like she's preparing to charge you.

How do you respond?

You've just had about enough of this bullshit, seriously.

"Fuck off, you loon." You grin at her again with a half-flayed face. "It's collaring time."

Taking the collar from where you've stowed it - luckily, it was still hanging off your hand despite you having ripped off your gauntlet to check what she did to your face - you bite into the obsidian ring, holding it with your teeth. Leaving your both hands free as you manifest your swords - one for each hand. Both to show that you're past caring. Past giving any fucks, because you have none left to give. You've tried the hard way, now this is the easy way.

"N-no...no, I gotta kill you...I GOTTA KILL YOU!" Sabrina's words end in a keening scream, and it's here that she runs towards you, raising her iron pipe in a double-fisted grip. Aiming to smash the leaden end into the top of your skull in an overhead blow. Something that could definitely do you in, all told.

If she actually had hands to hold on to her fucking pipe in the first place, that is.

The moment she comes within range is the moment you step forward - your first sword-stroke made with your right hand. It wasn't even so much as a slash as it was a simple cutting of the air in front of you - a quick gesture made starting with a flex of your elbow and a flick of your wrist. You sidestep Sabrina's charge, allowing her to get past you - just as you make another cut, this time with your left hand.

You let out a breath as you hear the loud clang-clatter of the iron pipe as it falls to the floor - followed immediately by Sabrina screaming in pain. You turn to face her - and she's holding up her arms, shrieking at the bloody, gushing stumps where her hands had been. Her fingers, sliced perfectly through the first and middle knuckles, litter the floor by her feet like discarded cigarette butts.

"MARY! M-MARY, HELP ME--" She screams again, but you're laughing now as you move. You don't even feel the weight of what's left of the armor now - all you feel is the air rushing past you as you slip past the hysterical Sabrina once more, both your blades coming alive in your hands, creating glowing moon crescents as what little light in the room catches them in mid-stroke.

You let out another breath as Sabrina's scream intensifies - followed by the sound of her body falling to the ground in a wet, sick squelch. Followed yet again by two more softer, smaller impacts. Her legs, cut off at mid-thigh, falling after you've sliced their owner off of them.

You're not too sure when you finally turned around to look at your handiwork, but when you did, Sabrina had stopped screaming. Armless and legless, she lies on her back in a pool of her own blood. Her eyes, blank and staring upwards into the ceiling, is wet with tears - while she murmurs a single name over and over again.

"M-Mary. Mary. Mary. Mary...Mary, please save me.."

You let both blades fall from your hands, and you take the collar from your mouth. Stepping over to the limbless Sabrina, you look down on her, your eyes narrowed.

Actually it is. The psychosomatic feedback from that kind of death experience is most of the time enough to get an MG to Witch out, unless they're mentally prepared for it.

Urobuchi was actually asked about it in an interview, and he said that unless the Meguca in question understood all of the details of their state, and was mentally prepared for the snap and not needing to breath, their reaction to their 'death' would cause an instant spike in their despair and they'd Witch out.

Probably because in this universe most of the Meguca are given a primer on how magical girls and witches work before they contract, so most of them see to already know about the zombie body thing.

But in Sabrina's case, she's gone insane from isolation and is already terrified, so she probably would witch out if we killed her body.

As much as you'd like to get back at her...well, kicking people when they're down is more of a Kirika thing, when all is said and done. And you'd like to emulate your direct superior as little as possible, even if you are her prodigy.

Preparing to apply the collar, you spot where she'd kept her Soul Gem - in pendant form, hanging off a silver chain necklace, the gem nearly stained completely black that you can't even tell what its base color is. This you handle first - there's absolutely no sense getting finished off by a Witch when you've done all this work. It takes the best part of the two Grief Seeds to clean it completely, leaving you just enough to clean yours.

...Her Soul Gem color's blue. Same as yours. That's...well, sorta ironic, you guess? Pretty funny, though.

You placed the collar on her after that. The moment it locked into place, it glowed blue - and immediately, the heaviness in the air was lifted. Even Sabrina seemed to relax now, her eyes closed, her breathing deep and regular. She's even snoring now, which makes you want to kick her but not really.

Rest seemed prudent at the moment, but you still need to call them in. Finding the headset was an easy thing, at least - and the moment you place the earbud back into your ear is at the exact moment Malal seems to be reaching her boiling point outside.

"--I don't care what you promised her! You're not getting in there, Springfield! Let Sayaka do her job! I don't know what you think about us in the Ninth, but you asked for this favor and we're seeing it through! So sit your ass down or I'll shut YOU down, I MEAN IT!"

...Whoa. So Malal can get angry too?

You let her go on for a few more moments, before allowing yourself to speak - asking Malal what the hell happened to diplomacy.

Silence, before Malal speaks again. "...Sayaka? I...what happened? Did you get the collar on her now? You disappeared earlier, and then Mary was on the frequency somehow--"

You glance over at Sabrina.

...Very immobilized, you reply with a small smile. You then hear Kirika cackle loudly in the background.

"Right. We're sending in a team to get the both of you out of there. Just stay put." A moment more. "Good job, Sayaka. I'm proud of you."

You blink at this. That's...well, that's honestly rare praise, coming from the Culexus. First time she'd said that. It actually made you blush a little.

You murmur something to the effect of 'Roger', before taking off the headset and tossing it onto Sabrina, hitting her in the face. Interrupting her snoring for a bit. You hang your head down as you allow your body to regenerate the damage it's endured slowly, carefully, bit by bit.

...It was probably your imagination, but for that one second, Malal sounded just like Kaneda.

Hah. Right.

Kaneda isn't nearly as much of a tightwad.

The extraction team came in a few minutes later, lead by Malal herself. It's to note here that she actually asked if you were okay, first, before directing the team to Sabrina. You watched them strap her considerably de-limbed form onto a gurney to wheel her out, while Malal helped you hobble your way out. Apparently Sabrina cracked you in the knee somehow? The adrenalin probably numbed it enough that you could put weight on it.

In any case, you let out another sigh of relief as you finally get out of Sub Zero - and the group that greets you outside the outer entrance is a familiar group, with a few new faces. Kirika is there, along with Amber - Mary's gone and followed the team with Sabrina to their hospital wing or something.

The new faces consist of...well, some chick who's the spitting image of Mary, except paler, with long platinum-blonde hair teased into gothic drills. Probably to match her black frilly loligoth outfit, the sort with white crosses and black silk roses and enough self-delusion to fill three maid cafes.

The other new face is a gloomy sort, with eyebags and brown hair tied into two braided pigtails. Wearing a pink sweater with some sort of checkered design on the chest, and a simple maroon skirt and leather boots. She looks like as if someone had pissed in her tea - or, since this is America, her Big Gulp.

"Hah! Told you Sayaka-chan can handle it!" Kirika elbows Amber in the ribs. "Nice work, prodigy! But, ah, isn't it a bit excessive, giving her the Mitakihara Special on the first date?"

How do you respond?

The human mind is surprisingly strong willed against individual impacts. People can often handle suicides of loved ones relatively well, horrific permanent injuries, terrible loss.

What does cause despair is the continual repeated adversity that does not let up anywhere - compare Kyouko's individual loss of family to Sayaka's discovery of being a lich, Kyuubey torturing her, her lashing out at Madoka, losing whatsisname in a perfect NTR scene, hearing about folks trash-talking women and finally witching out.

You manage to frown at Kirika. The hell was she expecting? You actually tried to be reasonable at first, thinking about her feelings and the perils of living in isolation. All that went out the window when she turned out to be gibbering batshit! She nearly cored your skull out with a pipe, and melted your freakin' arm! She even melted HALF your face!

"Ah, it's not so bad. I'm sure Sakura won't even notice." You all but growl at your direct superior, causing her to back up in capitulation - a rare thing. "Whoa, okay, that was out of line, sorry, Sayaka-chan." She recovers here, giving your shoulder a comradely slap. "But yeah, good job! As expected!"

"...Even I have to admit that was pretty hardcore, Sayaka-chan." Amber nods in agreement, smiling rather...well, you'll admit it right now, a bit cutely. "What's the Mitakihara Special, though? Is that kind of Ninth Officio Tradition?"

Kirika guffaws again, as you shake your head. It's one of Kirika's signature moves, you tell her, and one taught to all the Eversors in your Officio. Capturing someone by cutting off their arms first, so they can't fight back, and then their legs, so they can't run.

"...Hardcore." Amber says again, breathy in admiration. You snort at this, before jerking your head towards the new faces. Who the hell are they?

At being referred to, it's then that Mary's Goth Version smiles. A small, polite, I'm-Better-Than-You-In-Every-Way-And-Also-Rich smile. "I was beginning to think that we were simply background characters in this little scene, Miki Sayaka-san." You blink as she speaks in effortless Japanese, with just the barest hint of an accent.

"Before we introduce ourselves, though, please let me be the first to say that we cannot possibly express how grateful we are." She dips slightly in a graceful curtsey. "Sabrina has been hurting for a very long time, but we might be able to give her a life again, thanks to you."

...Well. It's nothing, really. It was stupid of them to try and contain her this long, though. They should've--

"--Killed her?" She finishes for you, taking the words out of your mouth, her crimson eyes staring into yours. "Yes. We did think about granting her that mercy. But my sister - I'm sure you've met her earlier - she was adamant that we do not give up hope. That doing such a thing would be tantamount to surrendering, betraying Sabrina's trust in us to save her. You were our very last hope, Miki Sayaka-san, you must see that. Doing this for us...you have our eternal gratitude for it."

"Goodness, she likes to hear herself talk." Malal quietly voxes to you, and you can't help but agree. But...well, at least what she's saying means something good to both your Officios.

"Ah, but where are my manners?" The platinum-blonde girl shakes her head, before bowing with a flourish. "I am - as you may have already seen from my aura - the Equerry of the Eighth Officio, and the Undisputed Queen of Gold Shibuya. I am..." She pauses here for dramatic effect, looking up and smiling, before opening her mouth to finish her introduction. Unfortunately--

"--Alice Nightblossom. Eats mostly cake. Shits mostly lace."

You turn away and press your face into the curved surface of Malal's shoulder guard, muffling your laughter as Alice starts to scold her gloomy companion.

Aura readings? Gold Shibuya? H-hahaha. What the fucking hell is up with this Officio?

"...The Nightblossom thing was a joke." Alice says after a moment, pouting. "Wendy's an asshole. Ignore her."

...Ah. So the other one's named Wendy. Okay.

"Well, with that aside--" Another flourish of her frilled sleeves, making you think weirdly about those costumed heroes in television having to act out their speech since their faces are concealed under helmets. "--Please, Miki Sayaka-san, allow us to display our gratitude in a material fashion. Amber has heard of your prowess with the sword - and as such, I commissioned her to fashion you a blade worthy of your skill as a samurai."

Is this bitch for real or what.

"You will accept, of course?" Alice finishes her flowery, over-elaborate speech with a question.

How do you respond?

You glance at Malal, to check what she thinks about it - and she simply shrugs, as if it didn't really matter. You turn back to Alice, and reply that you don't really mind. It's...you're not really into collecting swords, but you're not going to turn down a gift.

Also, does Amber come with it?

"Wonderful. Amber will have it brought to you before you depart--" Alice nods, before stopping. "...Excuse me? Amber...? What about her? I..." Her words trail off as she looks at the redhead in the cheongsam in confusion. Amber, in the other hand, is blushing red, looking away while holding both her cheeks. "Did you two...?" The Equerry of the Eighth starts to ask, before shaking her head, smiling again. "W-well. Um. That was unexpected, but I'm sure the both of you can come to an agreement, somehow...?"

"It's forbidden love, though." Again from the gloomy girl, who earns a frustrated groan and a painful-looking pinch in the side from the Equerry.

"We talked about this, Wendy! It's not forbidden love!" She stamps a single foot, kicking up a bit of her frill-infested skirt. "It's a beautiful thing!"

"They're very relaxed, aren't they?" Malal remarks quietly, and you can't help but agree. They are quite relaxed.

"Silence, Miss Cooldown! If you do not cease, then I will condemn you to water closet cleaning duties for the entire fortnight! Be told!" Alice scolds the girl again, before composing herself once more.

She flashes you another royal smile - and despite how ridiculous she is, you can't help but...well, be impressed. Sure, you've seen your share of cosplayers and such, but she seems to buy into it wholesale and with dedication. Almost princess-like. "I apologize for that display. In any case, I will take my leave now, and see to our Sabrina. Wendy will show you to your accommodations and to your needs. RIGHT, Wendy?"

"...Yes, ma'am." Comes the deadpan reply. "But wouldn't Amber be better to play Maid to Mickey--"

"SHUT UP. GOD."

And it's with a flurry of frills and curls that Alice walks off in the direction where the team disappeared to. Amber moves to follow her, but not before winking at you and...licking her lips. Slowly. She giggles afterward, before running off to follow her Equerry.

They...they know you were just joking, right? Right? No one's taking you that seriously?

You were about to vocalize it when Wendy, who you already figure is the straight man to this team of punchlines, murmurs for you to follow her - and the three of you slowly do so. Kirika, as usual, is content enough to walk ahead, while Malal continues to help you walk.

It's here that you notice the katana that Kirika's wearing, hanging off a leather belt strapped around her waist. It's...standard length, with a rather impressive ebony black sheath with golden gilding.

Huh. Guess Kirika got hers early, or something.

Well, whatever. So long as you're getting one yourself, that's fine.

'Doctor' Emma Strauss silently scribbled in her notebook, barely paying attention to the girl opposite her. A single light illuminated the room, reflecting off of Strauss' circular eyeglasses. A lonely antique gramophone played the graceful tune of "Blue Danube" in one corner of the room, to which the good doctor occasionally waved a finger. An elaborate chemistry set was borne on a table along the opposite wall, the sort that would give even a university a run for their money. With one gloved hand, the 'Doctor' gently picked up the soulgem on the table in front of her, then dropped it into one of two beakers.

“Experiment number forty-sree, beginnink now.”

A quiet splash sounded through the darkened room before a dull series of clinks as the soulgem settled to the bottom of the beaker. Immediately the bound girl began screaming and roaring, pulling the chains around her wrist taut as she reached for beaker in vain.

"Und how does siz van make you feel?" Strauss asked, staring down at her clipboard in a futile effort to keep her amusement from showing through.

The other girl screeched through gritted teeth. "PAIN. ANGRY. TAKE IT OUT!"

"Good, good," the 'doctor' cooed, "you are gettink much better at zis. Just a few moments lonker, darlink. Zen you vill get ze dreamy juice."

The girl chained to the wall was wearing little more than a dirty, stained tanktop and underwear. Her veins bulged an ugly purple, criss-crossing spiderweb patterns over chemically-enhanced muscles. Bloodshot eyes stared at the 'Doctor' with dilated pupils. She desperately reached and snatched at the beaker, flailing like a chained animal.

"Sirty more seconds, dear," Strauss mumbled as she jotted down a token few notes. "You are beink very stronk, very brave. Just a little lonker."

"GIVE IT TO ME!" The chained girl roared. A trail of blood had begun to run from one of her nostrils.

Strauss allowed a sly grin to creep up her face, showing off her wickedly pointed teeth. With a pair of tongs, she gently plucked the soulgem from one beaker, shook it off, then dropped it into the second. The results were immediately apparent. The bound girl slumped back against the wall and collapse against her bindings, donning a look of pure euphoria as her brain abruptly switched gears. Her eyes rolled back into her head and a series of short giggles bubbled up from her mouth every so often.

Strauss leaned back and adjusted her spectacles, holding a hand to her chin. The hyperdeliriant was one of her best selling products, inducing a near-catatonic state of bliss and available by injection or direct application to the soulgem. It even seemed to slow the corruption of a soulgem by a marginal amount. Though, she would never dare test the substance on herself. It did one well not to sample one's own product.

There was a time, long ago, when Emma Strauss was the warmaster of the Thirteenth. The first Venenum warmaster. It was an honour that brought great expectations and promise - which made it all the worse when she became the first warmaster to be expelled from her own officio. Unethical, inhumane practices they had told her. As if the entire magical girl song and dance wasn't already. Now she was stuck peddling drugs that would kill a normal human out of the basement of a one-story bungalow in the middle of nowhere.

Strauss kept a close eye on the euphoric guinea pig, still jotting down notes. The ugly, bulging veins slowly receded over a short few minutes, but the whites of her eyes were still painted with branching red veins. The 'doctor' quietly set her clipboard down on the table, then lifted the beaker containing her victim's soulgem.

"How are you feelink now, Milica?" Strauss asked, genuine curiosity touching her words.

"Muh- muh- muh- haaaa- mu- ahaha- much-ch-ch behehetter," Milica giggled. The girl was clearly still lost in her own little world.

The gem was certainly corrupted to an extent, but not nearly to the length that Strauss had expected. A grief-retardant wasn't exactly something that interested her, but it would certainly sell well enough. Such was life as a small business owner.

Strauss had found the girl on her doorstep some months back. Everything about the wretch seemed to paint her as the perfect picture of a typical junky. Her hair was a mess, her skin blotchy and pale. She seemed to twitch nervously every so often and always held onto one arm; as if keeping it back from mugging the good doctor for more drugs.

Milica Djalic. Strauss had always kept a meticulously perfect file on each of her subjects. The girl had gone by the nickname "Red Hands" after a strange quirk left them constantly bloodied up to the elbow while in her costume. The 'Doctor' had only been interested in the phenomena for a few moments before she began to pump the girl full of various chemicals on a daily basis.

Her silent reminiscing was suddenly interrupted as the door bell was rung and a dog began yapping on the floor above. The bespectacled German nearly kicked over the table as she jolted upright, swearing as she rose from her seat. One hand swept up her top hat from thin air and placed it gently upon her head as the other took her cane, which was used to lift the needle from the gramophone.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: A Spoonful of Sugar archivalfag 08/05/13(Mon)13:32 No.26451410

There was a slight hunch to Strauss' stance as she quickly ascended the wooden stairway. The steps creaked and groaned with every heavy footfall, as if threatening to give way at the slightest pressure. As she reached the ground floor, the 'doctor' was greeted by a short, fluffy dog jumping and yapping at her excitedly, begging for attention.

“Do ve have a visitor, Fritz?” Strauss asked, giving its head a vigorous rub. “Go downstairs und play vis Milica, Fritz. Mommy needs to serve ze customers now.”

The dog did as it was told, promptly scurrying down the steps to lick the face of the bound girl. Strauss gently kicked the basement door shut before making her way to the front. One bespectacled eye peered out of the peephole – an addition which she had insisted on installing.

Strauss grinned a sharp-toothed grin and pulled the door open, pulling herself down into a low bow as she did.

“Fräulein Navidson,” she greeted the new-comer, “alvays a pleasure to see my favourite customer. Do come in! Is it time for our appointment already?”

The girl who entered, a one Miss Ofelia Navidson, was dressed in a frilled blue dress, the sort that almost begged to be accompanied by a parasol and a haughty attitude. She had been coming to see the 'doctor' regularly for several months – far longer than Strauss had kept her favourite test subject chained up in the basement, at the very least. Her blonde hair was worn in long, spiralling curls down her back, along with two over her shoulders. She seemed the exact opposite of what one would expect of Strauss' clients.

“Two in the afternoon, just in time for tea,” Ofelia answered, smiling gently with just a hint of a darker tone “as usual.”

“Forgive me, forgive me. I just get so caught up in my vork. Is like zey say” Strauss laughed, leading the blonde girl to her tiny kitchen table as she flashed a wicked grin, "time flies ven you are havink fun."

“About ze same as usuval, I suppose,” the 'doctor' answered. She quickly prepared a kettle to boil before taking a seat opposite her customer. “Ze Tenss has been tryink to pressure me into takink more orders, but I simply von't have it. Und zen, ze Tventiess has been shovink a great amount of interest in ze hyperdeliriant. Interrogation purposes, so he claims. Not zat zis is any concern of mine, of course.”

"As it should be, I imagine."

Strauss shrugged and threw the blonde a smirk. "Zat is only good business. You have come for ze usuval, ja?"

"You don't have time to sit and chat?" Ofelia pouted, feigning offense.

"Vell, I have anozer appointment in two hours, betveen zat und furzer tests..." The 'doctor' trailed off, bobbing her head from side to side as she thought. "I suppose I could make some time for relaxink."

"Do you still keep that girl of yours around? What was her name..."

"Milica," Strauss answered as she rose from her seat to fetch the kettle. "Und ja, she is still here. I could not ask for a better test subject. So villing, so desperate," the 'doctor' made that same wicked grin that always seemed to find its way to her face, "it varms ze cockles of mein heart."

"What exactly is it that you consider her, hm?" Ofelia asked, thanking the 'doctor' as she poured each of them a cup of tea. "A prisoner? A slave? A pet, maybe?"

Strauss laughed quietly to herself, her eyes flicking upward to look at the blonde over the rims of her glasses. "Zat is... a complicated qvestion."

"Perhaps a friend then?" The blonde asked, finishing her question with a punctuating sip.

The 'doctor' nearly choked on her own drink, her spectacles clattering to the table. "I sink- I sink you are over-sinkink sinks a bit much, ja? Vat she is does not exactly matter, does it?"

"I was just thinking," Ofelia shrugged as she twirled a finger around her golden curls, "I would throw in a little extra something. But only if you buy her a decent meal with it. Is that agreeable?"

"Ach," Strauss groaned, scowling as she replaced her glasses, "do not tell me you have suddenly decided to start carink for zis... zis junky!"

"I can't exactly deny that," the blonde's finger ceased swirling her hair as she gently placed the tea cup on the table before sliding a narrow, blue, rectangular pamphlet across the table. "But you'll consider it, won't you?"

Strauss flipped through the pamphlet, squinting at it with an eyebrow cocked as she read. "Vat ze fuck is zis?" She mumbled. "A brochure for some kind of... religion? A cult?"

"The Blessed Lady watches over all magical girls, dear doctor," Navidson explained, taking the 'doctor's' free hand as she donned a look of utmost sincerity, "no matter how wayward their soul. No matter how far they may have strayed from the path of righteo-"

"Und you hand out fucking BROCHURES?" Strauss took back the hand held by the blonde and pinched her brow. After a moment, she let go and took a deep breath before speaking. "Ofelia, my dear Ofelia. You are vun of my favourite customers. You are punctual, polite und you do not ask too many qvestions. I vill not allow you to stain a perfectly good business relationship vis zis... zis... solicitink!"

"HALT DIE KLAPPE!" Strauss yelled. She took another deep breath as she squeezed her eyes closed. "Ve vill do business, und zen I vill show you to ze door. You vanted ze mark four combat stimulant as usuval, ja? Ze mark five vill be ready in just a few veeks-"

"A-actually," Ofelia stammered, gulping, "I was hoping you could perhaps sell me the mark two at a reduced rate. I imagine you have a large surplus stock."

"Ze mark two?" The 'doctor' asked with an incredulous blink. "Ofelia, I vould caution against such a sink. Ze mark two is extremely addictive und plagued by side effects... Zere is a reason I have a surplus of it. It vas my greatest mistake. Vhy vould you even vant zis?"

"Times are tough these days," the other girl responded, her eyes wandering. "The- the economy you know."

Strauss snorted and waved the blue pamphlet in the air. "Zen vhy don't you pray to zis Blessed Lady of yours for some money, hm?"

"Doctor-"

"I tell you vat," she began, "I vill sell you vun dose of mark four at a reduced rate, just zis vonce, for my favourite customer."

"Doctor, I need more than just a single dose," Ofelia replied. Her words seemed to grow more desperate as the argument went on. "I- I need MORE."

"I vill not sell my best customer ze mark two," Strauss countered. "Zis is not up for negotiata-"

"SELL ME THE MARK TWO!" Ofelia roared, her voice distorting and deepening between words.

The 'doctor's' eyes widened as realization slowly dawned on her. "Mein gott," she whispered, "you have already tried it, haven't you? Somevun gave you ze mark two. Who did zis to you?"

"Just sell it to me," the blonde muttered, "I swear to you that I won't be any problem."

"You say zat now, but-"

At that the other girl lunged across the table and seized the 'doctor's' wrist, her hand squeezing nearly hard enough to snap bone. A slight curl came to Strauss' lip, a faint snarl as she suppressed the urge to stab a pair of syringes into the other girl's eye sockets. She made it a rule not to deal with addicts - or at least not ones doped up on combat stims strong enough to easily kill a grown man.

"Just. Sell it to me."

Strauss sighed, then shook her head. "Fine," she growled, "vun order of ze mark two combat stimulant. Zat is five millilitres. Full price."

"But-"

"You vant your filsy drugs, you vill pay full price!" She shouted, slamming a short, narrow silver case on the table. "Zat is one grief seed und ten sousand dollars per millilitre. You pay zis or you get NOSINK! Am I understood?"

Ofelia sat back in her chair and took a deep breath, choking down her rage. "Fine. Five millilitres. Full price."

"Zen ve have a deal."

The two girls nodded nearly in unison. Strauss shifted the briefcase to the side of the table before placing an identical one in its place. Ofelia nodded, then laid a small sack upon the table, along with several stacks of hundred dollar bills along with one extra, as she had promised. The two exchanged goods without a word shared between them; the silence only ever broken when one of them sipped her tea.

It wasn't until Strauss showed the blonde to the door that she finally spoke, and only one sentence then before locking up.

"May zis Blessed Lady have mercy on your soul."

The 'doctor' leaned back against the wall upon shutting the door, pulling aside the curtain to watch Ofelia's limousine pull out of the driveway, bounce over the speed-bump at the end, then finally disappear around the corner. She felt dirty. Ashamed. The mark two had always been one of her greatest mistakes, one that seemed intent on haunting her to her grave. It was one thing to ruin lives intentionally, to create a dependency on purpose. That was entirely within her control. Playing with an addict was one of her favourite hobbies. For it to happen by accident was another matter entirely. It was a mistake.

And mistakes would not be tolerated.

Everything seemed to blur together as she made her way back to the basement. She was sitting on the wobbly stool in front of her equipment before she knew it. Strauss sighed, working quietly as Milica patted the dog curled up beside her. The 'doctor' rolled the stool over to her testing table and removed the girl's soulgem from her concoction, giving it a few good shakes to dry it out.

"Ih-ih-i-i-is s-so-something wr-wrong?" Milica asked, rubbing her eyes as she came to. She'd had that damn stammer for as long as Strauss had known her.

"It is fine, my dear," the 'doctor' muttered. "Vhat vould you like for dinner? My treat."

"Re-re-re-reall-l-ly?" The girl asked. She hadn't been offered something in that way for as long as she could remember. "Di-di-did suh-somethi-thing ha-ha-ha-happ-pp-ppen?"

"Do not vorry yourself, Milica," Struass answered, looking down at her own hands. "Now vhat vould you like for dinner, hm?"

"Anysing."

Milica's brow scrunched for a moment as she thought. "Theh-theh-then a suh-steak puh-puh-please!"

"Two steaks it is zen!" Strauss laughed. "I vill go buy zem after my second appointment. Get some rest vhile you can."

The girl's chains jingled as she readjusted herself, using the dog as a pillow as she laid herself down. Strauss took up a spark lighter and flicked it a few times, igniting a Bunsen burner on the table. She stared into the flame for some time, playing with the air valve as silent thoughts drifted to and fro in her mind. It relaxed her when she was in no mood to mix chemicals, as rare as that was.

She had done terrible things in her days. She had hurt innocent people. She had killed people who had claimed to love her. The closest thing she had to a friend was chained up in her basement like an animal.

The 'doctor' hadn't even noticed that she still held the blue brochure in one hand, crumpled and crushed from her stresses. She idly read it, laughing and musing to herself as she skimmed its contents. A goddess of magical girls. Strauss couldn't even begin to comprehend the foolishness of the concept. With a long sigh, she placed it in the flames and watched them dance around it as the pamphlet blackened and burned. Her eyes drooped in a solemn expression as she stared at the burning brochure. A single murmured question escaped her lips as she watched it turn to ash.

"Vhat god could love a creature like me?"

And that's it! I'll have chapter 11 of Prose Magic finished for next thread. After that chapters should be coming out more quickly. Just needed a good kick in the ass to get going.

Have you read the story in question?(http://pastebin.com/eYZvGJTe) I genuinely think It's be less HUE than some of the main story stuff. AKA nearly all the idol teasing / flirting.

Though I think Mami being flat out straight is a good thing. She's always tacked on to a pair and it just doesn't feel right. Mami is mommy after all, and despite some wishing her a MILF, it'd compromise her relationship with the other girls. Of course some lust after her but everyone knows she's entirely not like that, letting her be far sweeter than would be normally comfortable in a situation where UST might pile up.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You are a Magical Girl, and you've just found out that you've been had.

An amateur journalist, by the ridiculous moniker of NECO, had not only been snooping about in the Hotel where you're guarding the Principal - but had also been tagging along the entire day's activities since you've been here. From the pool shoot to the radio interviews and even in the dress rehearsal - she was there, chirping and probably taking pictures too. And the stuff on her Chirpee account - well, it's the kind of thing that someone with a really good view and a really close shot could only make.

...For fuck's sake, she's even chirped about Midori and Kyoko, and their in-car conversation. Just how much does this fucking cat know, and how the fuck did she get past you? How did she get past EVERYONE?

These are the questions that make you wish for some sort of kneecap device you can shoot all you like to let some stress off.

YOUR SECURITY IS A CAT-TASTROPHE

>>26505148

Your first job as Warmaster and already you've allowed such a horrible breach of security. Yes, she didn't do anything to the Principal, and she seems to have been driven out already - but the fact that she got away scot-free, and even had the audacity to leave you her calling card (along with her disguise)...well, it's not doing anything to improve your mood.

She had her run of the place. It doesn't matter that NECO didn't so much as sneeze at the Principal - but she could have had. She was close enough to see you scratch your fucking ass under the table, for fuck's sake. She could have killed Ruri in a dozen or so ways, and you wouldn't have been able to stop her even if you tried.

Jesus fucking Christ. Things used to be so simple before you got better.

You can't help but pine for the times when everything was so blindingly simple. Drown yourself in whisky, crunch down on painkillers, and kill everyone you're pointed at.

It was a simpler time. A happier time. A softer, less sober time.

Well, never mind. There's time enough to bitch and complain later. Right now you need to contain this situation and make sure it doesn't happen again.

"It seems she's been publishing some profiles about a few people, too." Enishi replies beside you as you angrily sip at your iced coffee. "Ooh. There's Sayaka-chan, Kirika-chan - Blessed Lady keep her soul always - and Miss Malal. Also a few girls from the Eighth Officio, some of whom ring a bell but not really all that familiar. All of them outdated, though...Sayaka-chan's not really into metal anymore, she's bought into the idol hype."

>>26505154

Profiles, huh? Did she post a profile of you? How about Kharn, or Mami, or Kyoko?

"None that I can find, Warmaster." Enishi reports. "Goodness, she seems to have quite the list, though...perhaps she's keeping others to herself?" A moment. "...Ugh, I hope she doesn't have anything on Noriko. Father does not need his hypertension exacerbated by this getting out."

You turn the insulting calling card in your hand, glaring down at it.

What do you do now?

[]Leave it. This can wait till morning. It's just an amateur journalist, when all is said and done. You'll just shoot every one that you come across now.

Nope, this is QB's shit to deal with now too. Agent's on other op's may be compromised now and we don't know where or who it could be. QB also has the ability to shut down media to an extent through his political contacts. And Mami is probably the only person in the officio who know's exactly where everyone is and what they're doing, so she needs to be brought into the loop so she can appraise the situation and decide if ops need to be scrubbed because of this.

You take out your own smartphone and quick-dial Kyuubey. Yes, it's already late, and while you're aware that even mutant cats sleep, you also know that he keeps the strangest hours. There's a pretty good chance he's still awake. If not, well, you need him up anyway.

Kyuubey answers at the third ring, and he doesn't sound the least bit sleepy.

"Matsuda? This is rare. What can I help you with? Did the staff you asked for arrive in time? Are they to your satisfaction?"

Beside you, Enishi seems to only just realize that you're calling someone, and quickly excuses herself, stepping away from you and turning her back. Giving you...unneeded privacy, you guess.

You reply to the affirmative, telling him that they've been quite efficient so far. You have no complaints. ...Speaking of, was sending the Callidus Rank Leader over necessary?

"Only the best for my Warmaster," Kyuubey says, with just the slightest hint of pride. "Besides, this is quite the unprecedented PR event. We've received no less than ten job requests since you were on air. Mami is on paid overtime to work on them as we speak."

Huh. Well. that's...good. But you need to tell him something.

"...Is this the part where you tell me that you've accidentally shot the Principal in the leg, Matsuda?"

What? No. ...No, of course not!

"Ah. Well." Kyuubey almost sounds disappointed, but also relieved. "What is it, then?"

We know that we can`t trust that little shit and I believe she needs to be punished for the shit she pulled and the people she possibly endangered.
On the pragmatic side, though, it seems like a waste to just off someone who is so good and pulling shit like that.

So that just leaves us with a very cruel and very effective solution: We either shoot her or ~~force her into a contract at gunpoint.~~

You tell him, as curtly as you can, that there's some web journalist snooping around. MG groupie, has a Chirpee account and everything. She's good - you'll own up to the fact that she managed to get past you and the security detail, despite your best efforts, which is impressive in its own right - but a bit too good. You also tell him that she might become a problem iin the long run, with the info she's gotten on the Officio, as well as some people from the Eighth.

There's a pregnant pause here, and when Kyuubey finally speaks up, you're almost disappointed that he doesn't sound...well, disappointed. As if he'd been expecting this all along.

"Ah, I see. Yes, I'm viewing it now. ...Hmm. Well, now. This is certainly interesting. Interesting indeed." Another moment. "She seems to have published another profile while we're talking."

. . .Another profile? Whose is it?

"Yours," Kyuubey says, and Enishi had already stepped forward to show you the profile on her phone. You scan it quickly, your own eyes widening as you read some stuff about...well, you. She knows about...about your amnesia. Your ability. The Golden Desert Eagle you picked up.

Hah, she's even given you those stupid ability ratings. ...C? Noodly? What the fuck is this shit. You're not noodly!

"I must say, she reads like she's quite interested in you. And what is this about you being an 'ass man'? Do you have an unhealthy fixation on that part of the human anatomy, Matsuda? Should I keep this in mind when assigning staff to fulfill your requests?"

W-what? N...no. No, he doesn't. You...you don't really care. You don't, goddammit!

"There is no need to be defensive or upset, Matsuda." Kyuubey's voice is patient, calm. "Now, what seems to be the problem here, then?"

>>26506049

"--is readily available on our homepage?" Kyuubey interjects, here. "Granted, some of the information here is a bit disturbing - I had no idea that Malal's tears could have been used for cancer research, for instance - but you do know that basic information about Warmasters and their rank leaders are available to the general public?" A moment. "I fail to see exactly how this can be troubling. She doesn't seem to be posting about locations and number of people on guard, at the very least."

What? Available to the public? But...but the chirps! Surely the fucking mutant cat can see how this could be used against--

"Yes, I am aware how this could be used in the wrong way, Matsuda. But who is going to believe this girl? This is tantamount to seeing your name on a tabloid." A sigh. "Who is going to see this? The Tojo Group? As we've seen, anyone who may take advantage of this - and again, I fail to see in her account where she specifically gave away critical information - already has Magical Girls under their employ."

He has a point, but...

"This will be taken as it sounds like - a crackpot reporter with too much time on their hands. I will remind you that this is not the first time some independent media source has tried to expose us. I've had them taken care of, until I realized that the world at large simply is too jaded and weary to even believe in Magical Girls. Or aliens. Or mutant cats that talk." Another sigh. "We will die without being remembered, Matsuda. A bit of media coverage is nothing dangerous. Trust me on this, at least."

Hnh. The cat sounds a bit...too sure about himself. As if he's defending NECO somehow.

How do you respond?

Its been shown that except for Malal, who didn't want her real identity known for her own reasons, and Totally Awesome Sweet Alabama Liquid Snake, everyone has been using their real names, from official business to interacting with other Officio's to Ruri's live webcast.
Having a name and magical girl status published on a fringe website or a conspiracy nut's Chirpee account is redundant for anyone actually in the know, and is safely ignored by the rest of the public.

Not to mention, as QB said, ALL OF THIS IS ALREADY PUBLICALLY AVAILABLE, as was implied much, much earlier when the Warmaster profiles were mentioned.
So yeah, your argument is invalid.

You blink as realization suddenly dawns on you. ...Kyuubey set this up, didn't he? Is he one of his spies? If she's actually on the payroll, you can relax about it - you're less worried about people publishing shit about you, and more of people getting too close to the goddamn principal without you not knowing!

"...While I can't confirm or deny that, Matsuda, I do agree that it does look rather off, her being able to shadow you despite...well, you are my Warmaster, after all." You could almost hear the smirk in his voice. "Despite this, it seems sending Squad Hiryu and Karasawa Enishi over has scared her off, at least. Take care to be more vigilant, in any case, and make sure this doesn't happen again."

Right. Yeah. You'll just...yeah.

You still can't believe it, anyway. And it's rustled your jimmies something fierce.

"Good. Use that frustration to make sure it doesn't happen again. But as for this NECO individual...she's not a threat. Not yet. But if she becomes one, then she will be handled. Understood?"

That makes you feel better, at least. But yeah. You get it.

"Very well. Is there anything else, Matsuda?"

Beside you, Enishi seems to have started making muffled noises. Her shoulders shaking, her eyes wide as she stares at the screen of her phone. The color all but drained from her face.

Huh? What's wrong? You crane your neck slightly to peek at her screen, and...

...Oh. Wow. That's...wow.

"Matsuda? Matsuda, what seems to be the problem?" Kyuubey's voice comes on again, concerned. "Matsuda?"

You take a moment to reply. There's...nothing. Nothing's wrong. You don't have anything else to tell him.

"Ah. Right. Very well. Goodnight, Matsuda."

The Incubator clicks off, and it's here that Enishi begins to sob into her sleeves. She would've dropped her phone had it not been for you ducking and catching it. And reading the rest of her profile.

...Wow. Whoever this NECO is, she's...she basically ripped Enishi to shreds. In public.

"I...I never...! I wasn't fat, I-I just had a weight problem!" The Callidus Rank Leader, earlier so confident and haughty, is now all but reduced to a sobbing wreck. "A-and I'm saving myself for marriage! T-there's nothing WRONG with waiting!"

She lifts up her face to look at you, and...for a moment, there, she looked exactly like how Noriko was, earlier.

"W-Warmaster, please, you agree with me, right--?!"

How do you respond?

She's the most endearing things. Canonically she's an (extremely) immortal badass who went so far than to save her (extremely) immortal girlfriend when she needed it. She's ruthless, doesn't hesitate to take action, and not a little self-centred.

First appearance.

Now she's a NEET who won't leave her basement and play video games all days. Her immortal girlfriend attends to her every need, and she's incapable to fight without Eirin.

Now, her character is pretty malleable, and she's found in fandom in NEET-form, murderous form, and all in between.

You stare at the desperate, tearful Callidus Rank Leader, before nodding slowly. ...Yes, you agree. Absolutely. Giving your virginity to someone is an important thing. Once given, it can't be returned, and waiting for the right person to give it to is perfectly reasonable. Much more classy than just spreading your legs for the first guy that comes around with a fat payslip - or a Warmaster with sharp metal shit for hands and feet. You're not even sure yourself if you've ever gotten laid, but you don't stress yourself out about it.

And no, before she asks, you don't think she looks fat at all.

Enishi's eyes go wide at this, before she smiles - and it's then that you have the split-second premonition that she would be hugging you any moment now. Horrifically, this is proven true, as she all but moves forward, both arms open, about to trap you into a silken embrace.

You manage to step back the exact moment she does so, one hand unconsciously straying to your Desert Eagle's holster. Enishi blinks at this again, before seemingly snapping out of her maudlin tantrum and managing to get herself back together again.

"I...I apologize for that, Warmaster. I forgot myself for a moment, there, as well as Mami-san's warning about how you value your personal space. For..." She takes a deep breath, here. "For that, I apologize. And I thank you for showing such wisdom that is now unfortunately uncommon in our Officio - and I daresay current society." Enishi sniffs here, and makes to wipe at her nose with her sleeve - but stops short of it, and does so with a handkerchief pulled from a pocket in her kimono somewhere.

Sisters. You allow her a few moments to yourself, before asking her if she'll be okay.

Enishi nods after a moment, dabbing at her eyes. "I'll...I'll be fine, Warmaster. As...as scathing and fraudulent that document is, it's not going to affect me or the way I handle myself in this operation. I am a Karasawa, and a Karasawa never breaks, not even the face of death - o-or immoral, freelance scum wallowing in yellow journalism!" She takes her phone from you, shooting the screen a dark look. "Once I find out who had the gall to tell her these things, I'll..." Enishi falls silent, shaking her head, seething now.

She shouldn't take it so seriously, you tell her, reaching forward to give her a comradely slap - when all too late, you notice that your hand is aiming too low for that mark.

Way, way lower than that.

The smack your hand makes against soft, silk-encased Callidus bottom is deafeningly loud. And immediately, you realize that she's not wearing any underwear.

"A-ah! W-Warmaster, please...!" Enishi moans, turning to look at you, blushing crimson. "I...I mean, I don't mind, but..." She looks around furtively, before trying to meet your eyes. She doesn't succeed. "This...this NECO person may spot us again, and...and my younger sister is here..."

How do you react?

"Oh...?" Enishi seems to go quiet at this, a look of mild disappointment on her face. "Ah. I...I see, Warmaster. So, just a misunderstanding, then...?"

You nod. Just. A. Misunderstanding.

"Right. Of course, Warmaster. Just a misunderstanding." She giggles slightly at this, and you manage a bland, lame smile at this. Sharing the awkward joke between the both of you.

"Yes, well. Um. I suppose I should get back to my duties then, Warmaster. There's a few musclebound oafs in need of enlightening about Callidus, I suppose." Enishi finally seems to pull herself together enough to be professional again. "And I would recommend for the Warmaster to get some sleep, if possible. Squad Hiryu and I will keep vigil along with the security detail."

You don't really need to sleep, you begin to protest, before she raises a hand carefully.

"You are the last line of defense for our Principal, Warmaster, along with Sayaka-san." The Callidus Rank Leader says carefully, respectfully. "You need to be rested and well-alert if you are to be at top shape for tomorrow." She pouts, here. "And think of your image, Warmaster! You'll be on air tomorrow. Do you really need bigger eyebags to show everyone in the world during the webcast?"

...You don't care much for how you're seen--

"If I may be so bold, Warmaster," And she definitely is being so now, "...you may not care, but we do. You are our Warmaster. You are our ideal, our leader, our model. Of course we care about how you're seen, because that is how all the other Officios will see us." She frowns slightly down at you. "I do not mean any disrespect, and I realize that you are accustomed to duties that do not take outward appearances to consideration."

...You're a Vindicare. Of course. All that mattered back then is what you shot died.

"Yes. But you are Warmaster now, and you do carry with you all of our...our hopes and dreams, for lack of a better way of putting it, Matsuda-sama." She smiles. "The new hairstyle is certainly a start, in any case. But please, consider that the Warmaster of any Officio needs to look presentable. Even Kharn fussed with her hair and skin whenever she thought no one was watching."

Oh. Huh. Well.

The Callidus curtseys here. "I hope you'll take my suggestions into consideration, and forgive me for speaking out of turn. I take my leave now, then."

You watch the kimono-clad Karasawa stride back towards where the elevator should be, the blue glow once more blossoming in her cupped hand. Putting your smartphone back in your inventory, and placing your now-empty glass of ice coffee - you reach up to pull the Warmaster Cap off of your head, turning it in your hand to look at the winged skull emblem embroidered on the front. Kharn's symbol, if you remember correctly. All Warmasters get to pick their own.

So...you need to start caring about your looks more, huh?

Man. And to think the only thing you cared about back then was getting to the bottom of a bottle without throwing up too much.

It's then that you hear laughing from Sayaka's door. ...The Blueberry, finding something funny? Huh.

Warmasters are serious business. Association with the doujin is a bad thing. As Enishi said, we need to mind our apperance, and Murder Mayumi is not a role model for Chiaki, even if it's based on her.

We need something personal, related to Chiaki's persona instead of an erotic idealization mass printed for people to masturbate over. The cracked shield, the deagle, or something referencing the FLESH OF FALLEN ANGELS would make good insignias.

You narrow your eyes at Sayaka's door. Alright, you've seen her having fun during the pool shoot, and during the interview. You've also seen her have a good time during the practice, where she practically made the entire idol cast try and catch up to her. But now, her, giggling behind closed doors and not being the total megabitch that she is? This isn't some sort of fucking parallel universe, this is the real world. She's having fun, and you're putting a stop to that right now.

Making a note to talk to Mami about your future emblem - you knock smartly on the Blueberry's door. You've got her surrounded, you tell her, the fun-loving criminal. Fun compromises the sanctity of the state. Fun is the enemy - stop having fun!

The giggling doesn't stop, even when Sayaka's all but pulled her door open to address you. "What...what the fuck do you want, Murderface?" The Blueberry here is actually near tears - mirroring Enishi's state earlier, but for a completely different reason. She's holding her own smartphone in her other hand, and even from here you could see that it's open to a Chirpee page. "C-Charm F...f-for fat! Nrmph...phahahaHAHAHA!"

...Ah. So she's reading that profile, huh.

"I always thought that smug bitch was hiding something," Sayaka manages to stifle her giggling enough to grin. "Hah. All those days of being called a fuckin' band nerd...payback time's a bitch, ain't it, Karasawa? And she was bragging about having three boyfriends at once! HAH!"

Therese thrummed her fingers on her desk. Everything had gone wrong. The plane had already left by the time she had reached the airport, taking nearly a half dozen soulgems to the other end of the country. Worse yet, a serial kidnapper was unaccounted for and she had somehow taken one of the most powerful girls in the Officio with her.

"God DAMN it!" The rusty-haired girl shouted as she slammed a fist on her desk. "What the FUCK happened last night?!"

A second girl sat across from her, her bangs pulled aside by a pair of hair-clips looked on with an expression that said all that she wanted to.

"This isn't your fault, you know-"

"I'm the WARMASTER for god's sake!" Therese yelled, seething with rage. "And I can't handle one girl and a bunch of no-name thugs?! Do you understand what that says about me? What that tells the other girls and god forbid the other warmasters!"

"You know what I think," Tyler said, giving the warmaster a knowing look, "I think this is Brighton's fault-"

"Oh shut the hell up, Tyler!" The warmaster groaned with a roll of her eyes. "You just don't know when to quit, do you?"

"Think about it!" The aide countered, leaning over her superior's desk. "Holly told me what happened. She said that Brighton over-ruled your plan and you went with it! You just let her boss you around!"

"MY plan?" Therese replied. "Even I know that my plan was stupid. What would we have gained if we just stormed the building, hm? A PR nightmare-"

"Time." Tyler stated bluntly. "You could have beat them to the punch. But instead you let Brighton waste time feeling the place out, sniffing around for shit like a dog-"

"You're honestly going to play this card NOW? I can't believe you," Therese shook her head while her hand reached under the desk and wrapped around her enormous warhammer. "My mentor- My FRIEND might be DEAD and you're going to turn this against her?!"

"We're not the police, Terry. We don't need to abide by those sorts of procedures. If we think someone is up to something, we don't sit around with our thumbs up our asses waiting for evidence. We kick their fucking teeth in and make them wish they never crossed us."

"We're not some street gang," the warmaster replied through gritted teeth, "we need to operate efficiently and with a modicum of restraint. In a moment of thoughtlessness I forgot that and Odette kindly reminded me."

"Will you EVER stop brown-nosing that degenerate?" Tyler shouted, standing up from her seat to pace about the room. "Jesus, you keep looking for excuses why this is somehow not her fault-"

"And YOU keep looking for reasons to shove her face in the dirt!" Therese roared. Bursts of static crackled and popped at her fingertips as she bit her lip, almost to the point of drawing blood. "You are seriously testing my patience here, Tyler. I don't know how Odette pissed in your cereal, but if you hope to keep your position you will get your pathetic vulture ass out of my office THIS INSTANT."

Tyler gave the warmaster a stern nod before turning on her heel and exiting the room without a word. Therese gritted her teeth and closed her eyes before flicking her hammer into the air, then bringing it crashing down upon her desk, cracking it in two.

"DAMN IT!" She cursed, breathing heavily.

She respected the previous warmaster far too much to openly admit that her own plan would have been a better option. It was a reckless, foolhardy plan, but it would have worked. Therese shook her head, desperately trying to get the thought out of her mind. Her eyes flicked to the PA system built into the ceiling.

Personally I like the star, hahaha! It kind of matches Insane Black Rock Shooter's symbol, and is kind of a dig against the Eighth Officio's symbol (which is a sheriff's star). The rose at the center looks like a gunshot thing that shattered it.

"Holly!" She roared, her lip still quivering with rage.

A moment passed before the intercom crackled to life and the Vanus' voice rang out. "What's up, boss?"

"Send someone to clean up my office," the warmaster grumbled, scooping up her cap from the desk and fixing it on her head. "If anyone needs me, I'll be in the training room."

"Aye-aye, cap'n," Holly answered. "The boss wants to talk to you whenever you're available, but take it easy. Nobody needs another warmaster flying off the handle. Not again."

"Well, that's just peachy."

Mechanical fingers tapped at a glowing blue LCD screen, a distinct sound of whirring servos and hissing hydraulics in the background.

"Clean up crew to the warmaster's office," Holly called out over the building's PA system. "Clean up crew to the warmaster's office. Thank you."

The Vanus' work station was unlit, save the back-lighting of the numerous screens that surrounded her, while wires criss-crossed over the floor, leading to and from enormous computer towers and server cases. The Vanus sat in a large beanbag chair, her chin rested upon one knee, wearing little more than her usual pyjamas. Her long, raven black hair tapered down her back, over the chair and splayed out across the floor. Holly couldn't remember the last time she'd bothered cutting it.

A ham and swiss sandwich slowly appeared over her shoulder, clutched by a pair of thick, metal grippers. The mechadendrite reached just far enough to allow Holly a bite before pulling off to the side, out of her way. Her prosthetic hands tapped at the control interface once more, calling up an image of the Seventeenth incubator curled into a round, white ball upon his desk.

"Wake up, Chunky," the Vanus called out, "your warmaster just messed up her office. Again."

The incubator's body barely even moved as his thick head swivelled up to look at his own monitor. His prehensile moustache unfurled, then tapped at his keyboard with slow, lazy motions. After a few moments, his response seemed to sail through Holly's speakers without his mouth moving an inch.

"That hardly seems reason to wake me. The warmaster's anger management problems have been a well-documented segment of her employment."

"I'm going to sound like a broken record here but," the Vanus's prosthetic fingers stretched over her interface as she let out a long sigh, "it's not too late. She's not warmaster material, boss."

"Even if the matter were on the table to discuss," Fubey answered, tapping through screens as he spoke, "I dare say that we don't have very many options."

"Options? Harry could do it. Hell, she'd be great at it. The helmets already see her as some kind of team mom."

"My reasoning for her lack of consideration remains the same as it was two months ago," the incubator briefly pulled up the file of the Culexus rank leader before dismissing it just as quickly. "A Culexus warmaster would garner far more attention than it is worth. We get by as we do by keeping a low profile."

"Or maybe you could have trained Therese a bit more instead of tossing Odette like a bag of flaming piranhas..."

"Will that be all, Miss Corbin?" Fubey asked, turning his head to look directly into the camera in the corner of his office.

"Yeah," Holly answered, running a mechanical hand through her long, silken black hair, "yeah. That'll be all. Cunt."

"Good, good. Tell me, how does Miss Bernard fare?"

"Stabilized," Holly mumbled, taking another bite of her sandwich. "Should be waking up any time now."

"Excellent," the incubator replied, clasping his moustache together. "I believe I shall go visit them shortly. Will that be all?"

"Yeah, whatever."

"Don't forget, I do expect that memo to go out to everyone today. Good bye for now, Miss Corbin."

A second mechadendrite placed a large pair of headphones over the Vanus' ears as the image of the incubator blinked out of existence. With another few keystrokes, Holly's enormous sound system came to life, filling her ears with thrumming bass and lighting the room with bouncing LCD bars. The incubator had seen to it that her prison be furnished with any amenity she could possibly ask for, with the sole exception of human contact, of course.

Holly shook her head, then finished the rest of her sandwich - just in time to answer yet another summons. Such was life in the Crow's Nest. Such had been the Vanus' life for as long as she could remember.

Mona cracked open a sleepy eye. Late afternoon light filtered into the room through shut curtains. Everything seemed to ache; all of her pains melded together as one, stretching over her entire body. Her eyes adjusted slowly, trying to make out the shapes of her surroundings. The walls were an off-white, thin tubes snaked around and over her every which way and a blurry, black sphere hovered a couple feet over her bed.

"Mornin', sleepy-head!"

Mona groaned, trying to pull her head up, but getting stuck with her ponytail caught under her back.

"Hold on, hold on. I gotcha."

Someone reached behind her head, pulling her hair around in a blatant violation of her personal space. She could only think of one person with the audacity to do so. One single person who really didn't seem to abide by the rules of social etiquette.

"Meg," Mona groaned.

"Heeeeya, buddy," Meg drawled, a bright grin plastered across her face. "How you feelin', champ?"

The bed-ridden Eversor groaned as thoughts and memories from the previous night trickled into her mind. Her father was dead. Last she remembered, she was down a leg. Probably had most of her internal organs punctured or out-right torn to pieces. Mona sighed as she gave her partner a squinting glare.

"Pretty shitty," she grumbled, resting her head back against the pillow. "What happened last night?"

"Um," the shorter Eversor bit her lip and furrowed her brow, "that's... that's kind of a big question. Where should I start?"

"I'm assuming dad's..." Mona trailed off, her eyes wandering. The other girl could only look down and nod silently. Mona nodded in kind, her head bobbing up and down as she struggled with the thought, eyes stinging and growing hot. "Di- Did," she stammered, fighting to form the words on the tip of her tongue, "did Odette get that bitch? Did she keep her alive?"

"That's," Meg mumbled while her fingers tangled in the sheets, "that's, um... Nobody's heard from either of them. We, er, we think that she took the warmaster with her. F-former warmaster, that is."

Mona blinked, confusion suddenly halting her tears. "What?"

The other girl simply shook her head. "Nobody knows what happened. Nobody's saying anything about it either. Foobers is keeping it all hushed up," she mumbled. "I heard," Meg sniffed as a tear rolled down her cheek, suddenly losing control of her voice's volume, "I heard some other girls saying he was going to just let her go!"

"WHAT?!"

"I don't know!" Meg shouted, wiping her eyes with a sleeve. "It's just a rumour or something, I don't-"

"Alright, alright," Mona sighed with a sniffle, "it's just a rumour. Don't get so worked up, dummy. So, uh, any- any word on dad's funeral?"

"Oh, uh, yeah, hold on," the other girl reached into her pocket, producing a well-used notepad, then quickly flipped through pages of doodles and other scribbles before reaching the one she wanted. "They, uh, they're postponing it until after you're out. The boss pulled some strings with the company and stuff. So no worries there."

"That's- that's good, I guess," Mona mumbled, fighting to put on a smile. "So, um, how am I?"

"You, uh," Meg flipped a few more pages over in her notepad, "you're about as fixed as necessary. Your leg is intact, but a lot of your guts are still reforming. Gonna be on soft foods for a while."

"Skip to the part where you tell me when I get out."

"Uh, lemme see," the short Eversor squinted, her eyes flicking back and forth as she read, "looks like you'll be in for a couple weeks. Gotta do a little therapy to make sure everything's in order and they want you here for that."

"Great," Mona groaned. "This is going to be a fun two weeks."

"Yeah, I figured you'd be bored a lot, so," Meg bent down, grunting as she placed a stack of books on the side of the bed, "I prepared some reading material!"

"Tell me that's not what I think it is."

"Every translated volume of The Steamy Adventures of Miracle Melanie and Murder Marjorie!" Meg shouted with glee as she gave the small pile a few good slaps. "You can probably get through the whole ba-"

"No."

"Whaaaat?" The smaller Eversor whined, her eyes nearly tearing up again. "Why not?"

"I'm not reading your damn lesbian comics, Meg," Mona stated as she sat up and crossed her arms. "That's final."

"Oh, come on," Meg said, trying her best to wiggle over in her seat to nudge the other girl with her elbow. "How 'bout I leave them here and, y'know, maybe you read them... maybe you don't... who knows?"

Mona heaved a sigh and shook her head. "Just... Just put them under the bed or something if you leave them here. I don't want the nurses thinking I'm into your weird cartoons."

"Hey!" The other girl shouted, slapping a hand down on the books once more. "These have deep and intricate plots that someone like you couldn't even begin to understand!"

"Just the other day you said that it was stupid bullshit that you weren't supposed to take seriously."

Meg squinted. "Uh, y- No. Nope. Uh, that- that doesn't sound like me. I'm pretty sure, uh, I'm pretty sure I wouldn't say something like that."

"You did," Mona stated pointedly, narrowing her eyes.

"Well, I guess we'll just have to agree to disagree on that one then."

Mona rolled her eyes and slumped back down on the bed, shimmying down under the covers. "If that's all then I'm going back to sleep," she muttered as her eyelids grew heavier. "I'll cry when I have a whole heart."

"Oh, just one more thing then," Meg said as she stowed her memopad away. "Everyone got an email from Chunkbey a couple hours ago. Apparently he wants everyone in the Officio to report to him by the end of the month to amend our contracts."

"Is he allowed to do that?"

"I guess," the short Eversor shrugged, thumbing through her smartphone. "He says whoever doesn't report in will lose their grief seed payment until they do. He wants to change it so that he can keep an eye on us through our soulgems like the other Officios do. I heard a lot of the other girls were really pissed about it."

"Makes sense," Mona grumbled. "Tell him he can come and do mine whenever he's free."

"Alright, I'll send him a text or something," Meg replied, taking a seat and putting her feet up on an adjacent chair. "This is gonna be so lame. Incubator or not, I don't need my boss knowing what kind of porn I look at."

The bed-ridden girl propped herself up on her elbow and and furrowed her brow, squinting at Meg. "You're not going?"

"Nah," she answered, "I've got time off until you're better, so I can stick around until they kick me out. I guess the boss didn't want to chance sticking me with a different partner. And, y'know, in case you need anything or something."

"Ah. Ok then," Mona murmured, pulling the sheets further over herself, just past her mouth. "I mean, you don't have to..."

"That's what friends are for, dork," Meg laughed.

The taller girl rolled over in bed, trying to hide how red her face had become. For years she'd never had someone close enough to call a friend. She'd always moved around too much or been too intimidating to approach. She'd known that they were friends, of course, but something about hearing it said aloud hit her right down to her core.

"Thanks."

Lotte Laufson stepped down the stone stairway leading to a cozy pub nestled below ground on a busy street corner. It was a place frequented by just about everyone in Seventeenth who fancied a drink before, after or even during work. It was a homey, well-kept establishment, furnished with mahogany and polished brass. There was always some band or singer playing on the low wooden stage; more often than not one of the Officio's own girls. Lotte herself had long been something of a favourite among the bar's regulars. She'd grown a penchant for slower, more somber tunes, playing a contrast to the owner's habit of singing foot-stomping folk songs with her low, growling, cigarette-stained voice. More often than not the two ended up performing together, with the Bartender's guitar backing up Lotte's vocals.

The Callidus slipped in almost unnoticed amongst the usual racket, nervously tugging on her parka jacket. She moved along the edge of the bar at a brisk pace, eventually sliding into a booth already occupied by another - a shorter girl wearing a deep crimson hoodie with the hood pulled up, nearly obscuring her face.

"It's damn chilly out," Lotte remarked, shivering as she nudged further into the booth.

"I'll say," the other girl responded. "Is it always like this up here? I heard Canada was cold, but this..."

"Things get unpredictable at this time of year," the Callidus explained as she leaned over the table, rubbing her cold hands together. "Freezing one day, hot as hell the next."

Lotte's companion nodded as she made a muffled grunt of acknowledgement. "I'm guessing you didn't call me here to talk about the weather."

"It's about Odette."

"Christ, you have a hard-on for that chick," the hooded girl laughed. "I shoulda known considering she's damn near all you ever talk about."

"She's gone."

The girl blinked. "I'm sorry, what?"

"Vanished," Lotte stated. "We think that crazy hook bitch took her. Well, we're pretty fuckin' sure, but we don't know where, why or how."

"Well shit," the hooded figure muttered, bringing a hand to her chin. "That's a bit of a wrench in our plans."

"Puts a hell of a lot more than a wrench in them, if you ask me."

"Lotte, lemme tell you something," the girl said, leaning over the table. "If we let one girl disappearing get in the way of our plans, we wouldn't have shit. Gimme a day or two and I'll have something. Our plans may get delayed, but never stopped. We know how to play blackjack, if you catch my drift."

"Yeah?" Lotte snorted. "Well counting cards won't get you shit if the dealer suddenly says we're playing craps."

"That supposed to mean something or are you just being a snarky jackass?"

The blonde gave the hooded girl a sly grin before she slid her cellphone across the table. The other girl took it, then read it slowly. After a few moments she shook her head and passed it back.

"Shit," she muttered, holding a hand to her forehead. "Well that changes things."

"Like I said," Lotte replied with more than a hint of derision in her voice, "the game's changed. You've got a month before you're boned. After that, I can't help you and neither can anyone else in this Officio."

"No, no," the stranger said, shaking her head. "Shit, Lotte, you don't get it. This means EVERYONE in your Officio has to report in. Even the retired ones."

"What's your point?"

"The Seventeenth probably has one of the highest numbers of retired magical girls. The nice kind of retired, with spas and shuffleboard and shit. These girls get a small amount of grief seeds as a pension," the hooded figure explained as she began to gesture with her hands. "Now, their soulgems are marked as inactive so they don't accumulate grief, but every now and then... Y'know. You don't get magic powers and then sit around with your thumb up your ass all day. So they need grief seeds every now and then."

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 11 END archivalfag 08/08/13(Thu)12:58 No.26508874

"Let's be optimistic and say they get two seeds a month," the other girl began to count off on her fingers as she went. "If our numbers are right, you've got somewhere around four hundred retirees. That's eight hundred grief seeds going out per month. Eight hundred a month means nearly ten thousand per year - and remember, that's being optimistic and assuming these girls are half-way responsible, which I really doubt."

The girl leaned forward to the point where Lotte could actually make out most of her facial features. She looked distantly familiar, like someone she had seen every day but didn't actually know. A wicked grin crossed the girl's face - a grin that sent shivers down even Lotte's spine.

"So say someone decides to off a couple retirees. Maybe they get someone of a certain set of talents to take their place and collect their seeds, or hell, maybe the proper paperwork just so happens to get lost along the way," the girl's teeth flashed in the dim light of the pub. "Your fat ass incubator's been a big help to a certain little niche of the black market."

Lotte's mouth hung open. "And he doesn't even know it..."

The hooded girl made a shooting motion with her fingers as she let out a short chuckle. "Bingo. And if he suddenly starts keeping records of this shit, that's bad news for all of us."

"Well shit, Surrey," Lotte said with a shrug. "I'm sorry, but that's not exactly my problem, now is it? Just means I can't hang out with bad influences like you."

"Yeah, yeah, laugh it up," Surrey muttered, waving the blonde off. "Go sing us something. I've got work to do."

There was also this one.

Didn't like what turned out, redid it again.

Uses the whiskey glass as a shield border. Empty, showing the commitment not to get completely rip roaring drunk.

Anyone looking at it might think it was just an odd border. Only those who know Chiaki's history would recognise it.

Still need to clean up that base image again.

Uhhh... no shit? It happened in the Maximum Christmas when Kyoko gave everyone presents, it happened in the Coobs flashback when we recruited Yuma despite it normally being against Coob's policy, Kharn's panty collection started when we kept Nero's panties,

Why would you even think what we do in the flashbacks have no bearing on the present?

Hell, Canon events actually change depending on what we do. It was mentioned in the passing that the first time Girl A killed coobs was when he visited her in her apartment, and then that changed when we had coobs visit her in the silent room during his flashback.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/10/13(Sat)08:14 No.26541547

You tell Sayaka that you heard the strangest noise coming from inside her room, and you wanted to investigate it. It was a strange, disturbing noise, alien and impossible - bringing to mind some sort of terrifying, eldritchian horror. You wondered if the Tenth was using Witches against its targets, now.

"...What? A witch makin' noise in my room?" Sayaka's eyes go wide, and she turns back to her own room. "B-but I didn't hear anything, I didn't even have the TV on, and--" It's then that she seems to get at what you're saying, her eyes narrowing as she turns back to you, her signature scowl set on her face.

"Oh, ha ha, very funny, Murderface." She punches you in the arm for that - and the fact that it simply hurt like a bitch rather than having your entire limb tumble away from your body in a juicy, meaty rip tells you that she's in too good of a mood to actually be pissed off. You half-heartedly murmur something approximating 'ouch' and rub at the spot, narrowing your eyes at her.

"It may surprise you to learn that an annoying, full time megabitch like me actually knows how to display other human emotions besides anger and rage, thank you very much." The shadow of a grin plays on Sayaka's lips. "Unlike SOME people I know." She says, looking at you pointedly.

...But you also know how to show emotions other than those two, too...

"Like what, then?" The blue-haired Eversor crosses her arms underneath her chest. ...It's here that you realize that Sayaka's pulled on a simple, sheer white nightgown that ended in mid-thigh. You thought she was more of a pajama type herself. "Something besides 'Drunk Murderface' and 'Angry Murderface' and 'Hangover Murderface'?"

Welp. She's got you a bit figured out there. But she forgot about the Murderface that's happy about the promised pancakes, the Murderface that is VERY happy about eating the given pancakes, and the Murderface that's sad because there are no longer any pancakes.

"..." Sayaka looks at you with a strange expression, as if trying to figure out if you're fucking with her somehow. You half-expect her to burst out laughing while calling you a liar, but she instead nods curtly, seriously. "Yeah, guess I did. Forgot that you've really got it bad for Mami-san's pancakes." She shrugs at this. "Eh, well, not like anyone can blame you. They're pretty good."

They're not just good, they're perfect. They're heavenly. You still can't get over how the very first bite is so perfectly soft and warm and delicious at the same time, and...and it stays that way until the last bite.

"Oh, fuck, I totally know what you mean." Sayaka's mildly-irritated expression turns into one of intense longing. "I love how they're so soft and so light that they actually melt on your tongue if you don't put any syrup on them and you don't chew..."

It's here, then, that you share what may be the first commonality between you and the usually-combative Eversor. It's...kind of strange, when you consider that all your past interactions barring this one had the both of you mere inches from killing each other.

Suddenly, you hear a growl coming from the regions of Sayaka's torso, and you look at her mutely. She blinks at you, before reddening as she covers her stomach with a hand. "What?! It's a normal reaction! You got me thinking about Mami-san's pancakes, for fuck's sake! Gah, I'll have to order something from Room Service later, or I won't be able to sleep..."

. . .Well. Anyway. You wanted to talk to her regarding that profile she was reading. Specifically, the person who just eviscerated the Callidus Rank Leader over the internet.

"Oh, this NECO person, huh?" Sayaka nods. "Yeah, she interviewed me once. Said it was for a school project or something." She pauses here. "Huh, funny thing, really. For a kid she really knew her stuff about Magical Girls. She had this really big scrapbook about sightings and articles and stuff...kinda like an MG otaku, something like that." She shrugs. "What do you wanna know?"

How do you respond?

...She actually knows NECO? NECO actually interviewed her in person? Once?

"Well, I...I guess there was also that one time when she ambushed me having lunch? Back when you were fooling around with Kharn in Siberia?" Sayaka scratches the back of her head, a frown curling her llips. "...Actually you know, now that I remember, she fast-talked me into buying her Ramen at Hanegawa's...ah, god dammit, now that makes me hungry AND irritated. She even ordered the premium set, that little runt!"

So that makes twice, then. Twice she's interviewed Sayaka. Would it be reasonable to assume, then, that she can give you a physical description of her?

"I...I guess?" The blue-haired Eversor blinks at you, her brow furrowing. "Wait, are you gonna try and hunt her down or something? Because you're just wasting your time, you know." She waves a hand in casual dismissal. "Tried it myself when I first saw her snoopin' around, publishing stuff about me and Kyoko. Asked Kyuubey if I could do the hit myself, unpaid, but he flat-out refused. Said something about plausible deniability or something, free PR and intel, that kinda stuff."

You didn't say you were going to hunt her down, though.

"Yeah, but I could tell you were thinking it." She narrows her eyes at you. "Anyway, what's up? Surely you're not offended about being called a noodly ass fetishist?"

...No. You hardly care what other people see you as. But what you're sore about is people snooping around and making a mockery of the operation.

"Snooping around? The hell are you talking about?"

Didn't she see the other stuff that NECO had been chirping on her account?

"What? I...no, I kinda follow a lot of people, I only saw the profiles..." She looks down at her smartphone and taps at the screen a few times. Her eyes going wide, then wider, then nearly bugging out as she reads further down the amateur reporter's timeline. Swearing underneath her breath.

"She...she was here?! She was tailing us the entire time?!" Sayaka looks up at you, the color drained from her face. "T-that little...!"

You give her the card that NECO left in one of the rooms. You tell her that Squad Hiryu found it along with what could have been her disguise.

"...FUCK!" Sayaka swears loudly enough that it echoes around the corridor the both of you are standing in. "I...Murderface, the fuck. I knew she snoops around but I didn't know she fucking sneaks into places like a goddamn Callidus! And I didn't even sense anyone hiding here when we got back, and I'm usually good with that kind of thing--"

You give her a look, before shaking your head. You're not blaming anyone for this more than you're blaming yourself. Still, you want this kind of thing to stop, and one way of doing that is to let NECO know that Magical Girl Ops are simply not the time to snoop around.

"...Right Yeah. I...I know that, but..." It seems Sayaka's still stunned at this development. "...Christ. I should've been paying more attention. I don't mind that it's NECO, but letting her get in here without even detected...fuck." She clicks her tongue in annoyance. "This isn't going to happen again. Not again, Murderface. You can quote me on that. Nothing else is going to infiltrate this op without my shoving a blade up their ass."

Yes, that's all very disturbing and scary, but you'd like that physical description.

"Right. Uh...let's see." Sayaka holds a fist to her forehead. "Short blonde hair, sort of shoulder length, with a small cowlick up top. Red eyes. Cute face, looks like a foreigner." She looks at you, before placing her hand flat and level a few inches over your head.

You nod at this, filing the information away in your mind. Nice to finally put a face on the person you'll--

"You'll what?" Sayaka looks back at you sharply. "Murderface, I know you're butthurt that our security got fucked, but are you really going to kill a kid over this? Seriously?"

Either she or her assistant may well be

I actually think though that Neco trained under one

See I was doing some thinking and while callidus powers are great for getting about they would also be very draining on the soul gem

Think about Midori's power. It literally encases someone in a separate reality in which they are dreaming and cannot wake up, it took Pinky's intervention to get Murderface out, such power would come at a very steep cost and so it is something that you wouldn't use often, the disguise spells are simpler but still not something you would want to maintain for hours at a time because the cost in grief seeds would ruin any incubator who is running more than a few callidus like that

So they would be trained in mundane ways first and fall back on their magic if needed or save it until they reached their target

And then if one retires in the actual spas and shuffleboard sense and not the chunky salsa sense they could be an extremely good teacher for someone

She's free to watch us work, if we can't spot her and she doesn't fuck with shit. But no live updates; release everything at least 24 hours after the fact so we don't risk the people we're supposed to be protecting getting killed by well-informed assassins.

Basically, make her aware that this is less about stopping Magical Girl exposure, and more about stopping her from inadvertently being responsible for somebody's death or kidnapping.

It's here that you feel what little camaraderie that you've built up with Sayaka crumble away as you feel her withering stare on you. You return it with your own, but...well, even you can't return that kind of disgust and revulsion.

"Christ, you don't fuck around, do you?" Sayaka growls underneath her breath, before shaking her head. "...No, don't answer that. Fine, I'll admit that what she did was excessive. I'll tell her myself." You open your mouth to say that you'll do it on your own, but she holds up a hand.

"Murderface, I know you're my Warmaster, and I'll say this as civilly as I possibly can: if I find out that you even so much as aim a gun at her, I will go rogue and hunt you down. And then I'll add your skull personally to Kharn's throne."

She snarls this threat out, and for a moment there you actually feel nostalgic - it's the same kind of venom that she usually spat at you before this mission even began. "We are Magical Girls of the Ninth, Murderface. We are not the Tenth. We do not hurt, kill or strong-arm kids who don't know any better. Are we clear on that?"

...What's she being protective of NECO about? Didn't she want to hunt her down, too? You knew Sayaka was many things, but not a hypocrite.

"That was before I realized she's...she's as far divorced from our line of work as possible! She's not contracted or anything, I checked!" The blue-haired Eversor shakes her head. "First time she interviewed me she was a freshman, o-or something. Just an upbeat kid who really bought into the hype of Magical Girls even though I told her some of the shit we get up into. She was so happy to find out that Magical Girls are real, and she's...she thinks we're heroes, Murderface."

It's here that Sayaka's voice lowers as she looks down. "And she's trying to tell the world in her own way that we exist, and she's writing down stuff about us so that someone else other than our clients and fucking alien cats can remember us when we either die or Witch out." A moment. "Do you want that kind of thing to stop, huh?"

...No. You just want to plug any potential security holes before NECO's investigative journalism gets someone killed. Or is she okay with that too, so long as someone's writing about her? Would she be okay when one of NECO's hilarious chirps gets Kyoko or Mami killed, because she gave away their position during a firefight?

The look Sayaka gives you is no longer one of disgust or revulsion, but one of disappointed pity. "...Man. And here I was actually thinking that you were getting better, Murderface." She lets out a hollow laugh. "Figures. I guess it's true what they say in America - something about a leopard not being able to change his shorts, or something."

...Spots, you correct her. Leopard not being able to change his spots.

"Spots, shorts. Same difference." Sayaka shakes her head. "I'll tell her myself, okay, Murderface? I don't want you going anywhere near her."

As long as this dickwaving about sneaking around while you're trying to protect a VIP doesn't get repeated again - or at least, WHILE the op is fucking running. Then you'll think about not shooting her kneecaps off.

I'll be your loyal Equerry, whatever you want, and I'll dance like a fucking tool if you ask me to. But I want your word as Warmaster that you're not going to try and 'negotiate' the way you usually do."

I see Sayaka as our advisor. She acts the same way but has an entirely different way of thinking. If our two different schools of though can converge on the same action then it's likely a universally good idea.

Kyouko is our face. We are not a people persona and we know that all too well. When more tact than a loaded gun is needed shes the one we go to. Living with Sayaka has given her plenty of experience in being diplomatic under stress and enmity.

Midori is our confidant. We've let her into our introverted and antisocial world more than anyone else and she has our unwaivering trust. Be it a friendly ear or a warm back she's there for us.

Chiaki made excellent decisions in covering her weaknesses.

You glare at her for a good while, before shaking your own head, mirroring the disappointment she obviously felt.

What does she think you are, another Incubator? She doesn't have to sell her soul to you to get what she wants. If NECO means so much to her, then you'll leave NECO alone. She can take that to court if she wants. You promise you won't harm a hair on NECO's head.

"..." Sayaka withdraws her fist after a few moment's worth of tense silence. When she speaks, her voice is taut, tightly controlled. "That's all I wanted to hear, Murderface. And I'll be holding you to that promise." She turns her back on you, one hand reaching for her suite's door handle. "'Night."

You shake your head again. You're...you're not usually one to be disappointed at Sayaka, but you are now, you have to say. Disappointed and saddened that she took you seriously. For a moment there, you thought you were beginning to connect, finally - but it seems she still can't trust you.

The blue-haired Eversor is silent for a moment. "...Yeah. I thought we were, too. It really sucks. But you talking like that like it didn't mean anything, Murderface..." She doesn't even turn to look at you. "Made everything you did suddenly come rushing back to me. Even if you don't remember them, or don't care about them. And yeah, I know it's fucking unprofessional of me to bring this up during an op, but I still hate your guts for them."

. . .You find yourself unable to reply to that.

"Go ahead and get some sleep. I'll...I'll go ahead and stand watch along with the help for the first half of the night." Sayaka lets out a breath. "Can't sleep now, any case. I'll just get changed, then start a patrol. I'll wake you up when it's your turn."

Sure. Fine, if that's what she wants.

"Yeah." She finally turns towards you, bowing curtly. "Goodnight, Warmaster." Her voice formal, stiff, completely devoid of any warmth it had earlier.

...Goodnight, you respond, before stepping back into Ruri's room. Into the dimly-lit darkness, the door closing behind you.

Well. That didn't go as well as you'd hoped.

You let out another sigh, before making your way towards the suite's couch. Ruri's still asleep - it doesn't look like she's moved at all while you were away. At least she's behaving now.

The couch lets out a wheeze as you lower yourself onto it. It's a really soft, comfortable piece of furniture - not as comfortable as your chair, but comfortable enough that you feel yourself getting lulled to sleep. You poke at the cushion a few times, squeezing it as you think about just what happened earlier.

...Surprisingly, you do feel a bit sad about it. It's...well, Sayaka. You've always hated each other. But to know that you were almost friends, and ruined it? Well.

You trust her enough, at least, to take her words at face value, that she wouldn't let this affect her performance. But...it is kind of depressing to think about.

You allow yourself to relax, and wish that things might better in the morning.

Taking off your glasses and hat - placing them beside you on the couch - you close your eyes and try to get some shuteye.

You open your eyes again after what seems like only a few moments...and find yourself in another room entirely.

It's not Ruri's suite, for one. It doesn't look like any room you've ever been in, although it does look slightly familiar.

It's a bedroom. A...shut-in's bedroom, it must be said. There's posters of rock bands and videogame characters on the walls. A study table with textbooks in the corner, a single pink hardcover on the desk itself. In another corner, there's a small television hooked up to a Famicom - and the screen is showing nothing but static. And the wall across from you is no wall, but rather a series of sliding glass doors, revealing a black night sky framed by a balcony.

And in place of the moon is...Pinky's spiked grief seed, wreathed by a pulsating corona of pink light.

But what's surprising you the most, now - besides finding yourself in yet another waking nightmare - is the fact that you're lying on a bed. Someone's bed. With that someone in the bed with you.

It's Wendy, lying on her stomach, lounging beside you with only a yellow T-shirt and panties on. She seems to be reading a Miracle Midori x Murder Mayumi manga volume - the original untranslated print.

At the foot of the bed is a rather professional-looking wig, green in color.

And your hand is squeezing her ass.

"...Oh, you're up." Wendy murmurs, deadpan, as if your hand being in that place is the most natural thing in the world. "Sorry. You were snoring pretty loudly, so I thought to let you sleep in."

How do you react?

It's implied that we took part in, or at the very least were there, when 99% of our Culexus-including Malal-died. It's also implied that either she, Kharn, or both are responsible for it happening in the first place.

When taken with the fact that we've apparently had Amnesia multiple times, I think that we might've witched out and one point. Homulily seems like something a whole mess of anti-magic people would need to die to stop.

You look down at the part of Wendy's anatomy that your hand is currently squeezing. ...Maybe, just maybe...NECO's profile on you is more accurate than you thought. Sure, what happened with Enishi earlier could have just been a fluke, or it could have just been the hat - but you're not wearing the hat right now, and you weren't even thinking of butts before you slept.

What's the deal about butts anyway? They're not particularly that exciting, are they? Sure, they're soft and fluffy, and in Wendy's case - you give her bottom a squeeze, causing her to make a small sound - a bit on the firm, yet pliant side - but they're just that.

You squeeze again to make sure. A couple more times, spreading your hand and fingers as wide as you possibly can to maximize your squeezing area. Wendy, still quiet, still watching you, doesn't even change expression, or even try to stop you - but with every small sound she makes, her cheeks get redder and redder, her mouth half-open as if about to tell you something but thinking better of it. Her hooded eyes staring at you but unfocused somewhat, half-glazed.

Still keeping your hand there, it's then that you tell her about...well, about what you find in Kharn's office, among her trophies. Her panties, you tell her. Laminated, even. Does she want it back?

"Oh. That. I...nnn." Wendy pauses here, closing her eyes briefly, still blushing. "...Yeah, sure. It's hard to find this kind anymore, I have to get it custom-made..."

You nod here, and take out the laminated panties from your inventory with your free hand and pass it to her. She takes it from you, snorting slightly at the lamination - before placing it underneath the book she's reading. "Thanks," she replies. "I've been looking for that. I didn't know Kharn took...trophies."

Neither did you, you tell her.The doujin in her hand crinkles slightly as you give her another squeeze. This...is actually pretty fun. You could do this all day, if you weren't in the middle of an operation.

"...I wouldn't mind." Wendy murmurs, before turning back to her manga. Continuing to make those small sounds with every squeeze.

"Pervert." You hear her mumble, although you could detect her being out of breath the slightest bit.

Anyway, sexual harrassment aside...this is a strange dream, isn't it? You thought it was going to be the bar, again. Where are you, anyway? It's a bedroom, sure, but whose?

"Mine," Wendy replies after a particularly-long squeeze from you. "I...nnn. Before I contracted. Used to lock myself here to keep the rest of the world out. Spent every day playing video games and eating whatever my parents slid under my door." She glances towards the door leading out of the room - it's heavily chained down, with cobwebs of yellow crime scene tape slashed across it. "I never went out much, until they decided that enough was...nngh...enough, and had me committed."

Committed? Like, in a relationship, or something...?

"...No," The brown-haired girl, still blushing, looks at you. "Thrown into a sanitorium. The place where crazy people live."

...Ah. That.

Well, it's... You look around. ...It's not as creepy or hostile as the bar, and it looks halfway normal. And you're in bed instead of getting drunk, so...that's a plus?

"Depends on how you're looking at it." Wendy murmurs. "And you've been groping me ever since you woke up. So I guess you're okay with this kind of dream."

How do you react?

On one hand, randomly groping people is pretty dumb and would deserve a smackdown. On the other, Pinky has been only flustered and/or receptive to anything remotely forward from Chiaki so far. I need to think on this.

>> ☐ Night Owls Caroline Brandt 08/10/13(Sat)13:16 No.26544724

We Night Owls have a pretty crowded living arrangement. We're all stuck together in this one bedroom apartment. I guess it's to force us to get familiar with one another since we jump into witch barriers, but the lack of privacy is fuckin' murder somedays. Especially when Riggs decides to take an hour long shower and eats up all the hot water.

Anyways, me and Ana went back to our humble abode to wash off all the food and blood. I was just getting out of the shower, since I'd let Ana go first. I was tired of her whining about mashed potatoes in her hair.

Soon as I got out I got in my skimpy costume and cool greatcoat, making a beeline for the coffee machine. No night unit can function without the stuff. Ana drinks it like fucking water.

Everyone'd got back it seemed. Riggs, our Callidus, computer nerd and dope fiend, was sitting behind her oversized computer that took up her whole fourth of the living room almost. Doing knifers again. At least being a magical girl makes you pretty much immune to getting a buzz through just breathing the smoke that gives off. She looked like an oddball, skinny enough to count her ribs, greasy blond hair with bangs that fell in her eyes, and these thick cokebottle glasses that made her eyes look a lot bigger than they really were.

Ashley Williams, the second Eversor beside yours truly, was sittin' behind her workbench, doing something to that bright red chainsaw of hers and is probably going to hate the fact that I called her Ashley and not Ash at first in this, since she thinks the former's too fuckin' girly. She had short cut black hair and was the biggest of the lot of us. Built like a fuckin' tank, that girl.

I took one look over at Ana, who was sprawled out on the couch in her underwear with her fancy Ruskie sniper rifle with the built in suppressor disassembled so she could give it another unneeded cleaning.

“I don't know why ya' sprawl out on the couch like that Ana, ya' ain't got anythin' to show off anyway.” I smirked at her, downing a mouthful of coffee, only to have a fairly large bullet thrown at the back of my head. She's a pretty good shot with those...

“God, you are just the most charming girl in the world aren't you, Caroline.” she snapped, crossing her arms.

“Hey man, some people are really into the whole, girl who looks kinda like a boy thing Ana, don't let Carol get you down and stuff.” Riggs assured our Vindicare. “I think you're fine just the way you are.”

“Maybe you should have wished for a cock.” I snerked, only to get hit with another bullet.

I noticed Ash had been pretty quiet through that little exchange, and then I noticed that's cause she was reading our briefing without us.

I stepped up behind her, and she glared over at me. “Personal space, Carol.” she grumbled, pushing the papers inside over so I could see without being behind her.

My disappointment was palpable. The bosses wanted us to watch some hotel where people'd been vanishing for a while. And spend a day inside, just to see if someone came to grab us, we could take care of em'. Take a few prisoners, break a few fingers later to see if they'd squeal. Guess they thought a cult might be involved. Now this is important: when a witch gets strong enough, old enough, she can regain a little bit of her mind. Start to think. And how better for her to spread misery and horror into the world than gathering up the crazies of the world to help her do it, and feeding off them a little in the process. They're bad news, as you can imagine.

Ana visibly perked up, while my own excitement crumbled around me. “Fuckin' really? We gotta sit around all night?” I groaned.

I chugged the last of my coffee and tossed the mug on the floor. “Fuckin' Spellbreaker? The Firecrackers are stealin' our gig? My last twenty wasn't enough for 'em?!” I shouted, throwing my hands into the air.

Riggs let out the breath she'd been holding with a little blast of smoke and turned to look over at me with hooded eyes. “Shouldn't let those pigs get you down man, we can still have fun. I got some wild turkey lying around here somewhere still...”

That made me feel a bit better. Honey Whiskey makes everything better.

Ana stretched out on the couch, then popped into her costume as well. Not sure why she sits around half naked all the time, she ain't got anything to show off to be truthful.

Again, I felt my growin' good mood sink into a gutter.

“Do we have to? Every time we go down there that bleach smellin' bitch wants to use us as her guinea pigs for somethin' weird.” I scowled, crossing my arms.

“Oh come on, Carol. If you don't want Char's gadgets you can always just say no.” Ana rolled her eyes.

It was Ash that beat me to answering her. “No you can't. You really just can't.”

“Yeah, man. She's more temperamental than any fuckin' gadget she makes.” agreed Riggs in a hoarse voice as she tried to talk and hold in a lungful at the same time.

“Well I guess I'll just have to take whatever you don't want then.” Ana snapped, rifle now assembled and slung over her shoulder.

“At least we don't have to deal with Amber anymore.” shrugged Ash, picking up her CDs and Jambox.

“Hey, I liked Amber, man. She was always in a good mood and everything, pretty open about anything she wanted to do even if it was dirty or the fact that she used to dissect girls like us. I can respect that.” Riggs mumbled, drifting toward the door.

I grabbed the old Confederate cavalry saber my Mom left to me just before I made my contract from where it leaned on my desk. “Let's just get this over with... the sooner the better.” I said, rubbing my temples.

The armorer lived down in the basement with a handful of research assistants, just a few floors above that big silent room they got down there. It was armored like a bunker, but that's probably more to keep the place from taking the rest of the Officio with it when eventually blows up. She used to be some sidekick to our old head geek, Amber, but she ain't around no more. So now we deal with Char. Or Scorch as some people like to call her. She didn't earn either nickname for nothing, you hang around her at your eyebrow's own risk. Explosives are her specialty. Or just things that explode but really shouldn't.

At least it's not a real long elevator ride down, despite the place being 45 stories under. The Armory itself is a pretty place. It's got workshops all over where the three dozen or so magical girls working with Char perfect their gadgets or whatever the hell they're working on. Usually they test em' out on one another when they're done. Or get someone like us to do it when they want field data. Which led to us being besieged by at least half the eggheads about thirty seconds after getting off the elevator, wanting us to try everything from Anger Powered Jetpacks to some kinda sonic blaster that makes people's naughty bits explode in slow motion. I'm not afraid to admit, I actually stopped to consider that last one because it sounded wonderful if it actually worked. I didn't get a chance to say nothin' back though, cause Ana grabbed me by the hand and dragged me into Char's lab. To this day I still regret not saying something a little faster.

Granted, I suppose by explode she could have meant explosively orgasm. But I digress.

Char's lab is usually a wreck. Machine parts and tools are just lyin' around everywhere from when she started workin' on somethin' and moved on to another thing without finishin' the first project, and the whole place reeks of bleach like I mentioned before. The bosslady herself was sittin' in the corner, hitting something large, round, and beeping with a hammer. She wasn't holdin' back either.

Ash was the first to do somethin' about it, jumpin' forward and taking her hammer away. Char wasn't too happy about that.

“Lucky? You're lucky I fucking got here when I did otherwise I bet you and half your assistants would be able to fit in a matchbox right about now you crazy bitch!” Ash shouted, trying to kick her off.

“Yeah, genius, that's why it's lucky! I havn't exploded yet, have I?” she snapped, wrenching the hammer from Ash's hands and tossing it on the floor next to the still beep beeping sphere.

Ana stepped forward to try and disarm the situation, flashing egghead supreme an apologetic smile. “We came for gear Char, don't mind Ash, she's just worried about you.”

Ash snorted while I tried not to laugh, though Char didn't seem to notice. Instead she brightened right up, clapping her hands together. “Gear! Oh wonderful!” she darted over to one of the shelves that lined the walls of her lab where she kept the stuff she'd finished working on. “I have a bunch of stuff that needs a good shakedown run and almost nobody comes down to get equipped by me personally anymore...”

She rummaged around on one of the shelves, and grabbed somethin' that looked kinda like a smartphone. “Well, I've got these Cellphones here that have a new battery I made that can keep them running for a month straight!

They're kinda unstable though...” she tossed the phone behind her, which bounced a couple times on the floor before detonating like someone'd gone and stuffed a firecracker inside. The rest of us, even Ana, shared a couple unsure glances while Char moved to the next shelf. She didn't even flinch when the thing went off.

“Uh.... I got these sprayguns that fire off drug cocktails that soak through people's skin!” she started, before I cleared my throat and stepped up behind her.

“Hey Char, we're on the clock here. Do ya think we could get somethin'...” I started, before she turned to give me an impatient look.

“Somethin'... more practical? This stuff seems kinda worthless when I can just pull as many .44 Revolvers outta this here coat as I like as long as I keep ahold of em'.” I continued, trying as hard as I possibly could to be nice about it.

Char gave me a tired look, droppin' the drug filled squirtgun on the floor and slinking away toward a door in the back. “Yeah, yeah, I get it. Everything I make is worthless. Nobody's interested in anything progressive or cool or experimental around here. Sure, fine. Just take what you fucking want, bring it back later. Or don't. Send someone to wake me up tomorrow. If I'm still here.” she muttered, slipping away into her quarters and closing the door behind her with a defeated thud.

Ana shook her head. “What a terrible thing to say...” she shot an annoyed glance at me.

“Don't you go givin' me that look, I was as nice as I'm ever gonna be to that crackpot.” I snapped in response, deciding to look over the shelves. No sense in lettin' the trip be a complete waste was my reasoning. And she did say take whatever.

“You could have just asked for a weapon you know.” huffed the Vindicare, joining me.

Long story short, after pickin' through the place a little, everyone but Ash found somethin' on the shelf listed, “Rehashed Mundane”. Mine was a hand axe, except in place of an edge there was a beam emitter slapped on one end. The power supply made it heavier than I'd like but I liked it. Better this and my saber than tryin' to stick people with the stupid bayonets my .44s come with. Riggs found herself a new flamethrower that said it fired some poisonous napalm mixture so even if you weren't burned your lungs would get melted by the fumes. And naturally, Ana picked the dumbest of all the things lyin' there. A bandolier of throwing knives with shaped charges stuck in the handles so when you pulled the pin and threw em' into some poor bastard they exploded the blade into him a second or two later.

Ash kept callin' us crazy for takin' anything she made, but shit we're all pretty much crazy here. Quoth Lewis Carrol and his grinnin' cat, “You can't help that, we're all mad here. I'm mad, you're mad. You must be mad, or you wouldn't have come here.” She may not inspire confidence when I find doodles for things like the attached picture lying in her desk, but for all her manic depressive tendencies, Char doesn't do a bad job making weapons that are as crazy as most of us are too.

Oh, and when Ash said tonight was going to suck, she was way more spot on than any of us could have ever imagined.

You are a Magical Girl, and you're in the most pleasant dream you've ever been in so far.

Sure, you're in what could very well be in a strange girl's bedroom. A girl that had sliced your throat open before, just as you yourself blew her face out the back of her skull. The gigantic Grief Seed of the most powerful and most bloodthirsty Witch in eternity hovering in the night sky outside like some sort of spiked disco ball. Big enough to eclipse the moon, while the city you've lived your entire life in burned in an endless inferno below it.

But hey, you're comfortable for once, not in the immediate threat of mortal peril or going completely insane. The girl doesn't seem to have her knife anywhere near her, and is allowing you to grasp a handful of the softest part of her body without said knife being involved. And she does look like she's okay with it.

...It's not the kind of dream you'd write in a diary, but it sure beats the usual kind.

The kind where you get your heart torn out because of a really bad breakup.

>>26578684

You share your exact sentiments about the dream with the strange girl. It's a pretty nice one, where no one is trying to kill you - so yes, you're okay with it. You wish that you could have more of this kind of dream.

"..Nnnh. I'm...I'm sure you do." Wendy murmurs after a moment, her cheeks positively red now, her breaths becoming quick, feathery. "You...you never did this...back then. Never really...focused on that place..." She ducks her head down again, into her arms this time, the open manga in front of her all but forgotten. "...What...what's up with you suddenly being like this, Kong...?"

...Well. Maybe you'd better stop. It's already difficult on your end to hold up a conversation, no need to make it hard for her too.

In...in any case, did Wendy need you for something? If you're both in the same dream again, then does she have something to tell you or what?

"I...I don't know if it works that way." The girl slowly manages to recover from what you've subjected her to. "I mean, the first time, maybe I wanted to talk to you, but--"

But...what? What's changed, now?

"I don't know." Wendy murmurs, not looking at you. "I went to bed just like I always do. Wasn't even...wasn't even thinking of you. Too busy with work." She gestures to the wig. "Work...stuff." She adds, somewhat lamely, before finally managing to re-establish eye contact with you. Her cheeks still red.

Huh. Well. Does this kind of thing happen with with her and other people, too?

"...No. Just with you." She shakes her head. "...Sorry. Must be annoying, huh?"

You'd probably say yes, if not for the fact that this is still...kind of nice. Moreso after what happened with Sayaka, anyway.

>>26578694

You're a bit surprised that you actually still care about that, when back then pissing the blue-haired Eversor off was something that just happened, something you just took in stride.

"Mickey? What'd she do?" Wendy blinks at you. "You got into another fight with her again?"

Another? Did...does Wendy know about the two of you?

"We heard enough from Miss Malal, that one time she was over." Wendy replies. "She said you two were like born enemies. Cats and dogs, that kind of thing." A moment. "...Probably had to do with the fact that you were...well, they called you Murderface for a reason, y'know? You were a pretty good shot, but you didn't particularly care who gets hit, so long as the person you're gunning for dies." She shrugs, here. "...Not my place to judge, anyhow, but...well, you weren't the kind to bother with collateral damage and civilian casualties then, Murderface. At leas that's what I heard."

...Ah. So that's why.

"...You got better at it." Wendy murmurs. "Kharn kept you on a very short leash. I...I think you being around her actually helped."

Huh. Well. That's surprising.

"You and me both." Another moment, as she manages a small smile at you. "Are you gonna start collecting panties and skulls too? I don't think you're the type, though..."

How do you respond?

What I mean is: Sure, writeups that expand the world are a nice idea and always welcome of they fit into the tone of the world. its also a nice nod when some of the characters make a cameo and all, but when its goes as far as other Readers and Writers inserting their "Originial Character Donut Steel" into the Backstory as close friends or lovers of established Characters its basically crossing the border into creepy, awkward and straight out bad territories of the whole Fanfiction-Thing.

Chiaki has already been established as having gone through multiple bouts of amnesia. I don't think it's bad that she's forgotten one or two close relations? I always felt it a little trite that amnesia was brought up a lot in the narration but Chiaki immediately reacted to everyone by instantly remembering them and how to interact with them.

In that respect, I think Wendy fills a void that had been nagging me since the start: "Someone close that we don't remember and aren't quite sure how to deal with."

But that's just my take on it, I guess.

Deculture talks it over with all the writefags before they put anything in the write ups, everything that gets done in them is approved by him

In the case of the rather clearly impossible ones (ie MidorixWendy NTRing) when they haven't happened, can't happen or simply refer to events which didn't happen they are non canon but written for fun, you should take everything else as canon since that's how Deculture runs it

And he doesn't exactly get bullied into it, people want to help flesh out his world for this and they come to him with ideas, he tells them what he has written and planned for areas / officios and then they go from there.

In the case of the eighth he had plans for an American officio from waaaay back when, he had actually gotten a few basic ideas down. The along came Wendy who wanted to write the stories that related to the American officio so they collaborated on it

This is basically how everything gets done now

She's not in a gray area at all. What you don't like is her role (old flame that pops back up and still has sparks), which is fair enough - though I disagree - but it has nothing to do with OCs or writefags. And people in general seem to like or at least don't mind her, going by last thread.

Well I like her
She is the only character we have seen who actually gives us any fucking clue to our past outside of "you we grumpy and shot people", was originally introduced by Deculture and he has so far written her as he has seen fit, the fact that she was the first decent write up that had a continuing character that we are now interacting with is just how things have gone and she obviously has a purpose for being there otherwise Deculture wouldn't have her appear

You frown at her. Why is everyone expecting you to follow Kharn's metal-clawed, skull-taking, panty-collecting footsteps? Just because you've taken up the position she once had and the hat that she once wore doesn't mean you're about to take after the crazy Russian. No, just to set the matter straight - you're not about to become the second coming of Valnikov Kharn. Collecting skulls and conquests is not the way you see yourself working.

"...That's why I said it's not your style," Wendy replies. "It's not your thing. And...and I'm really happy it's not." She looks at you with an unreadable expression on her face, before turning away.

...Silence, except for the sound of the wailing winds outside - and the ocassional turn of a manga page.

Is she just leaving it at that? Seriously?

You narrow your eyes at this, before crossing your arms. Well, maybe you will take up one of Kharn's hobbies, then. It's worth looking at, since she seemed to be really popular before the Betrayer thing.

"...I wouldn't say popular." Wendy replies, deadpan. "I remember Miss Malal saying something about how...Kharn is just something that you let happen. Like being bitten by a dog, that kind of thing." She turns to you again, a disapproving frown curling her lips slightly. "...Are you going to collect everyone's panties now, too?"

You shake your head. Not everyone's, you deadpan. Just a few.

Wendy's eyes narrow at you. "Whose?"

You let a small smile curl your own lips as you stretch the moment with your own silence, before replying.

". . ." Wendy's expression doesn't change, but the gradual crimsoning of her pale complexion into a beet red is something you wish you could have captured on camera. She turns away again.

"...Lewd," She murmurs finally, in a small, meek voice, one that almost sounds shaky. Hesitant. "You've...you've really turned lewd since you forgot about me, huh..."

Well, it was just a joke, you explain, after a few moments of awkward silence, where the both of you just looked at each other and waited for whoever would make the first move. You were just teasing, anyway.

"...Just teasing. Right." Wendy narrows her eyes at you, before letting out her breath in a huff. "...We can't do it here, anyway. Unless you want everyone in the same room as you to hear what we're doing."

Ah. Yeah. That'd be...yeah, no.

That's another thing you wanted to talk to her about. Just...what kind of relationship did the both of you have? Before your amnesia happened. Before everything else happened. She said you were friends, but certain events involving a particularly soft part of her anatomy and your free hand somehow clued you in that there's more to it than that. And you're pretty sure she wouldn't just let anyone grope her ass without getting a knife shoved in their face, or in their kidneys.

"You're right. I wouldn't just let anyone." Wendy nods. "...I guess you could say we were.." She seems to hedge here. "Serious...? I don't...I don't know. I don't know what to call it. You didn't, too. I don't think we ever bothered to find out" Another pause. "...But I liked it a lot. I really did, and...and I hoped you did, too."

. . .Huh. Well. That's...well. You guess that makes her your ex, then?

"...I guess so." The strange, brown-haired girl looks at you.

How do you react?

I'd have thought that, given the fact that Wendy and Murderface had dream killed each other, and Murderface doesn't remember anything about Wendy, Murderface would be pretty nonplussed towards her rather than so forward.

Speaking of the hat, when do you guys want to get rid of that and replace it with our own symbol? There's been talk of getting a new... badge, as it were, and I was think that, in keeping with the 40K theme, we should get a hat with the seal of the Inquisition on it. Witch hunters and all that.

Or possibly it was a post-Madoka thing that arose as part of the Mami-imprinting: a fine derriere is a sought-after quality in a person--it's how Chiaki decides whom she's cool with (Sayaka's ass is probably unimpressive).

Was it Pinky or Madokami? Pinky seemed to get along fairly well with Midori during the Barrier arc, but I don't think she's the sort to save anyone. I think the only reason she was even willing to "fight fair against Midori-chan" is because Midori's illusion making her look normal gained Green Green a ton of Pinky points. I still think Pinky would've let Midori died without shedding a single bloody tear.

Madokami, on the other hand...

Sallaka specifically asked us NOT to do anything of that sort. When we inquired, we got in trouble with her because she thought we were regressing to ol' murderface again.

a half dozen anons said all chiaki wanted to do was "interview" her, and sallaka got pissed as hell. Because in her experience a polite interview with murderface equates to missing limbs and other serious physical trauma. She didn't want us going anywhere near her, especially after we coerced sayaka into giving us NECO's description.

QB said NECO was cool, Sayaka seems to think she's fine, and has also promised to stop her snooping, we should put a little bit of faith in our associates. This is how we fucked things up with sayaka in the first place.

You break another painfully-long and painfully-awkward silence between the both you by...saying sorry. Sorry that you forgot about her. You must have been one lousy girlfriend...

Wendy shakes her head. "It wasn't your fault, I..." She swallows audibly, here, and her voice when she speaks again is a bit strained. "...Things happened. Bad things. A lot of them, almost all at once." She manages a weak smile, here. "...I'm not mad, you know. I don't hate you for forgetting. It was...it was just something that happened, and there's really no sense in getting angry over something like that." The brown-haired girl looks down on her book, before closing it with a small snap.

You couldn't help but notice that while she did sound sincere, she also sounded like she'd been practicing the words to herself for quite some time, just waiting for the moment to say them. As if speaking from rote memory.

Well, how did it happen, then? Why did it happen? Which came first - you forgetting, or her dying?

"The latter," Wendy says after a long while. "...From what I heard, you really took it hard. Not something I can blame you for, anyway. Everyone was still hurting after Miss Malal was KIA in Walpurgisnacht. You most of all. Even more than Kharn." It's here her voice falters just a bit, and she rubs the heel of a hand into her eyes. "...I've said too much. I promised. Sorry. You don't need to hear any more."

What? N-no. No, you need to know. This is about you, and her.

"...I promised I wouldn't say," Wendy replies, her voice soft, but firm. The bed creaksas she shifts position, sitting up and levering herself off of the mattress. Her bare feet making no noise at all on the wood-tiled floor as she makes for the balcony, the glass doors sliding back as she steps closer. "I promised, and I try to keep the promises I make."

You follow her into the balcony - and it's here that you get a lungful of ash. Ash from the burning buildings, and most likely from the burning corpses as well. You cover your mouth with a pajama sleeve as you move closer to her - Wendy now leaning on the protective railing on the balcony's edge, just beside the small stairway leading over the railing itself.

Pinky's - no, Faust's - Grief Seed hanging in the sky in front of you, like a giant meteorite just about to crash into the city and wipe out anything left from the blaze. Someone insane would probably think that this kind of backdrop in this situation would be ironically romantic.

The air soon clears of the choking ash, allowing you to breathe without feeling like you're trying to inhale engine smoke as an alternative to cigarettes. It's here, then, that you ask the owner of this dream - Who made her promise? Who made her promise not to say anything?

Wendy looks at you. "Someone who...who really loves you, Kong. Probably..." She laughs here, hollowly, with a crushing loneliness that seems all too familiar. "...Probably more than I do."

It's here that the floor underneath you starts to rumble. An earthquake, making its presence felt. You glance up at the sky - and the Grief Seed seems to be creeping closer. Closer still, as if suddenly remembering to fulfill the doomsday scenario it was mimicking just a few moments ago.

"You're waking up," Wendy notes. "I...I think it's urgent. You'd better go." She seems to be quite disappointed, now, but for some reason she also seems...happy. "You'll be okay, don't worry. You didn't sleep through the night."

Ah. Well. That's some consolation.

Looks like you have enough time to ask just once more question.

What will it be?

We don't have to kneecap or threaten to kneecap anyone. I just want to know how NECO got past our security so that we can learn how to avoid others doing it in the future. Having Sayaka arange it and be there will, if we explain carefully, make her feel better about the whole thing and if she sees us talk to NECO without doing anything murderfacey then her trust in us will be somewhat restored. Wendy is a Callidus. She's taller than Midori by 2cm,but nowhere near as busty.

She, however, is a Callidus.

Good point about the height (though it feels weird for Wendy to be taller than anyone after YN), but why would she need a wig if she was using her callidus ability to look like Midori? Surely hair isn't some mysterious substance that can't be imitated unlike every other part of the body.

Crazy theory, but what if Wendy is inside the new soul gem Madoka crafted for Midori? She didn't specify When or how she got a new one from Madoka. The Wig could then be a metaphor to tell us that she's inside Midori. Perhapse she's even taking over Midori's body, which would lead to the whole fooling/green is danger thing.

You tear your gaze away from the oncoming grief seed to ask her one final question.

Who killed her - or what?

Wendy's face darkens at this, before she nods. "A friend," She says, over the sound of the grief seed finally slamming into what little remained of Mitakihara - over the sound of the world breaking apart around the both you. "One who got turned into a monster by a Golden Weapon. She...she's gone, now. No one knows where she is." A sigh. "Nicole Touchdown. That's...that's what I knew her as. I don't know if she still calls herself by that."

Ah. Well. That's...that's as clear of an answer that you're going to get.

Stepping forward, you reach up with both your hands to pull her gently down to your height, by her shoulders. She blinks at this, but allows you to do so, bending forward slightly. Without allowing modesty to regain control of your own instincts, you press your lips against her cheek. Just a small, brief period of contact.

She stiffens at this, and you draw back. Your own cheeks reddening slightly, a mirror to hers.

You'll get it right this time, you tell her. That's your promise, and you try not to make the promises you make, either.

Wendy nods at this, the small smile once more on her lips.

"Goodbye, Kong," You hear her murmur right into your ear, as she gives you a kiss of her own.

It's the last thing you hear just before the world explodes.

You open your eyes to Sayaka shaking you by the shoulder. It's...oddly considerate of her, seeing as you didn't exactly part ways amicably earlier. The least you were expecting was her punching and kicking you awake.

You mumble something about being up, before groping around for your glasses. You put them back on after rubbing the grit from your eyes, a yawn tearing itself from you as you do so. You also manage to ask her what time it is.

"Quarter past five," The blue-haired Eversor replies, her voice quiet in the dimly-lit darkness of Ruri's suite. "Nothing's come up. Squad Hiryu's making the rounds as we speak, along with the security detail. Karasawa says no Callidus action, either, so we're good on that." Sayaka seems to hesitate here. "...I called NECO earlier, and I managed to get her to tone it down a bit."

Ah. Well. That's...that's what you wanted. You thank her for it.

"No problem." A pause, then a sigh. "...S-Sorry about...earlier. You didn't need that. I didn't need that."

What? Is...is Sayaka apologizing to you?

"Don't make this any more fucking difficult than it has to be," The Eversor growls. "I was being a dick earlier, and I'm apologizing for it. I recognize my failing and I'm correcting it. Alright?"

Am I the only one who thinks NECO could be a valuable asset if we could recruit her? She stalked us and Sayaka for most of the day without either of us being none the wiser; just imagine how long it would have taken her to be found if she had a Calidus supporting her. I personally don't think we would have found her at all.

And since I'm fairly sure she won't stop snooping, we could actually offer up some sort of protection by being part of our Officio. Because sooner or later, she'll probably get caught by another group, and I doubt we'd be the only people who'd think to slit throats first and ask questions later. However, having the personal protection of the Ninth's Warmaster may get her out of those situations alive. Severely beaten, but alive.

The way, I see it, QB gets publicity and information from her, Sayaka'll calm her tits because we'll be protecting her somewhat, and NECO would actually get financing, support, and unprecedented access to Magical girls like she never had before.

Again, just erring on the side of caution. From my impressions of Sayaka on NECO, the former's concerned about what the latter is doing. With the kind of work Magical Girls face everyday, Blueberry's concern isn't unfounded.

If ever NECO did join the 9th and got herself into real trouble, Sayaka may take it to heart that she had a hand in it.

Personally I'd rather (mind) beat it out of her.

Mainly because the practice of following MGs around is pretty unhealthy and bound to get her killed sooner or later, the fact that she's still alive is a miracle.

It's cruel to let her go on doing something so dangerous, the right thing to do here is dissuade her from getting involved any further with MGs.

So I think that, when we have the time, we should set up an interview and then bring Karasawa Enishi along so we can politely ask her a few questions in a very persuasive manner.

Deep down, Mickey likes to believe in the "ideal magical girl". That's why she was such a big fan of Ruri's music, it connected sayaka with her desired fantasy of being a magical girl instead of the reality.

NECO is just an innocent looking up to her role models in her own way, which is by finding out as much as possible about them. It's sweet really, but NECO doesn't realize how much danger she could be in. Murderface had Sayaka and QB keep her in check, but what if another officio discovers this information, and decides they want to recruit her for themselves to spy interoffice? Or if another officio decides they don't care for such a leak, because if she can spy on a god damn WARMASTER without being caught, she could likely spy on other megucas just as easy and other officios might not have such an easy going boss.

Either bring her in, or tell her to step off for her own good, ask sayaka to do it.

With the last vestiges of sleep making your tongue feel thick and unresponsive in your mouth, you tell her to just kneecap herself later on and it'll be fine. You'll consider the matter settled.

"W-what? I..." Sayaka narrows her eyes at you. "Murderface." She says your name like a warning, clearly not amused.

You chuckle at this, before shaking your head. Joking aside - and you were joking - if she at all thinks you're fucking up somehow, then she should tell you in private and it's all good. It's why you made her Equerry, after all. A check and balance to how badly you're fucking up being Warmaster of the Ninth Officio.

"...Yeah. Yeah, I'll do that." She manages a smile. "Next time, of course. And that's pretty much inevitable, right?"

Heh. Yeah. Just like how it's inevitable that she'll have a superbitch moment about it, which pretty much renders her ability to notify you in private impossible. Just cancelling it out and all.

"Hah. Fuck you, Murderface."

Seems you didn't screw up things between you and your Equerry as bad as you thought. That's a good thing, at least.

You get up off the couch, slipping the holstered Desert Eagle back on, the Warmaster Cap stuffed into your inventory. It's your turn to keep watch, now. She should get some rest, since your boss wants you to look your best. Couch is good for a nap, in any case.

"Yeah. I'll do that." Sayaka lets out a breath, glancing over at Ruri. "At least, I'll try to. Having a bit of trouble sleeping."

...What? Is she still rustled over what happened earlier? Because you'll apologize about it if she wants, that's not an issue--

"No, no. Not that anymore." The Eversor shakes her head. "Just...gah. Nevermind. It's just my nerves, probably." She takes your place on the couch, Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie laid down on her lap. "Just this fucking assignment, I guess. Now you know why I don't go for security ops all that much."

Huh. well. You'll keep it in mind, then, when you're assigning people to missions next.

"I'd appreciate it." She nods at you. "...I made a fresh pot of coffee outside. Should still be hot enough to drink if you need some."

That's thoughtful of her. She didn't poison it, did she?

Sayaka rolls her eyes at this. "The fuck do I look like, some sort of Venenum? Yeah, I'd poison the same coffee I'd be drinking, along with the rest of the damn security detail. Go have a cup if you're feeling sleepy."

Yeah, fine. You leave Sayaka to get her shuteye, closing the door quietly behind you. You immediately spot the coffee machine Sayaka must have taken from Room Service sitting on top of a corner table, with a few paper cups stacked beside it. There's still some coffee left in the pot, and you pour yourself one.

A cautious sip later, and you blink as you realize that Sayaka can in fact make a halfway decent cup of Joe. Not too bad at all.

As you take another sip, you feel a sensation of warmth on your cheek. The same cheek Wendy had kissed, just before you woke up.

An ex, huh? Well. At least...at least not everything in your past was horrible.

Your Shield manifesting on your arm - the gears inside completely silent - you begin your own patrol. Wondering just what was it like to have someone nice.

Well. Everyone should have someone nice, you think.

You just wonder if you still deserve it.

“How ya doin’ in there, Whitey?” With a few clicks and hisses, the walkie-talkie lying on my table – well, what passed for a table in here – came to life, a sweet and cheery voice filling the stagnant air in Sub Zero. I pretty much jumped the moment I heard it – hell, I’d always jumped the moment I even thought I might have heard it – and scrambled over, tripping over my own stupid, numb legs in the process.

That was pretty much the closest thing to a daily routine I had: read until she had time to come down, and trip over my own dumb ass when I heard her.

“I’m...okay.” I just barely croaked it out. Same answer I always gave, and lately it felt lamer and lamer. “I mean, I’m good.” My voice didn’t wanna cooperate. I was trying to…to use it more, so it wouldn’t be so hard whenever she talked to me. She laughed, and the sound kind of made my heart leap into my throat.

“Ya sound better lately. You ain’t gettin’ TOO used to that hellhole, are ya?” No. Maybe. I didn’t know, and I mumbled out some half-assed answer. It hadn't been so bad, since she slipped this thing into my MREs. Snuck me a clock, too, and a game boy, and books sometimes. She always figured it'd be hell to sit here doing nothing, she said. I was pretty used to it, though.

Frankly after viewing the world through Sayaka's starry eyes for a few threads, I think her word should mean jack shit when it comes to getting stuff done. We've had more trustworthy people betray us in the past, and we know that Sayaka has refused to do jobs before because they went against her moral code.

If we explain where we're coming from in a calm, reasonable, and serious manner, she should understand. If not, then maybe we should reconsider her position. We can't do shit with an aid that won't do what we tell her to, no matter how political an appointment it was.

"Well, she ain't never been real tough, 'fore we was magical girls. What'cha call a, uh, heavy reader. Mostly sat around playin' vidya games'n watchin' Chinese cartoons, 'n readin' on the playground instead'a shootin' at birds or squirrels. She got picked on a whole lot."

I bet Mary beat the shit out of 'em for it.

"Yup. Every single one. Broke a couple noses, couple arms. Couple balls, too. Ain't nobody fucks with the Springfield Sisters. …But she'd still get all mopey, 'n start sulkin' around in our room. Wouldn't come out for nothin', 'n Ah'd sit up against the door jus' like this, 'n she'd sit on the other side."

That's what I'm doing, too.

"I could kinna tell. I could…sorta feel ya there." I mumbled an apology and started to move, but my walkie talkie rang out. "You best not be movin'. It ain't that. Ah just…Ah mean, it's almost…warm. S'nice."

…Yeah. It was really nice, in a weird way. I couldn't really explain it, so I tried to remind her of where she left off instead.

“…Nah. You’re her big sister. S’probably why she’s tough now. You just had to…protect her until then. And stuff.” It sounded better in my head. Everything I said to Mary sounded better in my head. She gave me a weak ‘heh, yeah’ in response, and I scrambled to find something to talk about and fill the…no, fuck it. It wasn’t to fill the silence.

I just…needed us to keep talking. This whole room was a lot brighter when she was there. I tried to say that much, at least, but it caught in my throat, and I ended up going on about some of the people I knew once. This one guy and his little sister, mostly. Guy was an asshole. A real motherfucker, like, I’d seen him sneak medical supplies out and try to stab nurses and stuff if they got anywhere near his sister and him.

I helped him do it a couple of times. Dunno why exactly. I guess we were friends. He was older than me, but he was…cool. Everyone does dumb shit sometimes, right? For cool people?

…Huh?

“Ah love it when ya start talkin’, Sab, but every time ya start talkin’ about th’hospital, somebody dies.” She was quiet. …I couldn’t tell what she was thinking through the stupid crappy sound quality of the walkie talkie. “He dies, don’t he?”

…Yeah. They shot him, just a little bit before I contracted.

…Sorry.

“Naw, it’s…Ah’m gonna… …Gimme a few. Arright?”

It took about an hour, but that was fine. Wasn’t like I had anywhere to be. I sat there by the door, waiting, staring down at the walkie talkie. There weren’t really any other sounds in there…like, ever, so it pretty much scared the piss out of me when the heavy duty doors behind me started to…click. I fired off a barrage of swear words in my head and pushed myself to my feet, bolting for the back of Sub Zero. The field was gonna get screwed up like this, wasn’t it? Shit, I didn’t know how this stupid room worked. Why were they opening the door? Who would do that?

“Aw man, this place sucks. The hell’re ya hidin’, Sab?” Her…her voice echoed through all of Sub Zero. No walkie talkie garbling it, no…no ambiguity at all. …I smelled. I knew I smelled. I looked like a hobo in a dirty fucking hospital gown. I couldn’t. I couldn’t do this. That was how she’d think of me forever.

“…Sab?” Shit she was getting closer fuck me fuck me fuck me. I tried to drag a blanket over myself, but the stupid thing got caught on some debris, and then…

“You playin’ hide’n seek or somethin’?” I looked back, and…and there she was. Golden hair that just…shined in the dim light, and…and she was wearing even less than I was. Denim shorts, and-was that a bikini top? Oh man she was gonna freeze her ass off in th..yeah, she…she already was-

“Hey…Ah ain’t gonna hurt ya or nothin’. It’s Mary. Y’know. From the walkie talkie.” She grinned, and it lit up the room. Not literally, but, like…I dunno. I just sort of stared at her. I didn’t know what to say, my heart was beating out of my chest. “…Ah, uh…Ah brought ya some ice cream. Figured we could split it.”

…Yeah.

…That’d be cool.

I figured out what the warmaster's cap does for us, for any couple that's already involved that we know of, it gives them mega lady boners. If it's someone we like* and we know, it makes their posterior's look larger to us, or maybe it actually makes their butt's bigger temporarily. After all, Chiaki likes big butts and doesn't give enough of a fuck to lie. If it really is slaanesh in that hat, it makes sense, since if the warmaster has a desire, slaanesh will make it excessive, which goes back to the hat causing people to have irresistible lady boner's for each other, maybe Chiaki has a thing for watching/voyeurism.

…They didn’t know what to do anymore. I could barely get the MREs down before they rotted away, and MREs are pretty much designed not to do that ever. I hadn’t heard from her in days, not since the walkie talkie gave out. I think it’s days. Calendar turned to shit, too. Clock’s rusted up. Game boy’s dead. Couldn’t even read a fucking magazine anymore.

…I didn’t know what to do either. I was scared. Terrified, even. I’d done some pretty awful shit, but…I mean, that was supposed to be the end, until they could fix me. I was supposed to get out. I was…sort of sliding toward the end of my rope, and the whole thing was rotting away above me on top of that. It’d been nice for a couple months, though. Since she started talking to me. …I could almost hear her for a while, when I held it tight enough. But that just made it rust away faster.

The door started to click, days, or maybe weeks after everything was gone. I didn’t bother running this time. …It was…I hoped it was her. It had to be her.

She looked so sad. Like she was gonna cry. Just seeing her like that made me want to throw up. And it was only gonna get worse, if she stuck around.

“…Don’t go tellin’ me ta leave,” she sighed. She could pretty much read my mind, even though we’d only met face to face a couple of times. “You missed me, didn’tcha?”

…Yeah… I fought back tears as hard as I could. Resisted the urge to…to hug her, or something. It’d probably kill her. Didn’t stop her, though – she kept on moving toward me. I started to inch away, then she…dove. Practically tackled me, and buried her face in my dirty hospital gown, arms wrapping around my neck.

her nails in.

“I said ‘okay’? You gotta promise yer gonna hold on ‘til then.”

…She was gonna die if I kept her here any longer, but…but my arms slipped around her, too. For just a second.

…I promised, but only if she got the hell out. Like, now.

“…Heh…worryin’ about me…it don’t even hurt.” …I could feel her fingernails loosening. Coming off of her hands, as she held on tight. “…It don’t even hurt, but…”

“Get out, man. You’re getting my prom dress all teary.” It was a lame, shitty joke, and I gave her a lame, shitty smile to go with it. She wouldn’t look at me, just pulled away. A mess of golden hair finally tarnished by this stupid, awful room. …No, tarnished by me. A mop, over a bloody mess that should have been her face.

“…I’m gonna get y’out. I promise,” she mumbled one last time, before striding toward the door. …She was going pretty fast, but I could tell she was trying really, really hard not to look like she wanted out.

“…Yeah,” I whispered into the dark after her, as the lights in the room started to flicker and die. “I know.”

How far are you going to let the write-up stories go? I know a few here and there aren't bad, they're nice to read, but having too many authors wanting to write OC stuff would get confusing. I have my own character, ideas and stuff but I don't really want to write anything that people wont read because the storyline is already confusing enough.

Well, I usually talk with everyone who does the write-ups and help them find a place in the MGNQ storyline for their characters. MGNQ is a big place and there is a lot of room for content, whether they intersect with the main story or not. Even if they don't interact with Murderface they can also interact with the other Officios, or Kyoko, or Sakura, or Malal.

As for the concerns earlier, Wendy was a character planned to heavily feature in Chiaki's past, definitely. It wasn't an afterthought!

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/18/13(Sun)07:00 No.26692324

You are a Magical Girl, and you're a few hours away from driving your principal to her concert.

With any luck, the concert will happen without any incident.

With a lot of luck, something will happen that'd get you to stretch your legs some.

>>26692324

It's late in the afternoon. 4 PM. The day started off well enough. Kirishima Ruru, your principal and most powerful idol in the civilized world, actually woke up at the healthy time of 9 AM, fresh and alert, without even so much as an iota of sleepiness. Like a machine suddenly being switched on after being turned off for the entire night.

Since Ruri's itinerary didn't have any other items for the day besides the concert itself - it starts formally at 9 PM, but you had to get her to the stadium at 8:00 PM at the dot, exactly - you had the entire hotel on lockdown still. This was a move that was not generally liked by your principal, causing pouting all around during breakfast, and Deepthroat getting the brunt of it through petty errands that had the drippy, sweaty assistant running all over the place.

The security detail, led by Kamijou Kyosuke, seems to be handling things with much more competence than you expected from them at first. It seems that letting their young leader win the Sparkle Award's really bucked up their morale some. Kyosuke himself seemed positively energetic this morning, too - you spotted him delivering quite the spirited briefing to the rest of his mates, all of them lined up in front of the entrance. He may have seemed a bit twitchy and nervous when talking to you, but apparently he doesn't have any problem ordering around grizzled men ten years his senior.

Squad Hiryu's not doing too bad, too. A few hours after Ruri woke up, you allowed them a decent chunk of the morning to get themselves rested, washed, and fed. You also thanked one of them in particular - Ayumu, you remember her - for finding NECO, or at least what she left for you. She seemed particularly shy in accepting your thanks, but with some egging on by her own squadmates, she managed to squeak out a response. You left it at that, and told the squad that you'll be needing them fresh for the concert, so they should rest as much as they can.

Enishi...well, what can you say about the Callidus? Despite her tearful breakthrough last night, the older Karasawa was nothing but professional during the vigil. She was invisible the entire duration of your patrol, with only a murmur of acknowledgement from her every now and then when you asked if she's around. Whenever you wanted to ask her something in person, you only needed to say it - and she'd be behind you in an eyeblink. Making you very nearly choke on your coffee the first few times. Frightening and at the same time admirable - making you wonder if such expertise was what it took to be a Rank Leader. You certainly wouldn't know - it's not like you got to that point before being promoted to Warmaster.

Sayaka's mood has improved over the night, too. Following her very reluctant apology, she was almost sociable to you this morning, even greeting you just before she ambled off to her own room to get ready for the day. She also seemed animated during breakfast, talking animatedly with Ruri as they went over the concert. You caught your own name being giggled a couple of times, but you were too busy tearing apart the stack of pancakes in front of you. Yeah, you were too hungry to turn it away this time. You didn't even care that you were being webcast all over the world doing so - your smartphone ringing incessantly with Kyuubey forwarding sponsorship offers of pancake mixes. All of which you ignored.

Lunch went by peacefully, too, and by this time everyone seemed to be getting ready for the big concert. Squad Hiryu was 100% ready and fresh, Sayaka and Ruri were busy trying out all sorts of costumes from her wardrobe (with Enishi looking on with frank envy) and even Deepthroat had cleaned herself up, her outfit not looking like it's been dragged through dust and her hair not looking like a warning flag for dandruff.

You decide to call a final security meeting, just to make sure everyone's on the same page for the concert.

And so, with everyone assembled in Ruri's suite - the Principal herself, Enishi, Sayaka, and Kyosuke - Deepthroat in the background, studiously fiddling with her smartphone while keeping to herself in the corner - you ask everyone if they know what they're supposed to do for the three crucial phases of the concert. Those being - en route, during the concert itself, and leaving the stadium.

"Squad Hiryu has been briefed to shadow Miss Kirishima's conveyance during the entire route, to keep watch for snipers and any attempts of assault." Enishi replies after a moment, volunteeering herself and the Vindicare squad stationed outside. "Upon reaching the stadiumm, they will take up vantage points in the stadium itself for countersniping and overwatch. Leaving the stadium, Squad Hiryu will perform the same shadowing until the Principal is safe and sound in the Hotel." She pauses here, before smiling. "As for me, I will be invisible for the entire duration. Active camouflage, shadowing the Principal and the Warmaster, taking care not to stray too far. Of course, I will deploy Callidus Countermeasures and Crowd Control as necessary."

Kyosuke clears his throat, and takes a folder from behind him. He opens it to show a sattelite view printout of Mitakihara, magnified to display a marked-out road route. "Speaking for Miss Kirishima's security detail, we'll be driving her to the stadium using our reinforced limousine made for this ocassion. We've already notified the local authorities of our main route towards the stadium in advance, and they've blocked it off from civilian traffic for the duration. We have alternate routes in case of contingencies, of course." He gives the folder to you.

You turn to Sayaka here, and she blinks after a moment, seemingly having spent a moment too long frowning at Kyosuke.

"...What? Murderface, you know how I work."

Right. But she has to make it clear for everyone, too.

"Gah. Fine." The Blueberry shakes her head. "Since I still have my cover as the contest winner, I'll be in very close proximity to Ruri-sama--er, the Principal, for the entire thing. Going to, during, and leaving. If anyone so much as looks at her funny, they're cut in half, no questions."

"EAT A DICK, Karasawa."

How do you react? Do you want to suggest any changes, or do you want to leave them to their work? They seem to know what to do, in any case.

Well, it seems that they know what they're doing. You tell them what you're going to do, too - and similar to Sayaka's, you'll be staying in close contact with Ruri as much as possible for the entire thing. Even if...even if it means you have to contend with the singing and dancing, sure. Just so long as the Principal remains safe. If you spot any hostile target heading towards Ruri, then you're taking them down hard.

"So aggressive, Chiaki-chan," The superidol giggles, preening in front of a full-body mirror, wearing something...well, something that should be illegal as idol wear. A teal-green skin-tight futuristic bodysuit with transparent swathes here and there, revealing a clear lack of underwear? "Isn't that a bit excessive, anyway? What if it's like a fan who just wants my autograph so badly?"

"They'll have to go through us first before that, Miss Kirishima," Kyosuke tries to help here. "If they already have, then we'll just have to err on the side of caution here and assume that they're a potential threat. Miss Matsuda's heavy-handed approach will be regrettable, but necessary."

Ruri frowns at this, but nods. "I guess that's okay...but, ah, if it's one of those Tojo people, Chiaki-chan, Sayaka-chan, you've my permission to wreck 'em! Murder their faces right off!" She punches the air a couple of times, making her form-fitting suit make some parts of her anatomy bounce a bit interestingly.

...Right. Fine. You can do that at least. You glance towards Sayaka, who meets your gaze and simply shrugs.

It's here that you steal a look at your shield, clamped down on your right arm, and check to see if it's clicking - one of the audio clues that a certain pink-haired goddess is trying to get at your attention. No, it's not clicking at all. In fact, it's dead silent, which is slightly disturbing in its own right but certainly a welcome change.

Not really. The anime is shit. The visual novel was better in every way, and that included fucking ACTION SCENES.
Action scenes in a fucking VISUAL NOVEL were more dynamic than the crap in that anime.
My advice? Play the VN, skim it, stop skimming if it seems something's going on. It's pretty fucking cool at times.

It's also here that you take note of Deepthroat. She's been quiet throughout the entire morning, or at least for the times when she's around for you to spot. She seems to be very engrossed with her smartphone. Suspiciously so, considering you've been checking NECO's Chirpee account every so often, and her 'assistant' of hers is tweeting. An assistant who seems to be hanging around in the Hotel too, or at least that's what the chirps say.

. . .Well, it can't hurt to check, right?

The shield on your arm clicks as you grab hold of its rim and turn it ninety degrees - the world immediately losing color as time stops for everything and everyone but you. All sound muted to a dull murmur, with only your heartbeat thudding in your ears, along with the faint ticking of a thousand clocks, all in time with each other.

A few quick strides brings you close to Deepthroat - and you could see from her smartphone screen that she's pestering her little brother through text. Needling him to watch the concert on television, as there's a chance she might be shown on the air. ...The little brother, Ryota, is having none of it, saying that he's got to study for a test, but he seems to be relenting at least.

"Eh? What's this, Homura-chan?" A familiar voice pipes up behind you. "Visiting me just so you can spy on what other people are doing?" A clicking of a tongue wet and slick with blood. "Hnn. The real Homura-chan wouldn't do that, you know." The voice takes on a petulant tone, as if getting ready for a lecture.

How do you respond?

Alright, since I unfortunately have to point out the obvious to the special needs children that need to be told to not to put their hands in a blender:

- Pinky is not trustworthy
- Pinky tends to be a bit unstable
- Say/do the wrong thing and she eats our spleen
- Getting our spleen eaten shortly before we supposed to deploy for actions would fuck everybodys day
- Thus dealing with Pinky is an unnecessary danger to the mission we should avoid

Sure, we have all the time in the world except thats not the point if she decides to acupuncture our butt and it takes us our for several hours or even days.

You turn to glance at the pink-haired eldritchian horror residing inside your Shield. The real Homura-chan also probably didn't have to worry about nosy reporters and batshit insane Magical Girls with Golden Weapons, you reply. You also tastefully express your current dislike of idols, and your regret for taking this particular mission. But besides that, well - what would the real Homura-chan do, anyway?

"See, I warned you to stay away from idols, right? Nothing but trouble, the lot of them. Especially that one over there!" Pinky points towards Ruri with a blood-tipped claw. "Everything about her screams 'I'm gonna screw up Homura-chan's relationship points with EVERYONE', from the tip of her fake blue-green hair extensions to her tacky boots. You take it from me, Homura-chan..." She wags that clawed finger at you, now. "Idols will be the death of you."

She pauses here for a moment, before smiling. "Ah, what would the real Homura-chan do in this situation? Well...hnn..." The girl skips over to Noriko, frilly skirts bouncing with every step, and it's with a giggle that she prods the very center of the sweaty assistant's forehead. "One shot, right here. Probably point blank, with a pillow over her face if Homura-chan didn't want blood all over her costume!"

...What.

"Oh, Homura-chan's pretty direct, you know! Super direct!" Pinky's grin is blood-pinked and sharp. "That's what I loved about her - she didn't care who it was or what their story were, if they were in her way or even annoying her, she'd do away with them, no questions asked! Sometimes, even if she just felt like it!" Another pause, here. "Ah, but Homura-chan now, the one standing in front of me, is kind of like that, isn't she?"

No. Well, maybe, but--

"Here, come on, Homura-chan. Show me who you really are." You find yourself drawing the Golden Eagle from your holster - and with a leaden arm and a stone-cold grip do you aim the handcannon right into the hapless Deepthroat's face. The sweaty assistant still smiling, frozen in time, in the middle of reminding her brother to see her one chance at worldwide fame at some overblown concert.

"She's an obstacle, isn't she, Homura-chan?" Pinky's sweet whisper tickles your ear. "Just pull the trigger of the toy I gave you, and she'll die, just like that. Out of the way, permanently. And then the others, too. No one will ever know." A breathy giggle, the scent of sweet, sugary corruption filling your nostrils, ensnaring your senses.

Then again, the answer to the question can be, "Madoka would kill Mami to protect Homura without a second thought, so this girl is nothing."

So yeh, I don't really think there is a fool-proof action in this scenario.

You shake your head, and make to lower the gun, expecting the same force that had compelled you to aim it right at Noriko's face to stop you. Surprisingly, it doesn't, and you manage to shove the Golden Desert Eagle back into its holster without any issues. You also manage to let out the breath you'd been holding.

And then, turning smoothly on your heel, you snap out with a hand and gently tousle Pinky's bangs with a gentle, but admonishing smack on the forehead.

"Wha...? OWW!" Pinky reaches up to cover her forehead, crimson tears welling up in her sunless eyes. "H-Homura-chan, that hurt! What did I do?!"

...Making you aim your weapon at a poor, defenseless girl whose only fault is not bathing every day? Has she forgotten about that? And what's this about Pinky finding her to be an obstacle?

"W-well...! You're the one using your Shield to snoop at what she's doing!" The teary-eyed eltritchian goddess points a claw at you.

Right, but that didn't mean that you wanted to kill her. You just wanted to find something out. That's it. You don't think she's any kind of obstacle other than the sort you just step around or over. And if she turns out to be an obstacle, well - you'll deal with it after the mission, not right now, when you're so close to finishing it.

...Well, at least finishing half of it, but the point stands.

"I don't see why you have to wait, anyway," Pinky harrumphs, perching both gloved hands on her waist. "It's the perfect opportunity! The real Homura-chan wouldn't waste time at all--"

Then you're probably not Homura-chan at all. Not the real one, anyway. You shake your head at her. And your name is Chiaki Matsuda, if she'd forgotten that too.

It's here that Pinky frowns, but then smiles again. "Haa~ I know what you're trying to do, Homura-chan, and no, it's not going to work. I know you're behaving inconsistently on purpose, right?" She giggles. "So I'd think you weren't the original, and get away from me! Well, if that's what you're thinking, then you've got another thing coming!"

You barely had time to vocalize your puzzlement before she reaches up towards you with both hands, locking them behind your neck and pulling your face down to hers. Catching you in a full, taking kiss.

The taste of blood and despair and a sticky, syrupy sweetness immediately hits you as a soft, warm tongue slips between your suddenly-slack lips. You're frozen for that exact moment, unable to move, unable to tear away, helpless in the insane goddess' gasp before she finally relinquishes you.

"Ahah...now I know you're the real one," Pinky giggles, licking her lips as you take a step back. Still tasting blood on your tongue. "You taste just like her!" Another giggle, before she points at you again, her sharklike eyes glinting with a malevolent light. "I'm not going to give up on you so fast, Homura-chan. You're not that lucky."

You run your sleeve across your lips, in an attempt to get the feeling back into them as well as wipe away the blood you could still taste - when the pink-haired girl suddenly disappears. "You'll remember soon enough, Homura-chan, of who you really are!" Her voice echoes in your mind now. "And you'll come begging for me to take you back!"

There's a sudden metallic crash, a grind of gears upon gears, and the world regains all color as time resumes once more. Pinky must have reset your Shield herself. Which meant--

"And furthermore, I--" Kyosuke says, back at the huddle that you left, his sentence cut off as the rest of the people in the room realize that you've suddenly disappeared and then reappeared halfway across the room. Standing in front of Deepthroat - who is, herself, looking as if she'd seen a ghost. Or ten ghosts, that's how pale she was. Looking up at you with complete and total fear.

"...Murderface?" Sayaka is the first to break the silence. "The hell are you doing? The meeting's here, not there. What're you trying to do, give her a heart attack?"

In front of you, Noriko starts to cry. Just...sobbing into her hands and crying, her smartphone landing with a thunk on the thankfully-carpeted floor.

Well. Fuck.

How do you react?

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/19/13(Mon)04:21 No.26710429

You reach down to pick up Deepthroat's smartphone, checking it briefly for any damage before carefully...slipping it into her skirt pocket. Pulling the embroidered handkerchief that Mami herself gave you for situations such as these from your own inventory, and passing it to the sobbing, blubbering girl.

She recoils at this, as if you'd offered her a cooked grenade instead - but she takes it a moment later, continuing her muffled bawling on it. ...You're positive you're not going to get that handkerchief back, at least not without being weighed down with a pound of snot of tears, anyway...well, it was your fault, really.

You just didn't expect being suddenly kissed by a pink-haired eldritchian horror with a fucking abattoir for a mouth.

>>26710429

In any case, you apologize to the sobbing assistant. You were...well, you felt that something was off about the room, and made a sweep as quick as you can. It was a coincidence that you ended up in front of Noriko - it wasn't that you were trying to scare her or anything.

"Just a coincidence, huh, Murderface?" Sayaka seems to smirk, here, but it's more of a token attempt than anything. It seems even she's bothered by the sight of Noriko frightened out of her wits. She even manages to look disappointed - a look you can't help but avert your eyes from, as you pat the blubbering assistant on the shoulder. Trying to comfort her as much as you can.

Maybe you should dial back on that paranoia, huh? Noriko doesn't really seem to be the type to be involved with NECO, anyway. Poor kid's just trying to get by on her own. She already has to deal with Ruri on a daily basis, she doesn't need more grief from you.

In mid-pat, though, it's then that you find your right arm - the one with the Shield - being grasped by someone, and pulled away from its shoulder-patting configuration. You turn to look at the culprit - and who else could it have been but the Principal herself?

"C-Chiaki-chan!" Ruri's eyes are positively shining, glowing, as she gazes into the scarred surface of your shield, her perfectly-manicured fingertips tracing the jagged canyon of metal revealing the gears clicking inside. "I...this is how your Time Stop works?! This is...this is what Murder Mayumi's Murder Genocider Cutter is patterned from?!" She looks up at you in rapt worship and wonder. "That's...that's awesome!!"

"Oh, boy." Sayaka audibly sighs. "Murderface, come on, we gotta finish this security meeting you called. Stop fooling around with the client."

How do you respond?

Murder Genocider Cutter? ...Oh. Probably Murder Mayumi's chainsaw frisbee, or something. Huh. That's not a bad name. In fact, you think it sounds pretty cool. Then again, you've never really called your Shield other than just 'the Shield', so...maybe you should think about that. Like how Sayaka's gunsword is named after a dessert.

You let the super idol get a closer look at it for a few moments, before pulling away, telling her that you really need to finish the meeting. Besides, she shouldn't look at the Shield too closely - you're not even sure what the hell it actually is, anyway. Her messing about with it could make something bad happen.

"What, like make the chainsaw teeth come out?" Ruri volunteers brightly, still enchanted with the disc-shaped magical device. You open your mouth correct her, before closing it - and then simply nodding. Yeah, that might happen, for all you know. Might take her arm off and shit.

"Oh? W-well, uh...I just wanted to see how cool it was, personally!" Ruri smiles, backing away carefully from the Shield, still eyeing it with adoration but with a bit more respect now. "And you can stop time with it, too! That's pretty convenient!"

...Not really all that convenient, considering...well...

"Considering what, Chiaki-chan?" Ruri blinks, seemingly finding no possible downside to having time be your bitch.

You don't even have to think about it. You shake your head, and resume your place back in the huddle, leaving the super idol alone in her mild confusion.

"...Right. Now, uh, so, just to finish..." Kyosuke clears his throat. "Miss Matsuda, in the off-chance that we need to extract Miss Ruri from the stadium, do you have any particular plan you'd like for us to follow?"

Enishi speaks up here. "Well, if I may, Warmaster? Whenever we had to extract a celebrity in mid-broadcast, we would have a Callidus assume the principal's appearance to help lead the hostiles away from the real principal. I believe such a tactic could help here, if it's needed, of course."

"So eager to sacrifice yourself right away for the mission, Karasawa?" Sayaka remarks, her trademark smirk curling her lips. "Or are you just getting ready to crawl up the Warmaster's ass again, just like you tried with Kharn?"

The Callidus Rank Leader, to her credit, doesn't rise to Sayaka's bait, merely smiling. "Perish the thought, Miki-san. I'm simply offering my services where needed, for the good of the operation."

[x]Suggest something else. (Write-in)

"Miki." Just a single word. It's a good suggestion. A light chidding will suffice.

However it doesn't work since Chiaki is ALSO highly recognisable.

Propose that Enishi sticks close to us. Should anything happen, she is to use her callidus powers to disguise the three of us and allow us to exfiltrate.

This is better as we don't know if the enemy has any other callidus type assets. Counter-callidus would be much more important as even Midori was able to keep Chiaki under.

"That would work splendidly against mundane threats, but considering the Tojo Group's apparent use of a Calidus, I don't think we can rely on it. Could you create illusory duplicates without a body to anchor them?
If worst comes to worst, I'd really prefer Sayaka to be the one getting shot at. Her limbs grow back, after all.

Additionally, nobody is to engage any hostile if they are wielding a Golden Weapon. They are my responsibility."

They've been queuing up so far, you're right to say that could change though.

Interlocking fields of fire, with each sniper having a line of sight on the other, and with regular radio contact should be enough. Unless we face a direct assault from multiple directions at once.

It's difficult to choose between having a decoy for when things go tits up and having a counter-callidus. I think we'll deal with at most one callidus and devoting our only callidus to negating her abilities is an inefficient use of assets when she could be negating a much larger force by drawing them away from our principle.

I don't mind having her with us, I just think we should be ready to use her as a decoy and that she has more use as a decoy. We have an entire squad, not to mention Sayaka and ourselves (I suppose the security force counts too) for the other stuff.

Enishi could draw away anything which we'd be too hard pressed to face though, or force an enemy to divide itself and make it easier for us to pick them apart.

You're right to say we should keep our options open though, and I agree with that.

You fix Sayaka with a stare just as you say her last name - and she blinks at you in surprise. Your silence is enough to clue her in, and she averts her eyes, murmuring something approaching of an apology towards Enishi - the Callidus having the good grace to accept it with a silent nod, before turning to you with a small, yet appreciative smile.

The brief contact between you and your Rank Leaders lasts no more than a few seconds, but you feel that it's helped to cement your position as Warmaster and leader of this operation. At the very least, Sayaka seems to be taking things a bit more seriously now, no longer smirking but listening intently.

You nod at this, before starting to speak. It's a good suggestion, and no doubt one that could work if not for the fact that you're blatantly recognizable - and so is Sayaka. All the hostiles need to look out for is the Ruri that's getting escorted out by you, and they'd have the real article for sure. So you propose a second plan - where if anything happens, Enishi is to use her abilities to disguise you, the Principal, and possibly Sayaka as quickly as possible.

"Ah. And this would help you get the Principal out without being recognized in the inevitable chaos. I see, Warmaster." Enishi nods, and it's here that even Sayaka seems to be impressed. "I...well. A brilliant suggestion, Warmaster, and with all due respect, not the sort I was expecting from you." The Callidus smiles. "Very well, that will be our plan of action should we agree that Miss Ruri needs to be extracted as soon as possible." She turns to Kyosuke. "I assume we can count on you and your men to do what they can to delay the hostile entities, should they give chase?"

The young man nods firmly, determination set on his face. "You assume correctly, Miss Karasawa. We'll do all we can to keep the hostiles pinned until Miss Ruri is safe and clear."

"Well, I guess that's that, then," Sayaka shrugs. "Er...Murderface, just one question. Do I kill on sight, or just beat them back enough that we can get away?"

...She has to ask a question like that?

"It's an Eversor thing." Sayaka studiously ignores Enishi's muffled giggle, her cheeks crimsoning. "It's...uh. It's customary with protection jobs like this. Look. When people ask you that in an office, that's fine to say "I trust you to do the right thing". That means you can blame them when they screw up.

When you're giving combat doctrines, you want to make it clear for them "Kill them on sight". Or "Subdue unless they open fire, then kill on sight."

You don't want them thinking "should I just knock them up a bit? I can take that guy before he opens up on the crowd instead of shooting them."

You want CLEAR ORDERS. That's best for everyone, even if it's not as "nice" as "I believe you can do it, Saya-pyon!"

You consider it for the briefest of moments before giving your answer. Sayaka's to use maximum force to remove anyone in the way of exfiltration. If she can keep it relatively clean, sure - but if she has a target, you don't want it getting back up. The principal's survival is top priority. Kill on sight. Especially if it's a Magical Girl.

Sayaka nods gravely at this. "Right. Understood." She lets out a breath, before rolling her shoulders. "...Hopefully it won't come to it, though. Right, Murderface?" She stares at you suddenly, sharply, as if trying to gauge your reaction - a stare that you return coolly, before nodding.

Yeah. Hopefully, it won't come to anything like that.

The group makes to disassemble, but you have one last thing to mention. If anyone seems a Golden Weapon being used by any of the hostiles, you are to be notified of it immediately. No one engages the hostile but you. And if they are to find one lying around, you'll be the one to recover it.

"A Golden Weapon?" Kyosuke echoes, here. "Like...like your Desert Eagle, then, Miss Matsuda?"

You nod. Just like it. It doesn't necessarily need to be a gun, but a weapon that seems to be made completely out of gold.

"...Well, I'll notify the rest of the detail, Miss Matsuda, but may I ask why?" Kyosuke glances at Sayaka, then back at you. "Is there anything special about them?

"You...can say that." The Blueberry suddenly cuts in, making it the very first sentence she'd used to address the young man directly - at least, after finding out his identity. "It's Magical Girl stuff. Nothing you need to know about, Kamijou." The venom as she utters the young man's last name is painfully audible.

Kyosuke blinks at this, before nodding stiffly. "Ah. Yes. Right. Of course. Consider the detail notified about this, Miss Matsuda."

You glance "I'll alert Squad Hiryu about this too, of course." Enishi cuts in. "We won't disappoint you, Warmaster."

Slicing or blowing open a major artery is a form of death that can't be feasibly stopped in quite a lot of cases. Opening someone's thighs up will bleed them to fatal levels of blood loss in less than a minute, and you often can't stop that blood loss even with a tourniquet in time if there's someone right there.

You have a feeling they won't. You nod at everyone finally, before dismiss the meeting.

Enishi and Kyosuke immediately file out of Ruri's suite, obviously eager to pass down the instructions to their squads. Sayaka, on the other hand, joins Ruri in picking their costumes - it seems that the super idol's forgotten you long enough to get obsessed with playing dress-up, again. At the corner, Noriko seems to have recovered, and is fiddling with her smartphone again.

What do you do, now?

With the final security meeting done, you can breathe easy in knowing that everyone knows what to do. The contingency plan you came up with, in case it all goes ass-upwards, seems to be the prudent sort of thing to do, so that's another plus there.

You still have a bit of time before you have to get ready yourself, so you decide to talk to a couple of people first. The first of them being Ruri - the principal that more than a couple of dozen people will be laying down their lives for. Yours included.

"Hey, Chiaki-chan!" Ruri beams at you as you approach. "Thanks for handling that for me."

Handling what, exactly? The security meeting? But that's your job. You're supposed to be handling that.

"Yes, of course!" The super idol nods. "But the fact that you conducted it with me seeing you guys talk so seriously...well, it helps me feel just a bit more safe, you know?" She shoots a look towards the door that Kyosuke used to leave the suite. "Kyojou never really let me see him talk to his bros before, you know! Something about not letting me worry with that kind of thing, as if I can't handle some big, tough guys talking about shooting people in the face!"

Well, you can see his point there. Clients aren't supposed to worry--

"Yeah, but it helps if the client knows what's going on, right? So I'm not confused when stuff does happen! So I know that I'm really getting my money's worth in protection!"

Ah. That's...you get her point too. It's good that she feels safer, though. You won't let anyone harm a hair on her head.

"A-ahaha." It's here that the super idol blushes. "H-hearing you say that, Chiaki-chan, it...it kind of makes my heart beat faster, you know?" She smiles. "Is this how...how Miracle Midori felt?"

...This idol. Seriously, this idol.

What do you say to Ruri?

You stare at Ruri for a few moments before shaking your head. You have no idea what Miracle Midori felt. Maybe it is, you're not exactly sure. She's the one with the script, after all - shouldn't she know?

The super idol blinks at you, before shaking her head, giggling. Her long green hair, tied into elegant twintails, rippling with every movement. "Hee, well, it wasn't really a question, you know. But I guess that's a point - I should read through the script a bit more, see if I can really get into Miracle Midori's shoes. It's not just enough that I reread the entire series from back to back, you know - the emotion has to be there, or else it all falls flat!"

It's here that she groans. "Ahh, if only we could talk to the actual author, you know! But she's really hard to get a hold of, she doesn't even have an e-mail address!"

...Really? Well. Is Green Green that elusive?

"She is!" Ruri nods at you, quite animated. "I've hired a bunch of private investigators already, all of them came up with nothing!" It's here that she pouts. "I even asked Kyuubey if he could help me with it, but he only stayed quiet and then changed the subject, just like that." She lets out a sigh. "It's not just to bother her about Miracle Midori's motivations, you know...it's also to tell her just how significant a body of work the entire MM x MM series is!"

Significant body of work...? But surely it's just lesbian pornography, really?

Ruri stops at this, before narrowing her eyes at you, the air of an offended rabid fan all but blasting from her. "...Chiaki-chan, I should shout at you for that, you know? You're the one who inspired one of the main characters, the least you could do is to appreciate the deep, nuanced story!"

...Right. Maybe when you've got the time. In any case, does she understand what she has to do? Does she have any questions about anything?

>>26713538

"...No, Chiaki-chan, I overheard everything else you guys were whispering about earlier." It's here that Ruri turns away from you as she rummages through her wardrobe rack full of costumes, flipping through every one, sounding completely bored now."I'll just stick close to you and Sayaka-chan the entire time, and follow all your instructions without asking any stupid questions."

She looks at you pointedly, through another transparent outfit that should not have any place on any self-respecting girl's body. "Is that everything, Chiaki-chan? Can I go back to my vapid idol hobbies now, before I sing to fifty thousand people in the stadium and approximately a billion more online?"

You nod, slightly surprised yourself. You were actually expecting her to be a bit difficult about this, but at least she's cooperating without too much fuss. Yeah, that's all you wanted.

...Well, no. Not everything. This...idols singing in one voice thing, about her concert. What's that about?

"...What did you think it was?" Ruri blinks at you. "It's all the idols in the performance singing one song, with me leading the melody!"

Ah. Huh. Well. That doesn't sound so bad. You were thinking about...nevermind. You leave her to her cosplaying.

"I wasn't planning anything weird, Chiaki-chan! Really, now!" Ruri calls after you, before grumbling something to Sayaka. You pointedly ignore this, excusing yourself from the room - seeing Enishi just finishing up her briefing with Squad Hiryu, just outside.

"--Let's do our best not to involve any civilians, shall we? Of course, any civilian that you see attempting to get too close to the Principal or the Warmaster, you are allowed to put down with extreme prejudice." The Callidus looks at each member of Squad Hiryu in turn. "Now, you girls get ready, we'll be moving out soon. Dismissed."

The squad quickly disperses - saluting you as they go past - and Enishi smiles as you come closer. "Ah, Warmaster. Thank you for your suggestion, earlier. It'll be quite the new experience for me, serving so closely with my Warmaster. As you may have inferred, Miss Valnikov never really...asked for Callidus support in such a manner."

Oh? She didn't?

"No." Enishi shakes her head mournfully. "We were mostly decoys at her disposal. Sometimes, set on fire, to add as further distraction."

Ah. Well. Kharn's...Kharn.

"Nevermind that, though. What can I do for you, then, Warmaster?" Enishi smiles again, curtseying slightly.

"Ah. Hmm." Enishi nods thoughtfully, after you've finished listing down your questions. "Well, let's see...I'll try not to be too long-winded, I have a problem with that..."

And she did try, but you did have to listen for a bit to get everything down. Apparently, the range of Callidus illusion magic varies from individual to individual - mostly relying on how they're trained, how rigorous their training and innate ability. But it seems to depend mostly on how the illusion itself is applied.

For example, is the Callidus asked to create something out of nothing, like an illusion of a dragon or some giant beast to fly through the air? Then the Callidus must certainly have a line of sight to maintain the illusion. If it's to brainwash someone into seeing something that isn't there, or seeing nothing where there is something? Then the Callidus must ideally be near the targets, or even within touching distance if necessary.

"Of course, we can rely on certain tokens or items to do it remotely, to a point, Warmaster." Enishi nods. "We can imbue small items with a precast illusion, to trigger when they're in the presence of the desired target, or in their possession, somehow. Like a card, or a talisman of some sort. Of course, such illusions are usually the simple kind - you can't really make an elaborate illusion and then consign it to a token as insignificant as a business card."

The Callidus takes out a blank, rectangular sheet of white rice paper from the inside of her sleeve. As she unfurls it in front of you, black kanji etches itself on the white surface, inked by an invisible brush. "We usually only use it to get past non-magical folk, Warmaster. Anyone worth their Soul Gem will be able to see through such an illusion clearly."

Ah. Well. You probably don't need to worry about that, then?

☐ Deculture 08/19/13(Mon)10:42 No.26714630

>>26714606

"Mostly." It's here that Enishi allows herself a small smile. "But it should not make you complacent, Warmaster. It's possible that the enemy Callidus focused on token-based illusions as the main part of their training."

That's something to take note of, then. But is there a limitation to such illusions?

"Token-based illusions only last a short while, depending on how much magic's been used for them." Enishi had said. "It can range from a mere ten seconds to a full ten minutes. Rarely do they ever reach up to thirty minutes at a time, but that would take...an enormous amount of magic."

But are they easy to see through, if you're a Magical Girl?

"I would say so." Enishi places her rice paper talisman back into her sleeve. "You'd have to be really careless not to see it, Warmaster. Just take out your Soul Gem and let its light shine - it'd mark out the token reliably."

Right. You'll remember that.

Now, what about her own strengths? How will she go about performing her duties? And what will she disguise you, the Principal, and Sayaka as?

"I am well-versed in the arts of concealment and disguise, Warmaster." The Callidus Rank Leader smiles. "As I've said earlier, I will be fully invisible throughout the duration of the entire operation, unless you ask me to drop my cover. As for you three - well, the illusion will work outwards. You won't be able to see the disguise layer when I activate it on your person - only those who will be looking at you."

But how will you be able to tell if you're disguised?

"It'll be very obvious." She smiles. "But just so that there's no confusion, you'll have a bit of a crimson glow encompassing your person. Of course, this indicator is not visible to everyone else, just you and those in the same disguise layer."

Mmmh. That sounds simple enough. You thank her for telling you all of this.

"As you say so. I live to serve, Warmaster."

Is there anything else you'd like to ask? If not, then you may as well get ready.

You decide that you've learned enough from Enishi. You make to dismiss her, but stop at the very last moment, causing the Callidus to blink at you with a quizzical look on her face. "Er...yes, Warmaster? What seems to be the problem?"

Well. If she's going to be invisible the entire mission, then she may as well dress up for the ocassion, right? She should talk with the principal, see if she could score a costume or two. Ruri seems to be in a cosplaying mode anyway, so there's that.

"O-oh! I...I do believe I will, then!" Enishi's smile is bright and quite possibly remini...Nothing. Just burned away like any kind of card, really. Left a bit of a mess of black charred bits on the floor, but besides that, it was harmless. scent of a child that's just been told that she could open her Christmas gifts early. "Thank you, Warmaster! I won't forget this!"

You wave away her gratitude and allow her to leave, just as you pull Yoshitaka Mine's business card from your inventory. Turning it over and over in your hands.

Finally, after a long day - you'll be able to get through the second day of this fucking op. Actually doing the job you're supposed to, rather than just play grumpy babysitter. And it took a while, longer than you thought.

You glance down at the card in your hands. ...Well, it doesn't look like any kind of illusion token, but you're not going to take any chances.

A freshly-lit cigarette bobbing up and down on your lips, you hold the card over your zippo's ignited flame - and let the white rectangular piece of cardboard burn in your grasp. You watch carefully, scrutinizing how it burned, looking to see if it'd explode somehow, or release any illusion it may have had stored inside.

Taking a deep breath of calming cigarette smoke, you glance back towards the room where Ruri still remained - her animated chatter with Sayaka and Enishi muffled to intelligibility behind the walls seperating you.

Idols. Seriously.

Never again, you promise yourself. Never, as long as you're Warmaster. As long as you're still a Magical Girl.

Idols will be the death of you, Pinky had warned.

It's not as grisly as getting your heart torn out, but compared to idols?

You'd rather have Pinky put you out of your misery.

There was a certain time early, early every morning (except for Saturdays) when all of the other Rabbits were tucked tightly in their beds, and everything in the building was dyed a gentle blue-gray. This morning in particular had a certain cool crispness that lent a sort of surreal quality to the common room, and though I typically cherished the peace and quiet of the mornings, it ate at me as I sat with my morning tea.

Things had finally settled down again, recently. Rather, I ought to say I had come to terms with a few things as of late, and I'd fully integrated into the group again. Maybe as their den mother more than their comrade, but I liked to think that was for the best. Even I'd admit that some of them needed reining in at times.

I caught a flicker in the corner of my…vision, I supposed. I wasn't entirely sure how to think of it. It was more of a sense than anything, a 'feeling' of proud, pale aquamarine, sparkling at eight o' clock. She moved ever so slightly – peeking out at me almost like a cat, apparently fascinated with my small morning ritual.

…Well, I was in no hurry. If she needed something, I would be here until she was ready. I took a sip of hot, refreshing tea and left my thoughts to churn while I focused on her movements, and after a few long minutes of apparent deliberation, she slipped out from the doorway, making scarcely a noise on the padded carpet.

I opened my mouth to say something, but I had a feeling it would send her scuttling off like a mouse, the way she was acting. It was odd behavior for her already.

"…Wright," she began, crisply and quietly, in the vague trappings of her gentle patois. She cleared her throat. "A moment of your time, if you please, and your thoughts on a vexation of mine." Viola was never one for speaking bluntly, and we'd all wondered from time to time if this was typical over in the European Officios. This sort of morning meeting was why I keep two cups out, regardless, and I poured some tea for her as she took a seat across from me.

"Has Wendy been teasing you again?" I asked after a few moments of silence passed. Viola's attitude could be…difficult for most people to deal with, and she'd poisoned more than a few wells for herself after she'd transferred to the Eighth. She and Wendy ended up on assignments together reasonably often, though, and I liked to think they'd become good friends, despite their mutual grumbling.

"Cooldown? As though that would bother me. I haven't an ear for fools." She stared hard into her tea, and I offered a smile, reaching over the table to pat her shoulder. "This is…about our Eastern guests, from a few weeks ago. The Japanese."

I nodded and urged her to continue.

"…Among them walked a goddess, Dorothy." Viola nearly swallowed the last few words, her teeth digging into her lower lip. The faintest hints of a blush began on her face, and my own smile grew (with some small effort). "In manner and spirit, in grace and in battle. A beacon of shining gold amongst the dark-haired rabble."

Well, at least she wasn't referring to them as Orientals. Anymore. I nodded again and took a long, pointed sip of my tea, to allow her a moment to think about what she needed to say.

"…I can't stop thinking about her. Dreams, wicked and vibrant dreams, haunt me. …I…am not entirely sure how to cope with this. You've sense, and experience in matters of the…the heart." She shifted uncomfortably in her seat. "I need to see her. I want to see her smile again. I want to keep it for my own."

"Don't cut off her head, Viola," I scolded as gently as I could. "That's hardly the way to begin a romance."

"…I wasn't going to," she lied. "I hadn't even thought about it."

I couldn't say I knew Miss Tomoe very well – we'd only met very briefly, just once or twice. She was awfully kind to all of us, despite the Corps's infamy among certain other Officios, though she also held onto a cool, professional air that I'd rarely seen in…well, in the United States as a whole, in fact. Aside from a few glimpses into diplomatic Callidus missions, and Warmaster Marigold's picnics with dignitaries.

What I did know, however, was the simple, inescapable fact that clothes made a woman, and Viola's were…at best, uninspiring (aside from half a wardrobe of implausibly lacy garments that I was sure the Prima was behind). A couple of old uniforms from her time at the Second, a smattering of blouses and skirts, and…granny panties.

…Well, supposedly those had come back into style lately, but the rest needed a severe tuneup. And that was why we were hitting our third high-end boutique for the day. I had insisted as politely as I could that I size and evaluate Viola myself, and while I don't enjoy throwing my weight around, it was rare for anybody in Santa Destroy to argue after one flashed one's Eighth Officio ID card.

"Is…is this truly what Miss Tomoe would want from me?" For the eleventh time in the past two hours, Viola nibbled her lip and fixed her eyes on me.

"Do try and have a little faith, Viola. I plan to do everything I can to make this work for you, but you need to trust me." I tried to reassure her with a gentle squeeze on the arm, but for one reason or another, it seemed to make her all the more uncomfortable. Maybe it was a bit too hard…

"Would she not see through such shallow drapery?" She definitely needed something cool and professional…blue hair was so hard to do anything cute with...Well, that and her smiles tended to be ominous on the best of days…trying to work against her nature would just come off as dissonant… "…Wright?"

"Mm?" I paused for a fraction of a second to review what she'd asked. "There's nothing to see through." Not entirely true, but I had a feeling she would be…a bit upset, if I pointed out that howling about blood for the Blessed Lady tended not to make the best impression.

"And it isn't shallow," I added after a moment of thought. "You're dressing to highlight your best features. The best features of your personality, I mean." I shot Viola a sideways glance just in time to see her mouth snap shut.

"…Quite."

"I'm just saying, you're prrrobably better off putting a Chihuahua in a little Santa outfit."

I really hated to admit it, but even after carefully styling Viola's hair, carefully applying makeup, and fitting her with the most stunning semi-formalwear in Santa Destroy…well, Amber wasn't the only one to whom a scared little dog in a costume came to mind.

Well, it was more correct to say that the outfit looked great – a nice, dark suit jacket with a silk blouse and sensible tie, along with a stylish, just-short-of-risque` skirt with black pantyhose and riding boots, a compromise between functional combat boots and fashionable heels (I still wasn't happy about that, but it worked well enough) – but Viola didn't wear it as well as I'd hoped. The style was right, it was almost there, but…

"…This whole affair bears the acrid stench of failure." Viola gripped her arm tightly, looking all the world like a wounded animal. My heart ached as I stood, trying to puzzle out the best way to proceed.

"I think that's cherry blossoms, actually? They all kind of smell the same to me, I'm not really, y'know, a perfume person. I'm kind of surprised you didn't just dab blood behind your ears or something and call it a day." Amber tilted her head, peering through a little box she made with her fingers.

"Wright wouldn't allow it," Viola huffed in response, seemingly relaxing just a bit. She and Amber began to chatter about the events of the day, and while I kept an ear open, I instead focused on the problem at hand.

A million pinpricks lit up the inside of my mind as a world of information opened before me. It occurred to me in passing that I ought to have simply done this before, as I recalled V's measurements and what I had of her stance and movement patterns, but I didn't regret it. The old ways felt better, at least for a baseline.

…Well, I would like to say it was arduous, but it only took a few seconds to work out what I thought would be a good solution. I was wrong the first time, though, so I double and triple-checked, adjusting over a few minutes as Viola eased up. Amber always knew when to start needling people; she was already pushing V back into a more natural state of mind.

Once I finished, I slipped in closer to make some adjustments, and…

"…you just pin her down and lick it, she won't even…" I caught Amber in the middle of giving Viola some terrible, offensive advice, though she quieted down into a little giggle as I stared her down. "Sorry, were you ready?"

"…Yes. I need you to fetch something for me-"

"You're not just going to put her in a sweater, are you?" Amber peered up at me. …It wasn't like I had a fixation on sweaters…

"No sweaters. I promise." Well, I did think about it for a moment.

What I needed was fairly simple: one thing I was sure Annie would part with, and if not, something we could pull together easily from my things if we had to.

After she hopped off, I got to work. With a spark of magic, a needle-thin pink field appeared around my finger, and I leaned in to work. Ditch the tie...slice away the top two buttons…Viola shifted as she stood, though her breathing steadied while I worked near her chest. …It was nice to know she trusted me.

Amber was back with the last piece to the outfit (I hoped) faster than I expected, and I kept her waiting for another few minutes while I fussed with Viola's blouse and her collar. I'd definitely need to adjust the fit on these later, or go full haute couture-

"Come onnn I didn't go snooping around Annie's Nobody Loves Me collection so I could watch you play with V's boobs." Viola stiffened up, and I pulled away with a small sigh before taking the crowning piece of sorts for the outfit – a heavy black choker with the Blessed Lady's golden symbol lovingly hung from it.

It seemed…warm in my hands, like I could feel the Lady's smile deep in my heart just by touching it, and I paused to study it. …It shone brightly – no, nearly glowed, even in the ordinary lighting of Viola's room. I gingerly fastened it around her neck, and immediately, she reached for it, fingers tracing over every millimeter.

…Yes. Yes, this would be perfect. Even she seemed to like it.

A few weeks later, Amber and I waved to Viola and the others as their plane took off, now en route to Mitakihara City. It had become increasingly common to…we'll just say 'creatively discover' reasons to travel to Japan recently, due in no small part to the Prima's fascination with Shibuya and Wendy's newfound personal life. To my understanding, though, it had done quite a lot to build the relationship between our Officios, and that was indisputably a good thing.

…Even so, it was a little sad to see everyone disappear into the sunrise whenever they'd leave. Moreso than usual, I felt a bit like a mother sending her little girl off to school. Well, her first date, hopefully. That was sort of the same thing.

"M'lady~ Your private jet's gassed up and ready to go!" Amber snapped a crisp salute as I glanced toward her, just barely forcing the grin off of her face.

“Oh, how wonderful.” I couldn’t help but beam, myself. With a sensitive girl like Viola, it was natural to want to walk her to school for the first few days, so to speak. Even if Miss Tomoe didn’t return her honest, innocent feelings, we would make absolutely certain she would have every chance to.

It's not just you, though. Everyone, EVERYWHERE writes her the same. Always horrible mutilations and humiliations and DON'T TOUCH MY FLOWERS OR I'LL EAT YOUR SPINE bullshit.
Yeah, now that you've chosen to write her like that you should go ahead and stay consistent, but I'm still disappointed at the wasted opportunity to do something different for a change.

Personally I favor curling into a ball and reciting mantras while trying not to shake too badly until sleep overcomes me, and repeat.

There is nothing to interpret there. You have written her to be obscenely powerful, terrifyingly sadistic, and nowhere near sane.
And I wouldn't have a problem with it, except that's exactly how everyone else writes her, everywhere, and it's all based on one line of dialog that is taken completely out of context and blown way out of proportion.
But like I said, keep writing. Despite my disappointment in how you chose to depict one character, the rest of your stuff is quite good.

So far, I've decided that the twenties would have seen a shortage of magical girls that continued to decline alarmingly, and the Great Depression was actually the work of one Incubator or another to make it so that more girls are desperate enough to make a contract.
It actually worked much more effectively than anticipated because the economy was -already- headed for a sizable recession, and brought about a terrible glut of girls seeking to join the ranks, along with a lot of wishes for things like for their family to have money or not be hungry anymore.
And of course, whatever powers those kinds of wishes predispose a magical girl to, there would be an extremely high number of girls in that rank.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 09/02/13(Mon)05:59 No.26977768

You are a Magical Girl, and you're on your very first mission as Warmaster of the Ninth Officio. Your current objective at the moment is to escort Kirishima Ruri, the most powerful and influential idol in mainstream media, to Mitakihara Stadium for her concert. Once there, you'll be digging in and keeping guard along with your hand-picked team, to make sure that nothing untoward happens to the principal.

With any luck, this concert would go through without a hitch.

The last two days hasn't exactly been kind to you. Besides finding out that your principal is basically a green-haired giggly harpy that seems to schitzophrenically bounce between a reasonable, if even well-intentioned nice girl next door to a grinning, scheming master troll - and discovering that you're the current target of a massive security leak that's all but sanctioned by your boss AND has your hair-trigger temper, high-frequency pigsticker-wielding colleague on her side - trying to get things secured had been an absolute ordeal. Thankfully, Kyuubey seemed generous with allocating resources you needed, but...you've got a feeling that won't be the case in the future. The mutant cat does have his own limits, and it'll only be a matter of time before you start hitting them.

...Well, it wasn't all that bad. You did have a nice dream, earlier, one that didn't involve you dying somehow while a pink-haired eldritchian horror giggled over your twitching corpse. And you did find a friend - of sorts - with Karasawa Noriko, a sweaty, drippy assistant of Ruri and an idol of her own right. You've no idea how she survives being the superidol's daily kicking puppy, and you've scared the wits out of her a couple of times - but she seemed like a nice kid. Nice enough that you'd probably take a bullet for her if she gets in the crossfire. Or avoid using her as a human shield if it's you being shot at. Something like that, yeah. That's what friends do with their friends, right?

Besides not setting them on fire.

...You're never going to let that go, are you? Because you should. It's time to let it go. Move on with your life. Seriously.

If it's any consolation, the journey to Mitakihara Stadium seems to be moving along smoothly, with the four-car convoy proceeding without incident down a route that's already been blocked off and secured by the city authorities. Most of the security detail the first three cars - Squad Hiryu included - while you, Enishi and Sayaka rode along with Ruri and Noriko in the fourth.

Kyosuke's security firm seemed dedicated into showing they were serious, too - sending out two heavily-armored APCs to escort the convoy, one at point and the other tailing behind. You'd just appreciate it more if the APCs themselves weren't sporting Super Idol Sensation Ruri-sama decals and paintwork, something that even Ruri herself felt was a bit excessive (but not before giggling and having Noriko take pictures of herself posing in front of them).

When asked (or just stonily glared at), Kyosuke explained that it was all 2020 Productions' idea, with the Producer himself insisting that the armored vehicles be dolled up for the concert. Something about making every available surface an 'event-marketing opportunity' or something like that. But as with all things concerning Kirishima Ruri, you decided to simply shrug and let it happen. As long as the gun turrets and stuff on the APCs still work, you wouldn't care if they were plastered with uncensored MM x MM fanart - which, coincidentally, is a real andahorrifying phenomenon that Ruri let you get a peek of from her laptop. You had to look away after the first few pieces, thankful that Sayaka was too busy talking to Kyoko on her smartphone to notice.

It's...well, it's the internet, fine, but you'll probably never get the sight of what is pretty much a drawing of you with bits you shouldn't have, and using said bits on what is essentially a drawing of Midori.

>>26977786

...Setting that aside, things are going your way for now. Not even a peep from Tojo Group, and you were anticipating that they'd try something during the trip to the stadium. No sudden unexplained packages from the Prophet, and even Pinky's behaving (although she did just kiss you with a mouth full of blood earlier). So far, so good, then?

"More like so far, so boring." Ruri grumbles for what seems like the umpteenth time since you got into the car, the idol slouching while in her frilly, black gothic lolita costume. Her brilliant green hair tied into her trademark twintails and then teased into gentle curls. "Really, Chiaki-chan, when I asked for you to escort me, I thought things would be a bit more...exciting! Shootouts! High-speed car chases! Explosions!"

Both you and Sayaka share a glance, and the Blueberry replies for you. "But...isn't that what you asked us specifically to prevent, Ruri-san?"

"Well, yeah..." Ruri allows, before sighing again. "But I wanted to see the both of you - especially Chiaki-chan here - in action! I mean, it seems kind of a waste, right? For everyone to go to this kind of effort, and nothing happening?" She turns to you, then at Sayaka, then back at you again, expectantly. "Right? You agree with me, right? Ne, Chiaki-chan?"

This idol. Really, this idol.

How do you respond?

You glance down at the Warmaster cap in your hands - the winged skull emblem embroidered with golden thread grinning toothily at you - before looking back up at the idol. You reply that the security isn't really a waste, as far as you're concerned - it's always better to have something and not need it, than need something and not have it.

That said, you're hoping that it'll be the former rather than the latter - as much as you agree that some action would indeed be exciting for her, it wouldn't be nearly as exciting for you. Shootouts aren't nearly as exciting when you've got a principal to worry about. It's the reason why escort missions like these are more often than not avoided like the plague in the Officio, even if they mean a significant boost in pay.

...And no, you're not giving her a gun.

Ruri blinks at you. "Huh? B-but how did you--" The idol starts, puzzled, before shaking her head and pouting. "Aw, you're no fun, Chiaki-chan."

Yes. You agree. You are No Fun Incarnate. And your boring, funless reign will continue until your contract with her is over and everyone can move on with their lives.

"Hmph!" Ruri turns her nose up and away from you, crossing her arms in a very annoying princess-like air. "You're making yourself lose so many Ruri Points, Chiaki-chan, it's not even funny! How are you going to get the Harem End if you're going to be like that all the time?"

What? You're not even sure you can manage a single relationship. The hell is she talking about a Harem End? And what the hell are Ruri Points? Is this some kind of idol thing?

"Affection points," Sayaka murmurs beside you. "You know. In visual novel games, that kind of thing."

...Ah. You guessed it was something like that.

You were about to say how you're not at all interested in Ruri points at all, when all of a sudden the car you're riding in suddenly screeches to a crashing halt, and causing almost everyone to pitch forward in their seats. Sayaka squawks as Noriko ends up with her face in her lap, while Ruri herself shrieks as she finds herself sprawled on top of yours, her legs around your waist. You catch a whiff of her perfumed scent, one spiced with mint and something vaguely floral - before the angry swearing starts. Mostly from you, Sayaka, and surprisingly a bit from Ruri, but only after the both of you disentangle yourselves from each other awkwardly.

"What the hell happened?!" Sayaka turns towards the driver, who all but flinches as he tries to listen closely to the scratchy static coming from his earbud. "Why'd we stop? The road was supposed to be cleared for us! We don't even need to stop for red lights, for fuck's sake!"

"The point APC says there's...there's something on the road in front of us, ma'am! Right in the middle of the road! It wasn't there earlier, it just popped up out of nowhere!"

"Well, have them drive around it, for fuck's sake!" Sayaka all but growls. "I thought you guys were fucking pros!" There's a moment as the blue-haired Eversor visibly tries to calm herself. "...Did they say what it is, even?"

The driver nods, and murmurs something into his headset. A few moments more, and he turns to Sayaka. "...They say it's a dead body, ma'am. Female. In a...in a Magical Girl costume, it sounds like." Some more static, and the driver goes pale. "And...uh...it appears to be one with the head cut off, ma'am."

"...What?" Ruri gasps, here, a horrified expression on her face. "T-that's...no, the Tojo Group wouldn't go that far, would they?"

...Well. Fuck.

For those voting timestop, it may longer be our absolute advantage.

The body just popped out of nowhere. This requires either of 2 scenarios:

1) Enemy knows our routes and hid the body there, perhaps casting a veil on it until we got close enough.

2) A member of the OPFOR has timestop. Getting our route and dragging a corpse to block up while doing so.

You tell the driver to have everyone on high alert and be ready to move when you say so. You then turn to Sayaka and Enishi, telling them to guard Ruri with their lives and be ready for anything.

"Huh?" Sayaka frowns at you as she tries to fix her hair back into its unmussed form, Noriko's struggling and flailing having made a complete mess of it. "Well, of course that's what we're supposed to do all along, the hell are you trying to--" A moment, and her eyes go wide. "Wait. You're not seriously thinking of going out there, are you?"

...Of course you are. You're just going to see what it is.

"Are you fucking--" The blue-haired Eversor starts to yell, before forcing herself to take a deep breath, a gloved hand on her chest as she forces the air down. "...Look, I know that your amnesia's pretty inconvenient, but that only affects your memory, right? It has nothing to do whatsoever with your common sense, or what little of it you've got."

And her point is?

"My point is that it's obviously a fucking TRAP!" Her voice rises at the very last word, obviously for emphasis and obviously because she could only modulate herself so much. "Get the fucking convoy to keep moving forward and around it, double-time!"

"...I hate to say it, but Miki-san has a point, Warmaster." Enishi cuts in. "This is nothing but the crudest of bait for a trap. We should be cautious." A moment of silence, before she shakes her head. "But if we cannot stop you, then I will insist at least on half of Squad Kiryu stepping out and forming overwatch while you investigate."

...Sure. That'll be fine.

Correct but we did not fight kilgore only because he wanted to fight Chiaki. He was there to attempt to summon Pinky or some other devil, we only fought him because his plans directly ran counter to ours at that point.

So to that end, what is this one's goal? It will NOT just be simply fighting Chiaki. The head delivery and now the body, the malice and clear calling of a hit Mami shows that the perp at least has some sort of goal/target. Whether that is even the final goal is in question and might just be something to get Chiaki to react against, badly.

If the final goal is Mami, well, we have teams protecting her and we can get there in hurry. If it is someone else outside our scope, they're shit out of luck. But if the target is our principal, this trap easily separates us from her, the only one who can counter a GW holder and hope to win.

Too much fixation on the body. Investigating it does nothing but satisfy our own curiosity. Timestop ? Why even the chance getting close to the body. If there are snipers, bombs or ambushes or whatever waiting ahead they could set one whichever way we go anyway.

Stay away from the one that has the highest chance of being a Callidus trap. Let's not test our timestop against possible a precog or anything that we can just leave alone with no consequence instead.

Well, you were going to use your Shield to stop time and investigate, but...Sayaka being spooked to the point that she's calling you by your real name? AND using the magic word? That's something you really have to stop and pay attention to. That means shit has officially become real.

You glance at the blue-haired Eversor, then back at the door you're about to open - before letting go of the handle and re-engaging the lock. Fine, you tell her. The convoy'll go ahead, but only after you've had some of the security detail secure the body. You also want to call Headquarters and have someone from the Officio to collect the corpse and have it processed for evidence.

"Alright. That's...that's okay." Sayaka nods, and you hear her let out the breath she seems to have been holding. What she doesn't let go of, however, is your wrist - her gloved hand still grasping yours, firmly enough that you feel your fingers start to grow numb. You blink at this, before giving your captured arm a brief shake. And then another. By the third time, Sayaka seems to finally get it, and lets go, a slight blush on her cheeks.

"A-ah. Sorry, Murderface." She sheepishly apologises. "Was kinda expecting that you'd book it the moment I let go."

...What did she think you were, some sort of kid?

"No, but..." The Eversor shakes her head. "I was just...er...just, uh..."

"It's fine, Miki-san. The Warmaster is just surprised that you're actually showing concern towards her well-being, rather than you simply wishing that she'd die in a gory car accident." Enishi cuts in again, a smile on her face, one that grows wider as Sayaka glares at her. "Warmaster, I'll take care of having the body processed, I have Mami-san on the line as we speak. I've also alerted Kyosuke-san to have the body secured until our people arrive to collect it."

Ah. Well. You were just going to do that, but...that's handy. You thank her.

"This much is nothing, Matsuda-sama." The Callidus smiles, bowing serenely, still pointedly ignoring Sayaka's dagger-like stare. "I am at the Warmaster's service."

"Kissass." Sayaka grumbles underneath her breath, audible enough for everyone to hear. Enishi simply giggles at this, but doesn't return the barb, thankfully.

The convoy starts to move again a few minutes later, Kyosuke's men doing what they were supposed to with military precision - the grisly obstacle secured and removed from the road. The car you're in is silent as you pass by the three men left behind to watch over the corpse, two of them already carefully placing it in a bodybag. You catch a glimpse of the body just as it's zipped up - and it's unmistakable how it's wearing the same costume you remember Mami wearing.

You turn towards Enishi, a question poised on your lips, and Enishi holds up a hand, her expression grave."No, Matsuda-sama. Like I said, I was on the phone with Mami-san only a few minutes ago. It's not her. Please trust me on that."

Ah. You nod slowly, before leaning back on your seat. All...all right, then.

Had you looked to the side, you'd have seen Sayaka do the same, the same cold dread on her face.

"Mami-san?" Ruri, who's been uncharacteristically quiet since the convoy stopped, squeaks out. "Who's this Mami-san? Is she...is she someone important to you, Chiaki-chan?"

How do you respond? It seems that Ruri's trying to calm down by finding someone to talk about.

I suppose this is a fair answer and I like it. But even if I dislike Ruri myself, some sort of reassurance here would be pretty in line with Chiaki's attitude.

Maybe this with a mention that she's a well liked figure and important figure in the business?

Yes, focus on a detailed explanation of the virtue I'm Mami's pancakes. Doesn't make an sense to me, why would we go and lie about something like that. No one has a crush on Mami, crush is too simple a word to describe it. Sayaka loves Kyoko, she also loves mami just as much as we do, but it's not the same kind of love, though if you harmed either of them, Sayaka would probably do the same thing to you regardless of who you hurt.

You blink at the question. Mami? Well...if you're the one being asked, she's...yes, she's important to you. Add to that, she's important to everyone back at your Officio. Even your boss holds her in high regard.

Oh, and she makes the best pancakes ever. The best. You've never had anything that comes even remotely close to what she could make.

"O-oh?" Ruri manages a smile, now. "H-hee. SO that explains Chiaki-chan's pancake fetish. ..Ahh, now I want to see how they taste! Maybe after the concert, then!"

...Yeah. Maybe after, you reply with a nod. You stare at her for a moment, before asking if she's still okay to go through the concert. You could probably call ahead in her behalf, have the entire thing postponed. That's how it's usually done, isn't it?

"W-what? No! No, I'll...I'll be fine, really!" Ruri insists, shaking her head, accidentally hitting Noriko with a faceful of green drill-hair. "It's...I guess I feel just a bit silly, you know? I was asking for action eaerlier, and then I sort of get my wish, b-but in such a way..."

Well. That's what's dangerous about wishes. Sometimes they're granted in the worst way ever.

Anyway, you were expecting her to actually think it's cool, or what.

"...Now you're just being mean, Chiaki-chan." Ruri frowns here. "I know I'm sort of a magical girl superfan, but...I'm not the kind of person who jumps up and down at this sort of thing. Magical Girls fighting and dying in combat, sure, that's heroic and stuff, but being murdered in cold blood and put in display like that..." She shakes her head, hugging herself.

Well. You're not sure what she expected. This is how things go, really. And you thought she looked up what Kharn did in her spare time, and everything.

"T-this is different!"

No. No, it's really not.

"Murderface." Sayaka cuts in. "Let's get this done without scaring the principal any more, yeah?"

...Yeah. Sure.

Not because of Ruri, of course. But because Noriko looks like she's about to pass out, the poor girl shivering while pulling her hoodie around her tightly. Probably needs some sort of hug or some sort.

You make do by patting her on the shoulder, instead. She seems to calm down some, but not enough.

The rest of the trip is spent in stone cold silence, broken occasionally by Enishi and the driver checking in with their respective teams. You take this opportunity to listen in on the conversations with your own provided headset.

You'll be relieved when this operation is finally over. The smash-and-grab mission directly afterwards will be a complete godsend.

The convoy reaches the stadium with no further interruptions, and everyone in the car with you heaves a collective sigh of relief as it pulls up beside the red carpet walkway leading to the entrance. As usual, the entire place is lousy with rabid fans, but at least the actual carpeted area is cordoned off with metal rails and heavily-armed guards. The cheering, muffled slightly by the car's soundproofing, is a wall of sound you're not particularly looking forward to crash into.

"Well, here we are, then," Ruri murmurs, briefly glancing at her reflection from her smartphone's surface and smiling. "You guys ready? It'll be really loud and frantic, but we usually just make a beeline for the entrance, that's it. If anyone tries to get close, you can push them back, but no hitting! Especially if they're the press!"

"Christ, look at the size of the goddamn crowd." Sayaka breathes, her eyes wide as she stares out the window. "...Do you think anyone from our Officio is in that crowd, Murderface?"

Well, it's possible. Kyuubey did say a lot of girls showed up for that webcast in the general assembly room.

"Yeah, but..." She points out to the crowd, and you look closer at where she's pointing.

And it's then that you see what kind of situation you're in.

Most of the crowd, if not all of them, are in Magical Girl costumes.

"...Well, I'm not gonna say they're all Magical Girls, for real, you know? Maybe they're just cosplayers, but..." Sayaka shakes her head. "It'd be stupidly easy for a hostile MG to hide in that mess."

Shit. You hate it when she's right.

"I'd suggest just placing Ruri-san between us while we make our way through, as quickly as we can." Enishi cuts in. "We are still prepared to provide an armed response in case of anything, yes? And I'm sure no assassin will try anything out in such an open environment, and in front of so many witnesses. There are media crew out there, too, so anything awry will be captured on camera."

That's...yeah, that makes sense.

"Well? How do we do this, then?" Sayaka glances at Ruri, then back at you.

How do you escort Ruri down the red carpet? There's a high possibility she'll be accosted by media and fans.

All these shadowruns, the truth is this.

After it's all over, she'll top off her plan with celebratory thank you sex in a dramatic reenactment of chapter 27 of that one MM X MM doujin.

How are you all not seeing this?

You'll go with what Enishi suggested. While you're tempted to have her use her abilities to try and mask Ruri's presence as someone else, you also don't want to tire out the one Callidus in your team even before the concert's started. You'll just need to have to get through this in the shortest time possible.

You share the plan with the idol, and she nods. "Right. No interviews, just waving and smiling to the crowd, that's it. Don't stop, keep moving forward. I get it, Chiaki-chan." Ruri grins at you, sounding and looking more like her usual self before the thing during the trip happened.

"Well, I can't let something like that bog me down too much, can I?" The idol says, reaching up to fluff up her twintails. "I've got fifty thousand fans to sing my heart out to in that stadium, and a billion more worldwide! If they see me visibly freaked out by something, then it won't be as good, right?"

...Yeah, alright. She's got a point there.

You can't help but think that if Ruri would actually make for a good Magical Girl, if she were ever chosen for a contract. Someone who can make hard decisions based on pure, cold logic without letting their emotions get in the way? The only person you know who could do that is...well, Mami. You can't, and Blueberry sure as hell can't. You doubt Kyoko could, too, and Midori's just right out.

You don't share this with her, though. Because that would just be giving her the completely wrong idea. Not to mention a complete and utter nightmare for you and the rest of the Magical Girl world in general.

"Alright, we ready?" Sayaka calls out, and everyone replies to the affirmative. Noriko, however, shakes her head.

"O-oh, um. I'm not joining everyone." Deepthroat lets out a wan, pale smile. "Assistants aren't supposed to walk on the red carpet. I'll...I'll join you guys backstage, d-don't worry..." She nods at you in particular. It seems the assistant's recovered from the scare you gave her earlier.

Well. Alright, then, if she's sure.

"P-Please...take care of Ruri-sama for me." Noriko sniffs, here. "Get her into the stadium in one piece, alright...?"

...How Ruri managed to get Noriko to be fiercely loyal to her despite the way she sometimes treats her assistant, you'll probably never know.

You give her a small smile, before pulling the door on your side open. Immediately letting in the deafening, overpowering sound of more than a thousand fans cheering, screaming Ruri's name over and over. The sound growing even louder as you step out, jamming the Warmaster Cap on top of your head as you do so.

Showtime.

It actually went...surprisingly well. Despite the healthy paranoia making you and the rest of the security detail dart your eyes here and there periodically, to watch for a held-out firearm or any kind of suspicious movement from any of the screaming, baying fans - all that happened was a few youngsters crawling under the railings, messing up their costumes and running up to Ruri to get their albums and notebooks signed.

This you allowed to happen, albeit under close supervision. But what surprised you even more was that after they got their autographs from Ruri, they immediately went on to you, each one babbling on about how Murder Mayumi is their favorite character forever. You were taken aback enough that Ruri had to gently remind you, via stage whisper, to play along - and with Sayaka and Enishi grinning from ear to ear, you signed the name of Midori's fangirl version of yourself into the fan's proferred paraphernalia, the phony signature looking lame and strained compared to Ruri's flawless, curvy autograph.

...You won't forget this, you tell the blue-haired Eversor.

"I hope so, Murderface." The Blueberry laughs, as Ruri waves energetically to the fans cheering from either side of you. "I really hope so."

You're not too sure if it's the trick of the light or what, or if it's just from the multiple flashbulbs going off?

Prose Magica
The Ballad of the Seventeenth

Early morning light filtered through venetian blinds, casting a striped shadow over the jumble of sheets covering Charlotte Laufson. Her face had buried itself in her pillow while long, blonde hair splayed out and cascaded over the covers. With a groggy groan, she reached out to her bedside table, not bothering to lift her head as she groped and grabbed for her phone. The Callidus rolled over and stared at the screen with a tired, squinted eye still sore from crying herself to sleep. Wednesday. Five days since Odette had disappeared.

The first day had been easy enough. Sure, she had been worried sick, but the former warmaster had a habit of dropping off the face of the Earth for a few days at a time. Lotte had found ways to keep herself busy that day, to keep her mind off of what Odette might be going through. In the end, she'd spent the final hours of it wasting away on a bar stool trading memories with the Bartender.

Things got harder on the second day. The incubator had done Lotte the cruel kindness of giving her the week off to rest up. His caring always managed to carry that certain edge to it. Give her a week to stew in her sorrow. Give her a condo that cost god knows how much money as a parting gift for her abdication, while the person she cared for the most got nothing but a pink slip and an eviction notice. Maybe that was his plan all along.

By the fourth night, all she could do was think about all the things that she wished she'd said and done. Lotte couldn't even remember the last words she'd said to the little ex-warmaster. She'd never even worked up the courage to ask Odette to move in with her, even after her apartment had been broken into. Even Therese had offered to let her stay in the warmaster suite.

The Callidus pulled herself out of bed with a grunt and yawned as she made her way to the kitchen, still dressed in nothing more than her t-shirt and underwear. She cracked an egg and watched it fry as she rubbed the sleep from her pink eyes. A tired sigh escaped her lips as she played with the frying pan. With Odette gone, all of her mistakes seemed to come rushing back, fresh as the day before.

Lotte's eyes wandered to a picture frame long turned down. She couldn't forget it if she tried. In the middle was Odette's nervous, smiling face, freshly appointed as warmaster - her flowing white hair still long and her baseball cap tucked under one arm. Lotte herself - then Callidus rank leader - leaned over with her arm wrapped around the warmaster's shoulders, trying her best to mush her breasts into Odette's face and make her blush for the camera. Therese stood to the warmaster's left trying to hide her anxiety and look professional after just being named Eversor lead after Odette vacated the position. Harriet Blinde, the Culexus rank leader, loomed in the background with her black hooded cloak draped over her hardsuit, one piercing, yellow eye peering through the shattered hole in the left side of her helmet.

And then there was the girl that Lotte didn't allow herself to forget.

The scent of burning egg assaulting her nose shook the blonde from her stupor, making her flail about for a plate to slide the egg onto. In her absentmindedness, Lotte realized she hadn't even remembered to make toast for her breakfast. The Callidus sighed as she fished around in her freezer for a couple slices of bread. Popping them in the toaster, she leaned back against the kitchen counter, once again having little more to do than lose herself in her thoughts.

Two years ago. That was when it happened. Miranda Farewell was her name, but everyone just called her Mimi. She was the youngest of the rank leaders, having only been contracted a year and a half before Odette came to power. Her costume looked just like traditional funeral garb, lace veil and all. Somehow, Lotte had managed to butt heads with her from day one. The kid was all too intent on following rules and procedures; she was talented - greatly so - but lacked the experience and wisdom that came with age.

In reality, as Lotte had come to admit to herself, they had both simply been vying for the warmaster's attention.

Nothing more than a couple of teenage girls with a crush on the same person.

The Callidus huffed as the toast popped. Her mind wandered as she ate her breakfast in silence, dwelling on the past and thinking about the future. As she finished the last bites of her slightly-overcooked egg, her brain switched to the present and she became aware of her current pitiful state. Following a deep breath, she glanced out the window and across the city, then muttered a quiet observation.

"I need to get out of the house."

Wind whistled through the skyscrapers of Toronto's financial district - an unseasonable cold that clung onto the spring as though trying to claw its way back into being. Gray clouds hung over head, a matching ceiling to the towering concrete walls of the city. Lotte shivered as she wandered aimlessly through the streets, her hands shoved deep into the pockets of her favourite fur-lined parka.

For the second time in her life, she couldn't simply calm herself with mindless hedonism. Her mind couldn't settle on any one thing to do. She'd alright spent enough nights perched on a bar stool. No way was she going to let herself become some whiskey-drenched alcoholic. The only person she cared to share her bed with was absent; that being the very source of her current restlessness.

One hand left her coat pocket and reached deep into that of her pants. The Callidus pulled her cellphone up with a haste that surprised even herself - the pocket nearly turning inside out as she yanked it. She stared at the screen as she trudged onward to nowhere. Her thumb flicked up and down, skimming through her gratuitous amount of contacts. Lotte couldn't help but find it funny how she knew so many people, yet there were so few that she was willing to confide in.

Therese was out of the question. They hadn't been on the best of terms for at least a year - even worse after Odette's impeachment. There were Odette's two lackeys - or fan girls as the Callidus saw them - but Lotte had never interacted much with them, despite being so close to the former warmaster. She wasn't even sure where the twins had come from, exactly. They just seemed to appear one day and follow Odette's beck and call.

Lotte couldn't bring herself to bother the Bartender or the Russian any more than she already had. They'd already been far too kind to her as it was. She considered visiting the Eversor in the hospital for a moment just as her eyes focused on one person she hadn't considered. Lotte's thumb hovered over the call button for a timid moment, then tapped it as she inhaled and put the phone to her ear.

A ring.

Then two.

After three rings, her call was answered by a nostalgic, slow, raspy voice distorted through a perpetually broken vox.

"Ah. Yo, Harry," Lotte greeted the Culexus rank leader. "It's Lotte. Long time no talk, eh?"

The Callidus grinned sheepishly as the Culexus greeted her in kind. It had been months since they'd spoken, even after staying close throughout Odette's tenure as warmaster. There was something refreshing about talking to such an old friend. Harriet had been contracted only a year before Lotte, around the same time as Odette had. The two were well-known as the two longest serving magical girls still active in the officio - each having somewhere near seven years under there belt. All who had come before them were either dead or retired, it seemed.

"Yeah, just figured I'd see how you were doin' and stuff," Lotte said, finding herself strangely nervous all of the sudden. "You, um, you've heard the news, right?"

She paused as Harriet voiced the affirmative, her slow voice making her sound all the more somber.

"Yeah, it's... Yeah. I'm- I'm doin' alright. Been better," the blonde stammered as she tried her best to put on a collected face. "How 'bout you?"

Harriet had always had an uncanny knack for seeing right through people, however, and this time was no different. Lotte pursed her lips, her walk becoming something more akin to a trudge as she weaved through pedestrians.

"Y- Yeah. Yeah. Okay. You got me," she conceded. "I'm a fuckin' wreck. What do you expect?" The Callidus paused briefly as she caught herself before her rant to go on any longer. "I... Uh, I'm sorry. That- That wasn't-" Lotte nodded as Harriet did her best to calm the Callidus. "I know, I know. Can't hide shit from you, ya creep. So what about you? Heard you went a little quiet after O got the boot."

The blonde kept strolling through the cold and windy streets while listening to Harriet slowly explain the state of her being. She had been one of Odette's closest friends - her reaction to the one-eyed girl's dismissal being evidence enough to that. The few people around Harriet had noted that she became more cold and distant, especially toward the incubator and the new warmaster. Lotte made a timid chuckle as the Culexus explained that the feelings between them were mutual - that she, too, had been worried sick.

"I thought as much. It's just... Christ," the blonde answered, "I just can't sit still. I need to DO something but I can't do shit because Terry and the fatass haven't said shit to anyone about anything and I just- FUCK. What the hell are they dragging their feet for?! The best girl this officio's ever seen goes missing and they just sit there picking their asses and I-"

Lotte paused as Harriet urged her to stop and take a deep breath. She could already feel her cheeks running hot and could only imagine how red her face was.

"I'm sorry, I'm sorry," Lotte muttered, shaking her head, "I didn't mean to snap at you like that. You don't need this."

Something about Harriet's slow speech was oddly calming to the flustered Callidus. She had always been the voice of reason amongst the previous set of rank leaders. Despite her usual appearance and the sound of her voice, she had a certain motherly charm. Harriet was a calm observer, always prepared to give a frank opinion and a good word of advice when needed.

"Charlotte," the Culexus began, her vox-corrupted voice coming through like the grating of sandpaper, "it seems to me that you have been rudely and abruptly been made aware of your own mortality." She paused as short crackles of static popped from the phone's speaker. "I believe that you would do well to take heed of this lesson. Do not dally in your pursuits, whatever they may be. I have watched you for far too long and my patience for this matter has worn thin over the years."

"And..." Lotte paused and bit her lip, trying to force the words out. "And what if she doesn't come back?"

"Then you have truly been taught what happens to procrastinators in the harshest of manners. But you and I, we both know that Odette does not fall so easily."

The blonde nodded and gulped as the thoughts sank in. "Hey, uh, any chance you might want to come down and hang out some time?" She asked meekly, idly fiddling with a strand of wind-blown hair. "Been a while since we've had a get-together or anything."

Lotte nodded again as the Culexus gave her response. " That's cool," she muttered, hanging her head, "Yeah, I understand. Some other time then."

The two said their good byes and Lotte slipped the phone back into her pocket as she pushed herself off the wall and back into the street. She didn't know exactly how long she had walked for, but the sky seemed to grow a darker shade of gray by the time she found herself in front of the stairs down to Harrison's bar.

It was a homey little place nestled a floor below ground on a busy street corner. A large wooden sign with carved, sweeping font hung on the wall over the stairway, proudly announcing the place as having been established in 1924. Lotte had always wondered whether or not it was true. Black, wrought iron bars fenced in the stairs, decorated by an enlarged, framed copy of the menu.

The single white door jingled softly as Lotte entered, shivering as she pulled her coat on just a bit tighter. A woman with long, shimmering blonde hair was on stage, playing a violin while singing a slow, mournful melody in what the chilly Callidus could only assume was Russian. With a nod at the redheaded Bartender, Lotte took her seat and rubbed her hands together, desperate to get warm.

"Afternoon, Shirley," said the Bartender with a sharp grin as she leaned over the counter. "Had a feelin' I'd be seein' you again."

"Got nothing better to do," Lotte answered before adding, "and don't call me Shirley."

"For free drinks I can call you whatever I want, kiddo," the redhead retorted, pulling a bottle of her best whiskey from her sleeve with a dull glow. " So any news?"

"Yeah, they found two people," Lotte grumbled. "Their names are Jack and Shit."

"Christ," the Bartender muttered as she fished around under the counter for a glass. "Snowflake's really fucked up now, huh?"

Lotte smirked and let out a half-hearted chuckle. "She'd kill you if she heard you call her that."

"Ask me how many fucks I give," the redhead said, finally setting a few ounces of whiskey in front of the Callidus. "Go on, ask me."

"Tell me, Red," Lotte asked as she put the glass to her lips, "how many fucks?"

"Not a single one!" she exclaimed with a snap of her fingers. "Ruskie and I damn near raised that little twerp. I can call her whatever the fuck I want."

The Callidus swirled her glass and gave the Bartender a smirk. The redhead would have been beautiful if it weren't for her speech. She was rude, crude and had a voice like gravel in a blender after her years of smoking. Lotte's chin found it's way to her hands and she rocked her head back and forth, staring into her drink. She didn't even like whiskey, but it's what the Bartender insisted on giving her as of late. The label on the bottle was a faded gold with bright, crimson font reading 'Harrison's Finest'. She claimed it was specially imbued with magical girl powers to go down easier and get you drunk all the faster for it. The best you could find, or so the redhead claimed.

"Hey, Red?" Lotte asked, still cradling her chin in her hands. "Mind if I ask you a bit of a personal question?"

"Shoot."

"What's it like to, y'know," Lotte gestured to the ring on the Bartender's finger with her chin, "have somebody and stuff?"

"Can't complain," the redhead answered. "I get to wake up with a hot blonde in my bed every morning. If that ain't the best thing, I don't know what is."

"So do I. Doesn't seem that great to me."

"Haha," the Bartender responded in monotone, "lookie here, folks. We got a fuckin' comedian."

"I'll be here all night," Lotte said with a grin. "But seriously, how is it?"

"Honestly?" The Bartender leaned further over the bar, lowering her voice. "It's the best. I mean, that's what newly-weds always say anyways, right? But damn, it's... It's somethin' else."

"Still can't believe you two finally got married."

"Eh, took us a while to get there," the barkeep added. "We got contracted, what? Nine years ago? Only reason we lasted so long is each other." She lowered her head to look the Callidus in the eye, a strangely sympathetic gesture for the usually uncaring Bartender. "Why? You gonna finally pop the question to Snowflake when she gets back?"

"No! I mean, well, yes, but... ugh," Lotte took a deep, strained breath to reorder her thoughts. "Not THE question. I was just thinking of asking her if she wanted to... retire together. With me. And stuff."

"And stuff." The Bartender nodded, changing her posture to lean back on the bar on her elbows. "Can't say it's a terrible idea. A bit late to quit while you're ahead, but at least you ain't hit rock bottom yet. Well, you didn't. Snowflake kind of did for a while there. Better late than never is basically what I'm trying t'say here."

Lotte made a muffled "hrm" in acknowledgement before taking a second sip of her drink. "I was thinking, since O likes her peace and quiet, maybe somewhere up north. One of those sleepy little towns with like ten people all named Frank."

"Even the girl?"

"Even the girl."

"Y'know," the Bartender started, that terrible grin never managing to leave her face, "I never understood the appeal of all that small town bullshit. Call me a city gal, but it weirds me out when there's no noise. No action. Feels wrong."

"Certainly explains your big mouth," Lotte replied with a smirk of her own.

"Ow. Ow. OWOWOWOWATCH THE FACE-"

"'ll teach you to talk back to your elders," the redhead said with a certain note of pride. "Oh, by the way. Your friend with the lame ass hoodie's been checkin' you out for a few minutes now." She pointed unenthusiastically behind Lotte to a dimly lit corner of the pub. "What fuckin' chump, sittin' in the corner like some kinda mysterious stranger all broodin' an' shit."

Lotte glanced over her shoulder, peering into the corner booth. Sure enough, there was the girl in the dark hoodie giving her a teasing wave.

"Few minutes after you did," the Bartender replied, pushing herself off the bar counter. "Looks like you've got yourself a stalker, Shirley. Who is she, anyway?"

"Just a friend," the Callidus answered quietly. "I'll go see what she wants. Talk to you later, Red." She paused, then after a moment's consideration added, "And send me over a damn mojito."

"Yeah, yeah," the Bartender mumbled as she waved Lotte off. "Later, twerp."

Heaving herself out of her seat, Lotte shoved her hands in her pockets as she wove a path between tables and past the all too young looking cocktail waitresses. She swore she could see the slightest glint of a pearly white grin beneath the darkness that unnaturally veiled her face.

"Hey pretty lady," Surrey called out as Lotte slid into the booth. "You come here often?"

The blonde narrowed her eyes, her brow forming a nearly straight line. "How did you know where to find me?"

"We like to keep tabs," the hooded girl answered with a sly smirk. "Get it? Cause we're in a bar and-"

"What do you want?"

"No fun, Laufson. No fun at all. I need a bit of information, same as usual," replied Surrey as she swirled her finger around the rim of a glass in front of her. "We've got a new plan, but we'll need a few things before we can kick off the fireworks. You in?"

"Depends," Lotte said, "you tell me what it is you need first, then we'll talk."

"Well," Surrey started, "it's like this. Turns out this whole... whatever you want to call it with the contract amendment actually works out in our favour. Everyone's mighty pissed, and consider everything else going on... All we need now is to give the officio a little push in the right direction, and it's split clean in two."

"Get to the point," the blonde groaned, "I wasn't exactly hoping my night would turn out this way."

"Night?" The hooded girl let out a snort of laughter. "Laufson, it's four in the afternoon."

"That early, huh? Shit..."

"Yup, so don't you start slippin' on me. We still got need for you," Surrey said, a bit more accusatory than Lotte would have liked. "What I need right now is a few things about the key players here. Who's at the top of the food chain, so to speak. Specifically, your warmaster."

"Terry?" Lotte asked, laughing to herself. "You want to know about Terry? Last I checked, you could look her up on the internet."

"Yeah, well," Surrey averted her eyes as her constant smirk tugged at the edges of her mouth a bit more than Lotte was comfortable with, "there are some things you can't find so easily. We like to get what we can before we starting tapping phones and bugging offices. I want to know what makes her tick. Where we can... put a little pressure to give her a gentle push in the direction we want."

"You want to know her weaknesses."

"More or less."

A waitress slid Lotte's drink onto the table without a word, after which the Callidus took a slow sip through the straw. "Well. There's always her anger issues. That's the big one that comes to mind," Lotte offered, "but you probably already knew that."

"Her episodes. Yeah," Surrey nodded, "we've heard of them."

"A couple years ago, right after, y'know-"

"The Miranda incident."

"Right," the blonde replied, her head hanging a fraction lower than before. "After the 'Miranda incident' if that's what you want to call it. Harriet nearly killed herself trying to keep Terry off me. You shoulda seen the size of the needle they jammed in her to sedate her. Took three of them to finally put her down."

"That tough, huh?"

"Shit yeah," Lotte snorted out a laugh before taking another sip of her drink. "She's a fuckin' monster when she gets mad."

"Stronger than Miss Brighton?"

"I... I don't know. In a fair fight I'd say it's a toss up," the Callidus prodded at her straw as she tried to think the hypothetical fight through. "O's got speed and smarts, but Terry's got brute strength. Not too bright, though."

"No?" Surrey asked, her interest suddenly piqued.

"Terry's never been the sharpest tool in the shed. Very 'storm the gates, guns blazing'," Lotte chuckled, gesturing wildly. "She isn't what you'd call 'leader material', exactly. Hell, most of the senior girls still want O back in power on account of the fact that she actually DID stuff when she wasn't pickin' fights. Terry just sits around and looks nervous. The Corbins do most of her work for her, as far as I know."

"At least she's not one of those warmaster's that just screws around playing grab-ass with the other girls," the hooded girl commented, sounding more than slightly annoyed.

"Honestly, I think I'd prefer that kind of warmaster over this," Lotte replied. "'least that way there'd be some sense of leadership."

"To each their own, I guess," Surrey conceded, leaning back in her seat to rest her elbows atop the backrests. "So she's got the administrative talent of a bull gorilla and she's not looked upon well for it. Anything else come to mind?"

"Just one thing and I don't even know if I'd call it a weakness," the blonde absentmindedly bit her lip as she turned the thought over, "but she's got this aide that's a bit of a... problem child."

"I've heard of her. Argente, the one with the hairclips, right?"

"Right," Lotte murmured, taking another short sip of her drink. "I think Terry only keeps her around cause she's good with the books, but," the Callidus leaned over the table, lowering her voice as she spoke, "she's got this real hard-on for pissing on Odette. She wants her dead more than anything in the world."

"What for?"

"Hell if I know," Lotte shrugged. "Some say it's cause Odette passed over her when choosing a new Vindy leader, but I don't know. Ty's not a fighter. The girl hardly ever gets combat missions, usually just book-keeping and meeting with people."

"And how is her relationship with the," Surrey hesitated for moment before putting emphasis on her next words, "current warmaster?"

"With Terry? First word that comes to mind is 'sycophant'," the Callidus snickered and shook her head, "next would be 'brown-nose'. You get where I'm going with this."

"Right, right. And the warmaster herself?"

"Terry tolerates her, but not a whole lot beyond that. Hairclips isn't exactly subtle or cunning with her... vendetta against Odette, or whatever you want to call it, so Terry gets mighty pissed whenever she tries anything. Other than that," Lotte shrugged as she began to run out of words, "Ty's the only person to put her name in for Equerry consideration so far, so Terry's been dragging her feet and hoping someone else wants the position. That's about all I can think of that'd be of any use to you."

"Oh, I think you've given me plenty," Surrey flashed a wicked grin beneath her hood before leaning over the table. "Now, we gonna talk payment now or later?"

Lotte thought for a moment as she processed what precious little she understood of the hooded girl's objectives. After a long drink she put her elbow to the table and held her chin in her hand, a smirk creeping across her face.

"You keep asking me for information," she began, gesturing with her other hand, "getting me to try and pull Odette into your schemes, making big promises that I don't know how the hell you expect to keep, and I just can't figure it out. One moment you seem to want one thing, the next you want another. I thought - for a while - that you wanted to put O back in power so you'd have someone higher up under your thumb... Seemed logical enough." The Callidus narrowed her eyes, resting her chin on the back of her palm. "But now this? Going after Terry? Splitting the officio in two? You talk like you want a war here."

"Could you be a bit more specific with your question?"

Lotte's smirk vanished in an instant as her voice went cold. "What exactly is it that you're trying to achieve here? I don't like being fucked with."

"I'm afraid that's a little out of your price range, Laufson," Surrey smiled in a way that seemed to tip-toe the borders of innocent and condescending. "Anything else?"

"Is Odette coming back?" The blonde asked. "Surely you and your connections should be able to figure that one out. Or is that out of my price range, too?"

"That's two questions. Which would you prefer me to answer?"

"Don't be a smart ass."

"Will she be back?" Surrey giggled, a sound that sent shivers up Lotte's spine. "Signs point to yes."

"Good," Lotte responded as she slid out of the booth and shoved her hands deep into her coat pockets. "Then leave us the fuck out of this and don't contact me again. I'm done with you and your people."

The hooded girl merely continued to laugh to herself as the blonde stormed out of the pub. A small flame flickered to life at her fingers tips. She watched as it danced before her eyes, rolling and tumbling it over and under her fingers and across her hand.

"The return of the Winter Warmaster," she whispered with glee, her eyes glistening in the fire's light. "How exciting."

this is incorrect. Kyouko tried to get her eye back, but the wound was "too magical" and it didn't heal up right. She did mention that her hate grudge on Kirika was repeated everything she put her eyepatch on though.

Golden weapon wielders don't instantly flip out and go batshit insane, see Yuu for an example (girl in our bracelets of ogre fisting aka STR)

Also thinking on that dream made me think that she was actually testing if it was us in there, she obviously has all sorts of strange things turning up in her dreams from time to time and so seeing Murderface is probably something that had happened before. The only way to tell if it is the real one is to attack and see what happens

On that subject I'm starting to wonder if everyone is mistaken about golden weapon wielders going insane. I mean Kharn was pretty nuts anyway, Kilgore was using someone else's weapon and Kirika was most likely using the sword intended for Sayaka. Perhapse it only corrupts people who are not the intended user?

IIRC Alice preferred to use Luck and Pluck instead of her golden scythes. At least she did in the flashback with Kharn. Depends on whether that was before she got her scythes or after.

Either way from Kharn we know that they can give up their weapons willingly, might not even have to murder some of them.

Well, considering that when Madokami was speaking with Midori she described them weapons as "awful" and probably evil, I think it's safe to assume that the insanity is a side effect, but how long it takes to set in can vary.

Kirika held the Katana for nearly two years before going completely bat shit crazy in the short span of time before Murderface became Chiaki.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR
QUEST

You are a Magical Girl, and you're currently trying to make sure that your client - the most influential and arguably the most annoying idol in the whole entire fucking universe - stays alive through her entire four-hour concert. And while you'd like to be optimistic - there is a chance that NOTHING will happen during the four hours where your client will try to murder the concept of good music in the most cheerful and autotuned way possible - you're just waiting for the other shoe to drop, here. An attempted assassination shoe, along with some kidnapping sneakers and probably some tasteful rape fuck-me-heels.

Because hell if the people after your client - and those after you - have been anything but subtle during these past few days.

They mailed you a goddamn severed head, for fuck's sake. And walked an entire bunch of armed goons up into your client's room with the help of a Callidus trick. Said Callidus more or less confirmed to be from an Officio whose Incubator has a murder-on for you.

You can't get any less subtle than that.

What

>>27059829

In any case, you're now backstage, standing guard in front of Kirishima Ruri's dressing room door. Sayaka is inside along with your client, along with a few other idols - you can hear them giggling and comparing measurements and other such nonsense inside. The rest of the security detail - that is, Kyosuke and his men, Enishi and Squad Hiryu - had already broken up and taken their respective positions, to start assisting you on this operation.

Apparently, you've managed to deliver the Principal well ahead of schedule, and as such the preparations for the concert proper haven't even finished yet.
Despite this, the backstage section is a flurry of activity. Extras in gaudy, vibrant costumes rush to and fro, some being herded into makeup, others murmuring mantras underneath their breath, telling themselves that they won't, they CAN'T screw up during their very first performance, in front of thousands of people. The tension, the stress, almost coming off of them in sweaty, nauseous waves.

You spot the occassional idol here and there, too - each one made visible in the throng by harried-looking assistants hovering around them, orbiting like fussy sattelites. Each one wielding a brush or a foundation pad or a makeup implement of some sort, each one lashing out at the heavenly body they're surrounding, changing her appearance with every step she took. A transformation sequence in slow motion - from mere girl next door to the stuff dreams are made out of.

There's thirty minutes before the contest proper begins with the opening number - which, you've been notified, isn't one your principal is performing in.

What do you do for now?

With her legs and bust, it would be unfair if Midori got the best butt as well. She's just an all-rounder, ranks very high in everything but not quite top (Mami better boobs, etc).

Also despite the obvious bad omen decapitation is, they still don't really make it feel like things are ramping up. More like some unrelated enemy just dumped it in there before going on with their business. Shit hasn't even started going down yet.

You decide to indulge yourself while on guard duty. A quick rifling through your inventory gets you a half-empty, half-squashed pack of cigarettes. You carefully and delicately pick out one from the flattened mess, managing to pull a particularly-bent stick without tearing the thing in half. You hold it between your lips as you reach into your inventory for your lighter, this time - and with a flick of your wrist and a metallic click are you able to breathe smoke into your lungs again. Calming, soothing, smoke. Immediately drawing venomous looks from everyone else backstage, which you pointedly ignore.

Savoring the taste, you also decide that it's high time you start doing your own job - and you switch on the headset you're wearing under the Warmaster Cap. A sudden rasp of static fills your ears, before it's replaced by terse, one-word conversations delivered from gruff, gravelly throats. You catch the occassional 'affirmative' and 'roger wilco', said in more youthful and more feminine tones - Squad Hiryu, who had been included in the security detail's network since they'd arrived.

Keeping your voice down, you ask for a sitrep, and they deliver it to you with surprising cohesion. Kyosuke's men are already posted along the entrances and exits, watching over the people coming and going, eagle-eyed for any suspicious folk. Squad Hiryu has already taken up their vantage points in the stadium, and had been in the middle of sweeping for potential targets when you called in. Nothing from either team.

Enishi also reported that while there was a very slight degree of magical activity hovering around in the stadium grounds, it was not a cause for concern - her professional opinion being that it was only a few untransformed magical girls in the audience, possibly to enjoy the concert along with the rest of the mundane folk. If they meant any harm, the magical activity would definitely be stronger.

You're about to ask for Kyosuke, then, when suddenly an extra, even more gaudily-dressed than the rest in the backstage area - steps up in front of you. Its hair long and wild and an obvious fake blonde, its face painted with ashen white makeup and sharp black streaks to exagerrate the eyes, mouth and cheekbones, giving it a crazed, gaunt look. Its costume consisting of an obviously-stylized suit of armor, one consisting of a broad breastplate molded and painted to look skeletal with a faux ribcage, black leggings and shiny metal greaves. A heavy purple cape hanging from its shoulders, along with a crimson guitar made to look as if blood is caked on its upper half.

Just as you're about to tell it to get the fuck out of your face, it speaks - and in a horribly-familiar voice. "Situation normal from my sweep earlier, Miss Chiaki." The thing blinks at you, before laughing lamely. "S-sorry. I was in the vicinity anyway, and I thought I'd deliver my report face-to-face."

...What? What the hell is he talking about? How'd he know your name--

The extra blinks, before pointing at himself. "Me? But--ah, of course. The makeup." He reaches up with a gloved hand and taps at his headset. "It's Kyosuke, Miss Chiaki. From the security detail, remember?"

What the fuck. What the fuck is this.

How do you react?

You stare at the thing that called itself Kyosuke only a few moments ago, in the young man's voice no less. You continue to stare in stony silence, as you allow the cigarette held between your lips to burn up slowly - along with the remaining shreds of the clean-cut, responsible image you had of him.

You repeat yourself, again. What the fuck? What the hell is he wearing? And why weren't you notified in advance?

"It's...uh, it's supposed to be a costume of a quite popular death metal musician, Miss Chiaki. Johannes Krauser II, I believe. Have you ever heard of him?" The young man smiles nervously, his makeup twisting his expression into a wild, manic grin.

You shake your head, saying nothing.

"A-ah. Well, he's not quite popular now, what with suddenly going into temporary hiatus and everything." Kyosuke all but stumbles on his garishly-costumed self to try and cover up what sounds like disappointment in his voice - as if he was expecting you to at least have an inkling of what the hell he was talking about. "Anyway, erm, it was a last-minute thing they decided, Miss Chiaki. They needed someone built enough to wear the costume and able to play lead guitar. As it turns out, uh, I can do both. Quite the coincidence, wouldn't you agree, Miss Chiaki?"

...Yeah. What a coincidence.

Is he going to stay like that the entire time? It's obviosly going to get in the way in case something does happen and you need every able hand to be able to do their job, here.

[1/2]

"Oh, no, Miss Chiaki!" Kyosuke's eyes go wide here, his makeup twisting an expression of surprise into one of manic insanity. "This is only for the opening number! As soon as it finishes, I'm going to run offstage and get back into my uniform, as soon as I can. But in case something does happen during the concert, I've got my concealed carry." He lifts his cape and turns slightly to reveal a holstered Beretta M9, strapped to his back.

Well...fine. As long as he knows what to do.

"Of course, Miss Chiaki." Kyosuke nods. "Despite how I look, I am taking this job seriously."

You stare at him again, before breathing smoke through your nostrils. Right. Fine.

What's his report, then?

And so, while standing in his awful, awful costume, Kyosuke gives you his report. Again, like the rest of the security detail, he didn't see anything out of the ordinary - except, of course, the fact that Yoshitaka Mine, Head of the Tojo Group, is sitting in the most expensive seating section of the concert - along with some recording company executives and bigwigs.

"He came along with his own security, Miss Chiaki. Four men, most probably armed." A moment. "We tried to deny him entry, but he did have tickets, and the stadium owner demanded that we let him through."

Huh. Well. Seems that the other shoe has indeed dropped.

How do you react?

We keep eyes on the 10th, we've got files on them. Sending some video footage back to base to ID any of them in the crowd is something we can do in-house without worrying about bothering the 10th "hey, did you send any assassins to kill our principal?"

You cross your arms over your chest, glaring down at your feet as you think. As much as you'd prefer them being escorted out of the premises, doing it in plain sight of important-sounding executives doesn't sound all that smart. You're not as stupid as to try and have them taken out in full view of the audience, either.

You look back up, nodding to yourself once, and then barking your instructions to Kyosuke. You want one of his men to get as close as possible to the group, but not close enough that they find out if they're being spied on. Someone he trusts personally - someone that can't be bought out no matter how thick of a wad of money's slapped into his face.

Kyosuke looks offended at this, his makeup turning the expression into one of complete and utter hatred. "...Very well, Miss Chiaki, but I do wish to put forward that not one member of my team isn't trustworthy. I'd trust any one of them with my life."

...Right. So can he do it or not?

"I'll assign my best man on the job, Miss Chiaki." Kyosuke replies after a moment, a bit more stiffly than usual. You nod at this, and go on to tell hiim that you'll have one of Squad Hiryu give Kyosuke's man overwatch as well as keep Yoshitaka Mine in her sights. Ready to take him out the moment he tries anything funny.

"Isn't that a bit excessive--" Kyosuke starts, before someone new comes into the scene, spouting what sounds like a foreign language consisting of sliding vowels and half-coughs. ...German, you think.

The both of you turn to look at the source of the voice - and the both of you behold a rather tall and lean idol, dressed in a rather revealing costume consisting of red intercrossing leather straps, and spikes, and a whip with spikes on the end. Her long crimson hair styled into the same wild look as Kyosuke's wig.

Who...? Oh. Wait. It's...you saw her in the stadium rehearsal yesterday. Map-something? Mapo Tofu? Map--

"Well, whose fucking fault is it that you have to play Kirishima's poolboy day in and day out? If you only continued doing what you were born to do, rather than keep working like a prole-"

More German from Kyosuke, a bit more hurried and hasty this time, and it's here that the young man makes a break for it. Apparently eager to get away from Mappi. "I'll have my man on the job, Miss Chiaki! Rest assured of it!" He calls back over his shoulder, cape flying out behind him as he escapes.

"Idiot," Mappi breathes through a frown, before nodding at you. "You. I saw you at the rehearsal, yesterday. I don't suppose you're looking for a career change?" She looks you up and down with an appraising look, her deepening frown signifying that she's not all that impressed.

You narrow your eyes at this idol, before shaking your head.

"Pity. We could use a new S." She lets out a breath. "We're kind of a dying breed, ever since your principal pretty much leveled the playing field to just her and me." The redhead glances at the door behind you, shaking her head, before stalking off in the direction where Kyosuke went.

Idols, you grunt underneath your breath. It's here that you feel both your wrists warm up the slightest bit - the golden bangles you've been wearing seemingly trying to catch your attention.

What do you do now?

You roll up one sleeve just so that the golden bracelet underneath is visible. ...From the faint glow surrounding it, not to mention the warmth pressing gently into your skin - it seems like Yuu's trying to catch your attention indeed. Funny - you've been wearing them for so long that you'd almost forgotten what they were, instead of just fancy jewelry.

In any case, you might as well see what she wants. This is probably the first time she'd deliberately attracted your notice like this, and you're not going to ignore it.

How did it go again? You have to close your eyes, right? Focusing on the Golden Weapon and nothing else. Slowing your breathing down, relaxing your entire frame. Letting your senses unroll from your own soul gem, to reach out to the bracelets--

"Matsuda-san?" You hear someone say your name right next to you, snapping you out of your concentration. You grunt irritably at this, opening your eyes to glare upon the intruder and hopefully scare her off.

You blink again to see Yuu, in her usual black onesie-hoodie kind of deal. Just as tanned as always, the lower half of her face covered by her hood's muffler. Her eyes completely black, her pupils bright amber.

...She's right there, in the real world. In the stadium. Beside you. You're not inside the Golden Weapon, she's outside--

"O-oh! Um, no, Matsuda-san, please don't be too surprised!" Yuu holds up both hands placatingly, shaking her head furiously. "I'm not really outside, I'm still in the Golden Weapon! You're the only one who can see me right now!" She thinks for a moment. "Um, please think of me as a ghost that only you can see!"

A ghost?...Well, sure. But how...?

I just took a bit of your energy to manifest myself here. D-don't worry, it was only a little bit...I took it when you were having breakfast, earlier."

Ah. That's...that explains why you asked for seconds, then. With the pancakes.

Yuu blinks, before shaking her head. "E-er, no, Matsuda-san. That was all you. I took some from your orange juice."

...Right. Well. Erm. Did she need you for anything? That's why she made the bracelets feel warm earlier, right?

"Oh, yes!" Yuu nods. "Um, Matsuda-san, remember how I told you about how I fought a Magical Girl in America? The one who nearly killed me with a kitchen knife?"

Yeah? You remember that at leasst. What about her?

"Um. Well..." The spectral girl looks down, her form flickering out of existence briefly. "See, I know it's weird, but after I fight someone I could always tell if they're around...a-and I think she's here, Matsuda-san. Right in this very stadium."

“Do it.”

We stood there together, the magical girl and me, and we stared each other down. I’d set a passcode – a sign, a secret signal – with QB Heavy when I set this job up, but…

“It’s degrading…ma’am.” But Sparkles wouldn’t do it. She gave me a look like she’d just stepped in something from under her baseball cap. “I’m sorry, but I’m not here to amuse you or something. You needed me to do a job, and I’ll do it.”

I slumped. She just wasn’t getting it.

“Listen,” I said, trying to keep the irritation out of my voice. “I set up a passcode so I could be totally sure you were one of Mister QB’s girls and not some like, super terrorist or something that wants my butt in a blender. So do it, or I’ll just go alone, and I’ll probably die, and you’ll have to live with it.”

“…” She opened her mouth, then shut it again with a sigh before starting to move. Thinking lightning-fast, I whipped out my phone to take a picture as she assumed the position, and she glared at me with a venom usually reserved for the biggest and jerkiest bees. Do bees have venom? I feel like I should know this.

“…Nyaaa,” she grumbled – which I didn’t even think you could do, going ‘nyaaa’ – as she took on a lucky cat-ish pose. …Even if she hated me for it, I still took a picture. She was really cute, for a battle-hardened killing machine.

…Subarashii desu nya.

“…Are you done?” the magical girl huffed, while I set my new phone wallpaper. “Is that good enough?”

I really sort of expected there’d be more cat ears, but I decided that just this once, I’d give her a break. There was violence in those cobalt blue eyes, and it’d be a shame to waste it on me. Both of us had bigger fish to fry tonight. …And maybe some fried fish after.

We went over the mission details on the way there (and it sounded so cool to talk about it like a real spy thing) – a splinter cell (so awesome) of magical girls had broken away from the Ninth and joined up with some of the local yakuza, and they were making a real mess of the Officio’s reputation. The Ninth wanted a good, clean opportunity to deal with them and set an example. I wanted some low-key security while I dug for a scoop about some rogue magical girls. It worked out for everyone! Maybe not the scumbags we were about to bust, but who cares about them?

…It was about the only way I could afford a bodyguard, actually. Things were way easier when Kaneda was still around. We just backed each other up when we could. She didn't scowl as much as the girl the Ninth sent, either.

Her name was Miki Sayaka, and I found out later she'd already started drumming up a reputation in the Ninth as kind of a goody-goody. Well, I mean, like half the magical girls you ever hear about ever start out like that, but for Miki, it'd lasted a lot longer than just a couple of months, and as she lectured me over and over about staying behind her and hiding if things got messy and something something I wasn't really listening I almost started to think she might have been really worried about me.

Once I was done looking over my equipment (everything but the mic hidden on my person, which would've been a pain in the butt to take off and mess with), I interrupted her.

"Are you buying?" It seemed to take her completely off-guard, and she stopped mid-sentence like a deer in headlights.

"…What?"

"I mean, you seem really worried about me. I figured you were gonna buy dinner. Ooh, we could catch a movie!" Well, maybe I was a little bit serious, too. She looked like she could afford to lighten up a little bit, and the stony look she gave me only proved my point.

"Please, ma'am, if you don't take this seriously you're just risking both our lives." We locked eyes for a second, then I let mine slip away toward the ground and messed with my camera again, mostly to look busy. And like I wasn't a little mad. I don't think it worked.

She was seriously no fun at all.

Miki glanced at me uneasily about every five seconds as we were unceremoniously led into a dingy hotel room in a crappy part of the city. Somewhere private. No cops. No yaks. Just four magical girls, me, and my assistant (slash bodyguard, but they didn't know that). She clutched a cheapie video camera that I didn't actually expect would make it out alive; I showed her how to use it on the way, or at least, how to look like she was using it.

We were all candid here (well, you know, allegedly). Everything was out in the open, because this was a small bid for legitimacy. A mission statement for these magical girls, a chance for them to clear up some misconceptions about what they were doing. I didn't know how they were going to spin robbing a bank and shaking down old ladies for cash as misconceptions, but that was part of the fun I guess.

It wasn't really why I was here – I was hoping to squeeze them for office politics in the Ninth, and maybe get a little information on the local Families – but if this went well I was looking to get some great info for basically nothing, and if it went south…

Well, if it went south, then I'd get to see an Eversor NOT trying to break my legs for once. If this didn't kill me, it could be pretty worth it just for that. And live footage always went over well with my readers…

The whole room took on a heavy air as we settled in. Two magical girls guarding the door, one sticking to Miki like glue as she started up her camera, and their leader, a tall, skeezy-looking girl in orange, leering down at me. More than anything, though, I was worried Miki was going to snap – her knuckles were pure white as she gripped the poor camcorder.

Me, I wasn't nearly so nervous. I could rattle off these questions in my sleep. To start with, it was just smiling and feeding them what they wanted to hear – making sure Orange got to talk about what we'd arranged before, go on about organizational differences and red tape and hypocrisy and every other teenage excuse for doing stupid, selfish dumb crap, only with sparkly superpowers.

It was really hard not to yawn after only a couple of minutes of shallow justifications, and I could almost hear Miki's teeth grinding from where I was sitting. …I was kind of impressed she was waiting for a signal or something. I mean, I had no idea what to tell her, but-

"Hey, reporter girl." I felt a hand clamp down on one of my boobs and squeeze WAY too hard. "You getting this?" I pulled away from Orange – something or other Misuzu – and onto my feet.

"I'm pretty sure we're good, actually? I can't think of anything else I need from you guys." I shot Misuzu my winningest smile as I started to tuck my phone away, but in a split-second she was on me, backing me up toward the wall with her hand squeezing my wrist uncomfortably tight.

"I don't think so. I think I'll fucking tell you when we're 'good', and then we're gonna-"

CRASH. The sound of a video camera being shattered to pieces filled the room, and Misuzu whipped her head back toward Miki. I had a feeling I knew what'd happened, but standing there gawping would have been stupid – instead, I tensed one leg, then yanked on the magical girl's wrist as I leapt, planting my knee firmly in her gut.

She let me go and staggered back, but magical girls are never out of it for long, not without a lot more than that. But that wasn't news or anything – I'd done this like a thousand times, probably. First, a gut shot…then, I slipped my stun gun out of my pocket and shoved it in her face.

Maybe it was cruel to go for the face, but you don't really have the luxury of going easy on sparkles. Her whole body twitched violently as 6.8 million volts of electric truth pulsed through her body. As I held it on her – guided her to the ground with it, almost - I glanced to the side, where Miki had been before, only to see her unlucky guard sort of slumping, trying to dizzily maneuver her head out of the wall. Along with pieces of my camera, everywhere.

That's why I didn't give her any real equipment. I didn't even tell her it was basically crap! I was so going to yell at her after this. I'd probably even dock her pay. Having lackeys – even temporary ones – was kinda fun, actually.

The magical girl at my feet groaned, reminding me that she'd probably need a little more than a lengthy taser shot to stay out. So I kicked her in the head. Like, as hard as I could. A boot, the kind you'd probably really worry would kill somebody.

She'd probably be fine.

Miki was already dealing with the other two girls in a flurry of white and silver, but it didn't seem like it was going that well. One of them kept catching her sword with a nasty razor-lined chain whenever she'd try to swing, and the other had a short spear that didn't seem to fit well in the room at all, but was more than enough to hold off Miki's blows as she crept around to get behind-

There was a thump as Miss Hole-in-the-wall hit the ground, then began to dazedly pull herself up. With a dash and a twist, though, I was in the air, and my knee connected hard with the side of her head, continuing smoothly into a pin as I, er, kinda landed on her neck. I rolled right to my feet and turned to give her a jolt for good measure.

…This was fast. It was tight, it wasn't really where I worked well. I wasn't a bad fighter if I had to do it, but there was no room to move here, and…well, it was four magical girls. I heard Spear moving, but I wasn't quick enough. The world moved in slow motion as I whipped my head around again and the heavy spear flew toward my face.

…I heard a pop, as it jerked violently, slowing just enough for me to scramble away in time. A dive from Miki, I figured out a second later, as she grabbed for the spear's shaft and nearly tore her arm out of her socket slowing it down. Flawlessly she followed up, the flat of her sword connecting with Spear's nose as a bladed chain came down on her back and ripped at her cape. The chain came down on her again and again, but she struck at Spear over and over instead, blood smearing onto her polished sword as she struck over and over.

…It was pretty exciting. I kind of wished I had popcorn – it wasn't like I had any business in a brawl like that, so…I mean, that's not totally cold, right?

The moment she struck her final blow, the chain looped around her neck instead, and blood poured as it cut into her, her eyes bulging as the last magical girl standing tried to choke her out. Or cut her head off. I wasn't totally sure. My head raced as I tried to think of what to do. The taser? The spear? The…the nightstand? By the time I'd even come up with a plan, though, Miki had already acted, driving her sword back into her attacker and…

…and twisting, the moment of panic replaced with a cold fury, even as her throat bled. The girl behind her screamed In pain, her face blanching as Miki's sword started to open up an even bigger hole in her abdomen.

…I covered my mouth and turned away.

The two of us sat awkwardly on the bed. Her neck had already healed in the few minutes since the fight, and she'd laid out all four of the other magical girls neatly, using her cape to dress the gaping stomach wound she'd left. Backup was on its way, supposedly. Or at least, a cleanup crew.

"So…"

"QB Heavy Industries is going to review your recordings of tonight." She answered my question before I could ask it. "If possible, we don't want to lose these girls. They…they aren't bad people. I'm sure they're not.. If there's something we can do on our end so they don't feel like they have to do this…" The stony professional seemed to have melted away, just a little bit, and so did the little bitty hints of scared newbie. …She looked sad.

Just…sad.

"…Just take 'em, I don't even care anymore." I flopped back on the bed to stare at the ceiling instead. It wasn't exactly a lie or anything – they'd really had nothing interesting to tell me after all. And the smell of blood in here was…ugh. It was hard to keep myself from shaking. I didn't actually do a very good job, I think.

I just wanted to get out and get this stupid night over with.

“…Thanks, NECO-san.”

The air grew tense again in an instant, and I wondered if maybe she’d seen one of the other girls waking up.

“...Sayapyon?” she asked me, quietly. I could barely hear her over the hum of the crappy lights.

“’Cause you have a face like a rabbit.” Old words, parroted because…Because they felt right, I guess. She kind of did have that look. It felt like something she’d pick up on.

Neither of us talked much for the rest of the evening. We didn’t even go out for dinner and a movie, after all. But I’d sort of made a friend. Kind of. And friends like Sayapyon…like Sayaka, those are friends you have for life.

Cold, dark, damp. The storm had already passed once night came around to reveal the moon shining brilliantly. While it wasn't enough for most people to see, I didn't have a problem. I've lost count to how many time's I've been up here, doing this exact same thing day after day. Sure, some days there are different roofs I perch on and on different times of night. But it always ends in one of two ways; either I go to sleep empty-handed or I get some action.
After seeing a car pull into an allyway, it looks like it might be the latter tonight.
This town has really gone to hell ever since the UAA made home next door. While rare, some of the people that do escape that hell end up over here. Not only that, but sometimes the reverse happens where people are taken from here and made to be in the action when they never did anything. What a glorious country this has become. At least I've done a few things about it.
The car turns out to be four men and a woman, with the women worse for wear. It's not just the visuals with the ripped clothing and bruises; I can sense the pain. She's in distress, soon to be panic while the big boys are completely clean of any danger. Well, I can change that in a good amount of time.
It's all about waiting now. Waiting to see what's going on, waiting to see what is a threat, and waiting for the perfect moment to strike.

I think we should, although personally I'd like to find her first and see what she's doing here. However that may not be possible with time constraints, so my course of plan would be to try and get a general location from Yuu, feed that into the security team with orders to keep an eye out and tell us if she's seen.

We can only prepare for so much, after all.

"About time you paid up, bitch!" One of the men drags the woman out of the car and throws her by the arm.

"You of all people should know the boss doesn't like waiting." Lowest voice goes to the biggest man. All of the men pull their jackets asside, showing guns in each one. 3 pistols for the goons and a revolver for the big man. It's all intimidation; if you want to keep somebody in place, crush the reason to escape with fear.

"But... I made him a deal. Three weeks and..." She's already on the virge of tears. The body was shaking before she even got out of the car.

"No buts. You didn't read the fine print. 'Dates subject to change'. Now wheres the money?" Fucking fine print, the bane of men and women around the world even when they don't know it.

"No... please, I-" She had crawled herself up against a brick wall, holding her hands up in defence but the backside of the gun connected sharply with her cheek. I could feel it from here, the sharp immdiate pain followed by the dulled sense afterwards. It's a damp feeling in my chest, slowly spreading through my veins, empowering me.

"Stop talking nonsense!" The man who hit her yelled, now pointing the trigger at her head. "Give us the money, or we'll take it and your little Tommy boy from you! He'd be a sad little boy then, wouldn't he?" He distanced himself from the others, approaching the woman directly while the other three were by the car, closer to light.

The last mistake he'll ever make.

I make landing before the body does, and the three by the van see their buddy dead, a woman cowering in fear and a pair of red eyes staring at them from the darkness.

At least he got a quick death.

"What the fuck?!" A common reaction from the goon, a shock feeling of fear that stops them in their tracks. "What the hell are you doing!" The big guy takes command as he should. "Shoot the damn thing!" The two goons quickly draw their guns to take a shot, but by then it's too late.

Even as the bullets fly, the shield is up already. A swirling sphere of black and a strange shade of blue- non-photo blue I think it was called - absorbs the bullets as they hit it. When the pistol rounds are gone, the shield is at it's limit. I let it burst, a flurry of magic colliding with both of the goons. One falls over backwards in pain as the explosion rips at his body while the other still manages to stand. He's next.

A quick dash unsummons the mace, but I don't need it right now. Its a simple combo, a punch to the stomach, grab the head and ram it into the wall then throw him away. Its enough to keep him alive, but enough pain caused for me to follow up. The other goon is up at that time, but I come to him swinging the mace. It makes direct contact with the face, making a bloody mess. The pain forms in my hand, the liquid essence of agony swirls in it asking to be used. I grant it its desire, and fling a bolt at the one still alive. Big bad boy is last.

The revolver has six shots. It takes a while for the big man to point it at me, still in shock at how I downed all of his goons in less then ten seconds. He fires, but a shield is up again. One shot, two, three. I can tell he wants to survive at all costs, I can see it in his eyes. Four, five, the shield breaks, weaker. Six...

That hurts. Straight into the shoulder. Left. Not where he was aiming, it was missfired by the blast. But still... that hurts like a motherfucker.

Im clutching my shoulder by the time I fall to my knees. Something... stirs in me. The pain doesn't stop, but flows differently. I look up to see the man still in fear, holding his empty gun with a shaking hands. He's scared of me.

They all should be.

A second form takes place in me. The power I usually command from around me envelops my entire body in it's light blue glow while a black smoke rises from it, steaming the liquid. I probably could be mistaken for being on fire, and I might as well be right now. I'm really pissed off at him right now.

I remember a video that explained the physics behind a video game character kicking a soccer ball so hard it split in three. If that power of a kick connected with a head, there wouldn't be a head left.

I felt like trying that, with my fist. What I got was a bloody mess.

Mission accomplished, ish. I still need to better focus myself next time.

"Ya sure you just don't wanna grab the other bitches back at base? They'd give ya a better run." My Incubator remarks to me through after I had given the car keys to the woman and gone back up to the rooftops. "Actually, that crazy-ass power is makin' ya crazy as hell for blood huh? My bad."

"It's not really your fault, Eightball" I reply, still feeling my left shoulder even after the bullet and the would vanished. Happens every time I switch to that form. "I just need more time with this. Once the power was given, I became responsible for it. Soon i'll have this figured out."

"And you're doin that by whackin whatever purps get unlucky?" I stare at the cell-phone for a while, his . "Fuckin whacko, girl, but you do what ya wanna do. I expect all my bitches to deliver, even if it makes jelly-jam outa peoples heads."

"You really need to get better at making jokes, but that one wasn't bad." Hell, that at least gets a grin from me.

"You think I'd be crackin jokes at ya, bitch? I ain't no fucking comedian." There's a creaking noise coming from his end of the line, along with snickering. "But nah, all I want is all my bitches to always deliver. I'm expectin good shit from you, Gina girl."

I can't help but chuckle darkly at this. Its a small secret about "Eightball" that I figured out when I got in; he's really interested in the wishes girls make when they join. Most have the same-old wishes of "I want to beat up bad guys" or "I want to make the world a better place for everyone". Hearing those things again and again gets a bit annoying after a while, and I can remember him expecting the same from me.

"I want to take the pain from those who don't deserve it, and give it to those who do." That's the only time I've truly seen him surprised. But he always gives out extra for wishes like that, where the more interesting the wish, the better the result he tries to give out.

"Eighty, I don't even know if I'll even have time for that. I'm working as hard as I can and yet-"

"The fuck you sayin, Gina?" The tone in his voice changes. He seems more interested then confused, probably because we've been talking enough that he manages to understand me a bit. I probably have more trouble understanding him. "You're becomin a rockstar among the Officio, especially after you wasted two witches at that whacked-up museum. When the other bitches see you fight, they don't even know what the fuck they're lookin at. You've been goin off the charts, so why you gotta get yourself down like that? You're one scary bitch, ya know?"

"I know, its just" I know what I want to say, but a million words a second won't do. "It's because it's not really about power, form or achievments. It's not my peers, co workers, friends of what others think of me. In the end...

I still don't know how deep down the rabbit hole goes."

I dout she could resist it, but I don't think she ever was contracted in the first place. She wants the world to know about magical girls, QB isn't worried, so he probably knows of her and think's shes some two-bit crazy tabloids reporter in the first place. He could contract her if he wanted though I suspect. Maybe if we catch her, we could make the Qube contract her and use her as a callidus. She's sneaky enough already.

I can imagine her wish, "I want the world to know about magical girls."

Two weeks later, she has the leading role in a live-action MG soap opera.

Those are more of a stream of consciousness thing, which works really well for her character. This jumps around more as a first-person-omniscient talking about what the other characters can see/feel rather than just how they appear to the narrator.

Which maybe kinda works with the magical empathy power angle but could be better executed I guess.

All in all still not bad.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR
QUEST

"I'm...I'm sorry, Matsuda-san, but..." The dark-skinned girl looks down, wringing both her gloved hands on her lap. "...I really can't remember her name. A lot of things are spotty. I'd tell you if I could, but I really can't. I'm sorry."

You shake your head. No, it's fine. If anyone knows just how inconvenient a spotty memory is, it's you.

"I'm not so sure about the pink, either." It's here that the young girl narrows her eyes in concentration. "...M-maybe the checkered pattern. I definitely remember something about that."

That's something to go on, then. Would it be possible for Yuu to show you where she is, or at least give you a general direction to look at? And could she tell if the girl's going to be a problem at all?

"Hmm?" Yuu blinks her black eyes at you, her orange-amber pupils dilating slightly. "Ah. I...no, sorry, Matsuda-san. All I know is that she's here, somewhere. I can't pinpoint where she is. I can only confirm that she's around." She pauses for a moment, as if trying to choose her words carefully. "Um, but...I don't think she's out to make trouble. It doesn't feel like she is. Rather, it feels like she's...just observing someone from afar. Like she wants to be with that person, but something's stopping her from doing so."

Ah. Hnh. That's...well. That's good to know, at least.

Yuu looks up at you again, before bowing. "...I'm sorry for being useless, Matsuda-san. I'm not being of any help again, am I?"

How do you respond?

I have a gallery for my own artwork.

http://minus.com/miLyqokn5DrM7

Everything that's finished goes up on there a short while after it's on a thread or on twitter.

I'm working on making one for artwork by every other artist, but feel uncomfortable collecting and uploading without their permission.

You give the well-meaning girl a pat on her hoodie-covered head. ...You were actually expecting for your hand to go through her, since she's supposed to be a ghost only you can see, but...she feels real. Warm. Vital. How she shivered slightly under your touch, before looking up at you with a blush on her cheeks was pretty lifelike, too.

"Matsuda-san..." She murmurs, her voice muffled by her oversized collar.

You give her another pat, before saying that it's fine if she can't tell you more. It's not something she can help with, anyway, and you'd much rather prefer being given incomplete information rather than no information at all.

"Still, I'll...do my very best to try and remember what I can for you, Matsuda-san." Yuu reaches up with both hands and takes it gently between her gloved own - and you blink as you realize that for someone who can punch out bears bigger than a fucking bus, her hands are actually pretty soft. "This way, I can still be of use to someone even when I'm like this."

Her gaze on you is so intent, so focused, that you can't help but feel your cheeks burn the slightest bit.

she...she's still of use, of course. She'll help you later, if it comes to the point that you need to punch something into next week, right?

"Oh, of course! Please count on me for that!" Yuu's mood considerably livens up here, and she clenches one hand into a fist. "I'll help you destroy anything you punch, Matsuda-san! With these fists, I'll pulverize anyone who dares stand in your path!"

...That's good. You like it when you can count on people for that kind of thing.

Yuu makes a happy noise, here, before blinking. "A-ah! I've stayed here for too long! I need to get back inside..." She looks around furtively again, clasping your hand with both of hers again, and...

...Well. You'd say she tried to kiss your Soul Gem, but with her collar in the way, it was more of a reverent pressing against her lips than anything else. ...It felt weird.

"Please be safe, Matsuda-san." Yuu murmurs, looking back up at you. "The Blessed Lady protects."

[+1000 Yuu Points!]

Around you, the chatter seems to resume, coming back louder than ever before. You catch that there's only ten minutes left before the opening number kicks off the concert at last. At the far side of the room, an extra loudly vomits on an idol, causing her assistants to make a frightful racket in kicking the everliving shit out of said extra.

You light another bent cigarette as the extra screams about his spleen.

What do you do now?

Instead we should ask enishi if our mg signature is different from normal ones. If its different, we might be able to use her to track wendy down as those touched by the blessed lady might be different from normal mgs.

You decide to check on your client, but first you make sure to remind Squad Hiryu about the Tojo Group executive. You also tell them to look out for a Callidus with Wendy's description. While you're sure that she may actually be disguised if she's here - no Callidus worth their rank would visit a high-profile event like this in their own skin - you'll feel much better having eyes watching out for her in any case. They are not to engage if they have visual confirmation, however - only that you're to be notified.

You also ask Enishi, after chatting with Squad Hiryu, if you could talk to her personally for a few moments. You've got an idea that might work, and you need to know if it's feasible. Enishi of course replied with her usual smirking voice, telling you that she'd be by your side momentarily.

...Thinking about it, you're not all that sure what you'd do if you find Wendy here, though. What do you even say in that kind of situation? How do you greet who's pretty much your ex - one who died, came back to life, and discovered that you've forgotten everything about her?

"Some flowers and chocolates are a good start, Matsuda-sama. Maybe a nice bottle of vintage red wine, the expensive sort. That always goes down well in complicated situations like that, I find."

Ah. That's handy to know.

You turn towards the person volunteering this information - and blink as you see a rather plump furry mascot thing with downcast eyes shaped like softboiled eggs where there was none before. One of its paws holding balloons with Ruri's winking face printed on them.

...Enishi? What? Is everyone fucking cosplaying right now, except you? What happened to reasonable disguises?

>>27102133

You feel someone carefully tap your other shoulder, and you turn to see a rather puzzled Karasawa Enishi materialize next to you. Her idol costume-clad form shimmering into reality starting from the face down. It almost looks like a cheap CGI movie effect, with the only difference being that it's actually real.

"Warmaster, I realize you may not have encountered true Callidus in the past, but please understand that those of my rank would actually consider it an insult to be caught dead in such a disguise." She sniffs at the mascot, who merely shrugs and offers you a balloon from the bunch it's carrying. You hesitate for a moment before taking the balloon - and both you and Enishi watch as the mascot plods off, in search for other victims.

"In any case, what did you have in mind, Matsuda-sama?"

...You tell her. You're not too sure of the mechanics, but is it actually possible? Since you're...different from other Magical Girls, could Enishi pinpoint what's different in terms of magic signature and use it to find anyone similar to yours?

Enishi's look is pensive, but she nods. "Well, I've never thought of it that way, Matsuda-san, but yes, we do use magic signatures to track specific targets. That said, your idea is quite a heuristic way of doing it." She holds out your hand. "Can I have your Soul Gem for a moment, then, Matsuda-sama? It won't take long, I just need an imprint of it to begin scanning."

You hand your Soul Gem over. Enishi's eyes going wide as she sees the golden gilding over what's almost a completely-black gem, except for the purple core inside it with the small crimson flame at the very center.

"Ah...amazing. Matsuda-sama, you have a very unique and exquisite gem." Enishi, almost lovingly, brushes her fingers across the gem's surface - making a chill run up your spine.

>>27102139

"Of course! Now, if you'll excuse me, Matsuda-sama..." Enishi closes her eyes, and your Soul Gem glows a faint purple. You blink as the golden gilding suddenly starts to turn black, thorns sprouting here and there in the shape of stubby spikes. You blink again as you realize that the black metal begin to take over the actual gem itself - covering it in what looks like a protective cage of obsidian spikes.

Another blink - and you realize that Enishi was now holding out your Soul Gem once more to you, waiting for you to take it back. An unreadable expression on her face.

"Matsuda-sama, I'm...hmm. I don't know how to say this, but..." She glances around. "Um. Your Soul Gem, Matsuda-sama. You're right, it doesn't have a signature typical of Soul Gems." Enishi shakes her head. "This has the signature of a Grief Seed. Not a Soul Gem."

You take your Soul Gem back from Enishi, converting it back into its amethyst form with a flex of your fingers. Turning it over and over in your hand.

Besides its darker-than-usual color, it looks...well, it looks like it's always looked like.

How do you react?

The problem here is that I think it is more likely she will just end up finding an actual witch barrier instead of someone who has been touched by Pinky. Or the grief seeds any MG is holding for gem cleansing purposes will be detected instead.

Still, worth a shot I guess. As long as there is nothing more pressing she needs to attend to. Like gunfire.

I wonder if our gem can be used to cleanse other normal soul gems...

Ah, yeah, I see what's screwing me up; where her forward leg crosses over the back, the angle of her rear leg's calf juxtaposed with the thigh's is making my eyes interpret her knee as being out at a weird angle. Like, it looks like it should be pointing to just behind Kyouko, rather than towards her as the angle of the torso and rear foot would suggest.

Which makes it look a bit like her ass is either flat or somehow has one cheek turned towards the camera, which is a little off-putting.

This might just be me, though, I dunno if anyone else is seeing this. And I hate criticising it at all, honestly, just cause I love your work in general and this piece specifically quite a bit.

tsun-tsun exterior but Midori has stirred all these new feeling in her. After a emotional confession it's Midori who takes the lead with the kiss she's dreamed of for so long. So...your Soul Gem has the same magic signature as a Grief Seed? And that's...well, that's generally bad news, isn't it?

"I'm not sure if there's a universe where the reverse would be true, Matsuda-sama, but generally, yes," Your Callidus Rank Leader nods, her eyes still warily following your Soul Gem, even after you've placed it back on the back of your right hand. "It's the kind of reading that signifies that a Magical Girl has undergone her transformation into a full-blown Witch. Of course, my Warmaster hasn't exactly yet turned the entire place into a sprawling hellscape, or started talking about eating children, so maybe that needs to be revised a bit." Enishi finally tears her gaze away from your Soul Gem to look at you. "I don't...well, most of the Officio doesn't know of the specifics, but may I ask if it's related to Matsuda-sama's stay in Siberia?"

You look back at her in silence, but before you can say anything, she holds up a hand. "...I forget myself. My apologies, Matsuda-sama, I didn't mean to put you on the spot, there. Would it be correct for me to assume that the answer to that question is in fact classified?"

...You were just about to say that, yes. But you were also about to say that you're not particularly concerned about it. And like she said, you haven't started going crazy yet, so this probably isn't a cause for alarm.

"I rather thought so." Enishi smiles to herself, although you can tell from how she's gone a bit pale that she didn't really like what she saw. "If my Warmaster says so, then it shall be so. My trust in Matsuda-sama remains intact and full."

...Right. Well. Even if your Soul Gem's like this, can she still use your signature to track down anyone similar?

"Well...it'd be worth a shot, I'd say. I do have the sneaking suspicion that the only thing I'll find are the spare Soul Gem rations some of Squad Hiryu are packing, but who knows." She offers you a smile again. "In any case, I'll see what I can do, and report any significant findings to you, Matsuda-sama. Is there anything else?"

No, you shake your head. Nothing else. ...Maybe if she could keep the thing about your Soul Gem just between the both of you...?

"I've already forgotten it, Matsuda-sama. Put out of my mind completely." She curtseys here. "I wish you well, Warmaster. Good luck for us, and good hunting for you."

You nod at her, and she walks away quickly, disappearing once more.

Lifting up your hand, you glance at your Soul Gem again. So it's just like a Grief Seed now, huh? Maybe...maybe you could try cleaning a Soul Gem with it, in that case?
Something to think about, anyway. You give your Superidol Ruri balloon a tug, before knocking on the door to Ruri's dressing room - the voices inside being particularly loud and giggly.

"Alright, alright! Coming!" Another burst of giggling, and the door opens, with Sayaka poking her head out. "Who is it--oh. It's just you, Murderface. What's up?" She blinks at your balloon, and smirks. "Nice balloon."

You thank her for the compliment, and ask to be let in. Time for the hourly client check, shit like that.

"Huh? Oh, yeah. Sure, come in." The Blueberry pulls the door open the rest of the way, and you allow her to lead you inside - the stink of perfume immediately hitting you hard. Sayaka catches your wince, and nods. "Yeah, it's the makeup and stuff. Some of the idols are getting dressed here too."

You look around as you follow the Eversor - and see that Sayaka's pretty much accurate. The room isn't that big, though - in fact, it looks a bit cramped, with costumes and makeup kits and such strewn on every available surface. Here and there you see an idol doing her own makeup - and chatting with the other idols cheerfully, some nervously. Doesn't all the idols have their own dressing rooms?

"They do, but Ruri kind of wanted to share hers as much as possible. Something about...breaking the stereotype of rival idols and getting everyone in the industry closer with each other, that kind of thing." Sayaka shrugs. "That's what I got from her, anyway."

Right. Well, where's--

"Iori's not here, though." Sayaka says this quickly enough that you're getting concerned of people being able to read your mind. "She's in her own personal dressing room down the hall. She said as much as she appreciated it, she wanted hers to be private."

...Ah. Right.

"Jeez, Murderface, don't look at me like I told you to go put out your cigarettes on Midori-chan's face." Sayaka frowns. "Just let it go, Christ."

What? But this is how you normally look. You didn't really--

"Yeah, yeah. Whatever." The Blueberry grumbles, and the both of you finally come to a stop in front of a folding dressing screen - the silhouette behind it a very svelte, very well-proportioned one. "Ruri-chan? Murderface's here to see you naked--OW! FUCK! MURDERFACE!"

Sorry. Your heel just accidentally ground itself into her sandaled toe.

"W-what?" Comes the surprised squeak from behind the screen, and Ruri's twintailed countenance peeks from beside it. "Oh, Sayaka-chan, stop teasing! Chiaki-chan would never do that, anyway!"

Ruri blinks at Sayaka, then at you, before ducking back behind the screen. "Well, Chiaki-chan, if you really did come here to check me out, all you needed to do was ask!" She giggles here, and you catch the sound of silk sliding upon smooth skin. "Or would you want a more private show?"

...This idol. Seriously, this idol.

Because that tongue thing that we had to get Kharn to explain to us in order to understand how it was physically possible? Mayumi did that to Midori in the first volume.

Mayumi is basically an unrepentant S lesbian sexual assault machine directed unerringly at Midori. Cute as the shoujo-ai twist would be, I'm pretty sure that would break her characterisation.

Anything out of the ordinary...? say this as you tap out another cancer stick and light up right there in the dressing room giving no fucks.

Would it be a good idea to ask if she knew Wendy and if she knew Wendy was coming?

If that's the case then

And if she know's Wendy, just how much does she know, and if she know's what's between Chiaki and Murderface which is extremely (unlikely at this point but just covering the bases here) WHAT THE FUCK IS SHE TRYING TO DO!?!?!

Well, maybe a compromise - not 100% of the time, but for significant periods of the day. Obviously when Chiaki's sleeping she can stay 'at home', and depending on how much she likes it there/how much it drains, good portions of the day as well.

Murderface = tsun, Chiaki = kuu
I believe Murder Mayumi was built on Murderface thus tsun. Also yuri-rape / sexual harassment more often than not comes before the real confession. With author on board would it be that out of character? Then again Midori is kinda M with the kneecaps and all... but good SM is based on love and trust after all. You could always go with "It was just a rumor" or stuff like that. Like.. Mayumi happened to saved other girls before who were unconcious and left the Rose as a token but it kind of turned into a thing were people started thinking that Murder Mayumi actually sleept with them and Miracle Midori was in truth the first one Murder Mayumi sleept with etc.

I know it sounds retarded but if we about Shoujo-Stuff and especially Shoujo Ai its not really more retarded than the usual stuff in that genre.

also, Pic related is still my favourite Shoujo-manga.

You tell Ruri that you're just checking up on her before the concert starts. From what you could tell from what's going on outside, you're not going to get many chances of talking to her like this once the event proper kicks off, so...yeah.

"Ooh. Well...we do get really busy with quick costume changes and so on in between numbers, and there's rehydrating and going to the bathroom in case that's needed, so..." Ruri's voice turns pensive, here. "I guess that makes sense!"

Yes. That's why you're here.

...Well, there is the thing about the Tojo Group being in the audience, too. You tell your client that Yoshitaka Mine's been spotted, along with a few recording company bigwigs, enjoying the best seats in the house. The security detail tried to bar his entry, but the stadium owner practically ushered the yak in, along with his coterie of armed goons.

"Ugh! Those assholes!" The superidol all but bristles from behind the screen, twintails rippling. "I knew I should've just given those premium tickets away myself, or just made it so that it's only general admission for everyone! Those new money yaks wouldn't so much as think of crashing my concert if it meant having to sit beside anyone NOT earning a six-digit salary in this town, I'd bet!"

Why didn't she do it, then?

"I was hoping they'd catch the hint after my turning down their offers like a thousand times already, Chiaki-chan! For real!" There's a furious divesting of clothes here, and you see a well-manicured hand pop out from behind the screen to grab an outfit from the rack beside it. "Just rustles my everything, these yaks! They keep saying that they're trying to go legit, but all it just amounts to is using guns and garrote wire to facilitate business negotiations!" An empty wire hanger clatters despodently to the floor as it's carelessly tossed away. "You know, Chiaki-chan, I should just take my life savings and hire you to clean Japan of yaks!"

Well. You're not really at liberty to discuss further business offers during an assignment. If she wants something done, she has to go through Kyuubey first. ...Anyway, you wanted to have Mine and his goons thrown out, but you realized it could create a fuss that Ruri might not neccessarily want to deal with.

"Nnh...well, that's right enough, Chiaki-chan." The superidol grumbles. "They'll raise a stink about it alright, something about discrimination, that kind of thing. Not really worth the bad media buzz, even if I'd really like to see that smug asshole thrown out on his ass." She pokes her head out again to smile at you. "Thank you for looking out for me, though, Chiaki-chan! That was very considerate of you!"

You're just doing your best, that's all. Nothing remarkable.

Suddenly, it's then that the noise outside changes - and the lights in the room flicker, along with a subtle roaring noise rolling in from somewhere. The ground shakes gently underneath your feet, and you could faintly hear three letters being yelled, again and again.

"Oh! The concert's started!" Ruri squeals from behind the screen, hopping out - and you see that she seems to be already dressed, but in what could be the most revealing version of Miracle Midori's costume. There are certain inaccuracies, of course - the fact that Ruri still retained her twintails, rather than letting them down, is already a huge one - but the overall look is very reminiscient of the original character. "Yuriko-chan, where's the remote for the TV? I wanna see if Mappi-tan misses her song cue again, hahaha!"

"If she won't let me live my wardrobe malfunction in Greece down, then I'm not going to let her live THAT down." Ruri returns, grinning, before pulling you along with her. "Come on, Chiaki-chan, come and watch with me! You too, Sayaka-chan!"

"Uh, yeah, sure." The Blueberry replies, walking up beside you, and looking not very excited about the entire thing. All three of you - along with the rest of the idols inside the dressing room - watch as the camera starts to pan around the stadium, showing a very packed crowd. "W-wait...! That's...that's the crowd we're going to be singing for, later?"

"I know, it's not that big of an audience, right?" Ruri frowns. "I wanted them to open the baseball field for seats, too, but they were having none of it." She pouts. "And you'd think being the only Super Idol in the world can get you anything, but noooo...'don't mess with baseball, young girl, just keep singing your autotuned songs'!"

The camera finally focuses on the stage - and after what appears to be a very long and almost blinding display of fireworks blasting out here and there, Kyosuke finally drops down onto the empty stage, lowered by a wire harness. Still with his costume and ridiculous makeup, his arms spread wide like some sort of messianic figure. His guitar hanging from the strap around his neck.

Instead of laughing at this ridiculous display, the crowd grows completely insane - cheering, chanting three letters again and again, and harkening everyone to go somewhere. Even the idols inside the room with you are squealing in delight - with the only silent ones being you and Sayaka, the Eversor's face buried in her hands.

"Haha~! Kyoujou's looking as awesome as ever, isn't he?" Ruri giggles. "It's really too bad Mappi-chan forced him to retire, but then again, that's showbiz!"

...Wait, what? Retire? But doesn't that mean that Kyosuke's--

"Don't. Say. Another damn word, Murderface." Sayaka says in withering tones, muffled by her fingers. "Just. Don't."

There's another explosion of pyrotechnics - this time just gouts of flame tearing into the sky from the stage - and another person drops down. This time it's the red-haired idol, in the costume you saw her wearing earlier. The crowd goes wild again as she raises a hand, a huge tongue of flame sprouting from her palm and solidfying into a stylized microphone with the stand attached.

Then, a riff. A foreboding drum solo.

And you watch, dumbfounded, as the jittery young man that you'd nearly shot in the face yesterday begin to lead a death metal song titled Ultimate Sadistic Creature. With Mappi-tan providing the vocals. His drummer and second guitar materializing behind him, already abusing their instruments that only death metal musicians know how. Also garishly garbed and made-up like their leader.

"...What happened to Vivaldi? You told me you wanted to play Vivaldi in Carnegie Hall..." You hear Sayaka murmur underneath her breath, in a strained, but resigned voice.

How do you react?

You could only watch in silence - along with an increasingly despodent Sayaka - as the opening number continues in its all its screaming, roaring, growling, and pyrotechnic-blasting glory. It's...quite surreal to see Kyosuke - a guy prim and proper enough that he probably irons his socks - behave in a way usually reserved for demons. Terrorists from hell, or something.

Somewhere during the song he was given a microphone stand of his own, and now he was trading stanzas with his redhead vocalist, his voice a gravelly, banshee-like screaming that sounds completely unlike his usual voice.

It's...well. You probably won't look at Kyosuke the same way again.

In contrast, though, the idols are just eating it up. They're even singing along with the chorus! The lyrics are a bit weird and unintelligible, in the way all death metal lyrics are, but you hear something about doing all sorts of mischief, such as burning orphanages, hospitals and shrine maiden donation boxes.

"O-oh! Here it comes! The Eleven Rapes A Second!" Ruri squeals, pointing towards the screen. Your eyes go wide behind your glasses as you whirl back to the broadcast.

Eleven...eleven what?

The entire idol room goes silent as they watch Kyosuke scream into his mic. One word, over and over, so quickly that it sounded like one uninterrupted shriek than anything else. It lasted no longer than a second - and the room erupted into cheers once more as the music joined in again.

...What? What the hell was that? That was just him screaming 'RAPE' over and over again!

"Yes!" Ruri squeals, clapping. "But eleven times, in one second! Even I can't do that!"

...Well. Er. You guess that's something to be proud about, then.

You glance towards Sayaka, and you can't help but feel sorry for the blue-haired Eversor. If there was really confirmation that there was something between her and Kyosuke, this was it. But...not like how you thought? Something like that?

You reach up and carefully, gently, place your hand on her shoulder. She stiffens at this, whirling to see who it is - finally giving you a half-hearted glare with slightly-reddened eyes.

"I'm not crying." Sayaka grumbles at you, sniffing.

Yeah. She's not. But you just wanted to say...well...sometimes people find their dreams in the most unexpected ways. That includes trying to reach for a different dream entirely.

"I know." The blue-haired Eversor sniffs again, muffling her nose with a wad of tissues. "And...and I'm happy for him. I'm mad as hell but I'm happy for him." She nods towards Kyosuke, who was now using his mouth to shred with his guitar. "I taught him how to do that, you know. Or. Um. Gave him a video of someone doing it. So I guess that's on me."

Ah. Well. And...and she does know that she's better off with Kyoko, then? About how they're so repulsively perfect together that everyone gets jealous of them?

"Of course I know that." This time, Sayaka smirks through her tears. "I know we're awesome together. And you'll never have anyone like Kyoko, Murderface."

You give her a wan smile, before tightening your grip on her shoulder. You're trying to comfort her here, but she shouldn't push it.

"Ow. Ow. Okay, okay. Jeeze. I was just kidding."

Right. Now, she should blow her nose, she's going to be performing later, right?

"Ugh, don't remind me." Sayaka sniffs. "Our number's next, I think. The Miracle Midori x Murder Mayumi OP - Love Is Tearing Us Apart." She lets out a sigh. "Man, this assignment..."

"Matsuda-san? Matsuda-san, are you there?" It's here that you hear a voice chirping in your ear - your earbud, it sounds like. Someone from Squad Hiryu. You excuse yourself from Sayaka and the rest of the idols, walking towards a quieter corner of the room. You murmur a reply a few seconds later, after finding a place to sit amongst all the discarded clothes. And underwear.

"Matsuda-san, there you are," You hear Ayumu, the girl who found NECO's calling card, breathlessly report. "Matsuda-san, you asked us to keep overwatch on the Tojo Group Executive, right? To notify you if we think he's up to anything fishy?"

Yeah. Pretty much.

"Well, um. He was talking on his phone earlier, and then he just...started talking to the executives. They looked a bit alarmed except for him, and then they all stood up and began to make their way to the nearest exit. They're currently heading for the main entrance, and our outside vantage point confirms that there's a car waiting for them." A scratch of static. "Should we take him out now, Matsuda-san?"

How do you respond?

I think we should go find a vantage point ourselves, Ruri has Sallaka with her, and well, Kyouske is on stage too so she should be alright, we should check out the crowd, maybe Enishi can pick up a change in energy. Let's get her on the mic too.

So:

Possibility 1: It is all a set up to distract us. Then going after them will be what they want.

2: They are running away. Going after them with limited personnel will get us intel, but we need people to prevent the thing they are running from. That, then, begs the questions as to why they came in the first place. Less likely possibility.

3: They are going for a completely unrelated reason. So spending our manpower on them will look silly. Perhaps it is planned to look silly and shit on our reputation. Recommended action: things that will not make us look silly.

So: Conclusion: Limited impedence for intel gathering without looking too silly, like flat tires or malfunctioning doors that happen to not open.

Music business execs, maybe? Seems like they would be the sort to be unaffiliated to the Yakuza.

(Though if those AKB rumors are true then both the japanese music industry and the Yakuza are pretty close)

At any rate, what I gleaned from the scene was that Mine warned them to get lost and they all left en masse. So he knows something is up and is getting possible business partners out of the way?

I really think we need more information before we start killing people, hence my vote to waylay one exec and question him

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 09/11/13(Wed)08:15 No.27160052

You decide to have Yoshitaka Mine's getaway car - where he seems to be herding the panicking executives towards - disabled. If there was something going down - if this series of events was pointing towards something similar to what happened with Kilgore - then you didn't want the rat from leaving the party too early.

"Orders received." Ayumu replies, her breathy voice tight with tension, and punctuated by the definitive metal click of a rifle's safety being disengaged. "This won't be a moment, Matsuda-san."

You murmur your thanks, and turn your eyes back towards the screen, where the rest of the assembled idols are still busy squealing at their colleague's - and Kyosuke's - performance. Apparently, things have gotten a bit out of hand - or at least that's how it looks like, with the young man's cape now on fire, along with his guitar - but he's still playing. Still thrashing at the strings like a man possessed.

Behind him, you can see a few of the stagehands already scrambling forward with fire extinguishers and a stretcher, all of them seemingly struggling with the choice of whether or not to interrupt such a performance and save the musician's life, or allow it to continue and most likely kill the young man.

It's then that you hear it - a sudden shriek of rushing air, nearly deafening at first but tapering off into a silent, almost whispery hiss. This noise is repeated again, three times in succession, before Ayumu's voice comes back on.

"Car has been disabled, Matsuda-san." The Vindicare's voice is much more relaxed now. "They won't be going anywhere with four flat tires."

"Confirmed," Another Vindicare on the frequency pipes up. "...Man, Ayumu, you didn't just blow out their tires. You nearly shot the car to pieces!"

"I was just being thorough," Ayumu murmurs defensively. "Taking a minute to reload and relocate to the nearest alternative vantage point. Someone please keep the target on sight."

"Roger wilco." There's a snickering noise, here. "Looks like they just found out. Dude with the slicked-back hair looks PISSED. And one of the executives is crying!"

"Let's try to keep unnecessary vox chatter on the minimum, please, Squad Hiryu," Enishi's voice comes on momentarily.

A series of reluctant assents, followed by a hesitant inquiry. "...Anyway, um. Further orders, Warmaster?"

How do you respond?

Show some style.

Turn up personally to meet the execs and offer the opportunity for them to retire to a premium area in the arena.

After all, they won;t be going anywhere for awhile.

Don't send a goon. We'll just be talking through the mic and somethings might not be suitable for the rank and file's ears.

So turn up in person and do this right with the proper protocol.

Hm... There is merit to this, but, well... I also kept thinking to send a goon because these are music business execs, used to dealing with histrionic little idols. Chiaki showing up and saying she's the head of security is just going to end up with derision.

So my thought was to send a security goon, which might put them at ease more quickly.

That being said, sending Enishi might be good for this but I really don't want to have her distracted in case something goes down soon.

Things won't go to shit too fast.

In the worst case scenario, we have Sallaka and Enishi protecting the Principal in the few minutes we're away. They can execute the getaway plan we came up with last time.

If we want information fast, we need to speak face to face with the man in charge. We speak through a goon, it'll take more time and he might not be able to express himself well.

Besides theres nothing like questions coming from a MG instead of just a security guy. Likely we'll save time and if we need to rush somewhere, we can activate time stop as a last resort.

The Head of Security showing up to allay their fears would likely put them at ease faster. We could turn up with a couple of security personnel just for show too, though. If they see them following chiaki's orders, they'll get it.

We're kinda stumbling around blind here guys, we don't even know if something bad is going to go down (fake-out would be pretty appropriate for this mission after all) and we know very little as to how the Tojo Group might plan to coerce Ruri into signing. And absolutely nothing about mystery decapitator. Let's not go insane with suspicion yet, when there's nothing actively harmful happened, and we have a source of (probably false, but still) information to investigate with the execs.

Honestly, if they're anywhere near intelligent they'll just wait for our contract to lapse THEN nab her.

Its not like we're going to give more than negative five fucks after this concert's over, after all.

As far as the Yaks know, she is going to have MG protection from now on. While they probably hired someone who is also on a timed contract.

Also, idols are not idols forever. If they plan to sell her into sexual slavery, she is worth the most when her popularity is at its peak. She might have hit a plateau in ratings and they have decided now or never.

Yeh, nabbing her right now when the Warmaster is watching her is stupid, but they might not have the luxury of time. The last Idol we watched had our full protection and went underground for how many weeks again? We might actually be why they are acting so soon.

You bite your lip as you consider your next move. ...This is going to take some getting used to, you figure. Normally, you'd be the one getting orders barked at, not the one barking them out. Sure, you went through the requisite training for squadmembers - to equip each Magical Girl in a squad basic leadership qualities in case their leader gets taken out - but this is your first time at the helm. It's not...hnh. It's not your natural role, is what you're trying to get at. You're much more comfortable doing things yourself rather than ask someone else to.

But you are Warmaster now, and like it or not, you'll just have to adjust.

You clear your throat, here, and then tell Squad Hiryu to keep alert. Half of them to dedicate their attention to Mine's group, and the other half to any outward threats that might show up. The entire Squad - along with Enishi - replies to the affirmative, and it's then that you call the attention of one of Kyosuke's men.

"Yes, ma'am?" Comes the gruff, yet alert tone from one of Kyosuke's trusted officers, a rather eager-looking guy by the name of Ben. Just as huge as Charles, you noted upon seeing him, and sporting the very same afro. "We've got the yak and his rich buddies in sight. Just say the word and we'll take them down."

You allow yourself a smile, before telling him to simply invite Mine and his executives for some tea with you, backstage. His guards can come along, but only if they hand over their firearms for safekeeping. Wouldn't want an accidental discharge or anything.

"Roger that, Miss Matsuda." Ben chuckles at your plan. "I'm sure they'll be happy to oblige."

You thank him, and make to sign off - before catching another glimpse of the Tv screen. It looks like Kyosuke's finally allowed the stage crew to put him out. ...Is Kyosuke going to be alright, you ask? You don't know much about this kind of music, but...he was on fire, wasn't he?

"I'd hazard that he'll be just fine, Miss Matsuda." You could hear the grin on Ben's voice. "Kamijou's a tough kid, and he's done this kind of thing before. We're still sad he had to retire, but he says he doesn't miss the touring - or living out of tour buses."

Ah. Right. Well, you'll be waiting for them at the entrance. There should be a few rooms nearby that can be used as an impromptu interrogation room there.

"Acknowledged, Miss Matsuda. We'll have them ready for you."

You thank him once more, before allowing the static filling in radio silence to key itself down to an inaudible level. You glance back at the idols - it seems they're getting ready for the next song number, which you remember is the opening song for the OVA of that porn Midori makes.

"We're nearly up, Chiaki-chan!" Ruri chimes as she steps forward, bouncing in her Miracle Midori costume. And for some reason, her costume is accurate enough that even the...bouncing...is properly replicated. Despite you remembering that she's not all that bouncy to begin with. "Come on, are you ready for your big debut? And you don't even have to wear a costume, since yours is already perfect!"

Sayaka meets your gaze, and shakes her head. Hanging back behind the idol, she taps at her ear - saying that she'd been listening to the frequency, too. She then gestures to Ruri, then to herself, then flashes you the international symbol that meant, pretty much, that she'll be wearing the idol like underwear. Index and middle finger held tightly together.

You nod at Sayaka, before turning back to Ruri and shaking your head. As much as you were waiting to make your big debut of lipsynching to a packed worldwide audience, something else has come up that needs your immediate attention. Something that involves a yak, his knees, and your gun. And it really can't wait.

"B-but...!" Ruri pouts here, clearly displeased at this turn of events. "I'm already dressed up and everything to be your Miracle Midorin, Chiaki-chan! And really, I'll be leading the entire way, you don't have to worry about placing and stuff, you just need to look cool! Come on, I gotta have the real deal for this number...!"

The super idol's plea ends in a plaintive note, tears welling up at the conrers of her eyes, and for a moment you're actually compelled to just suck it up and say yes. The yak and his buddies can stew for a while, can't day? Besides, you'll just be singing for one number, and that's it. Do you really have to be so uncooperative sometimes--

It's here that Deepthroat suddenly comes into the scene, in that awkward, sweaty, drippy way that she does. Mumbling something underneath her breath as she squeezes past idols and extras, you see her smile wanly at you before tugging at Ruri's cape, whispering something into her ear.

The super idol, still sniffing, seems to blink in surprise for a few moments as she listens - and it's here that she flashes you a grin. "Haah. Chiaki-chan, you lucky devil. Good thing I thought about the possibility of this happening, and arranged a backup plan just in case!"

A backup plan...?

"...She means me, Chiaki-san," a familiar voice says as some of the idols crowding around Ruri part - to reveal...well, a rather spitting image of yourself, from the glasses to the costume, albeit with Murder Mayumi-styled differences. A shiny metal Shield, with chainsaw teeth jutting from its rim, gleams from her right arm.

What? Who? You blink at this strange apparition. Is that...?

This idol. This idol made Iori dress up like you! ...Sort of!

"Ruri-san knew you were going to find some way out of this performance, and kindly asked me to take your place." A small smile curls your slightly-distorted reflection's lips. "N-not that she had to. I volunteered myself." It's here that her cheeks redden at your slack-jawed stare. "U-um, I don't look too weird, don't I, Chiaki-san? It's just a wig, and this isn't real blood..." She points towards the splotches of crimson on her bomber jacket's collar, as well as on her Shield. "...And goodness, how do you even wear these heels for as long as you do? I'm barely an hour into this costume and already my feet hurt!"

It's...uh...you never really thought about that kind of thing, you wanted to say. Or rather, it does hurt a fucking lot, but it kind of takes care of itself after you've started running in them enough that your feet have practically given up telling you how much they hurt.

But you're a bit too stunned at the moment to see Iori cosplaying as you. It's...it's pretty surreal.

"I wasn't even going to bring her out if you went along, Chiaki-chan," Ruri harrumphs, stepping up behind Iori and placing both her hands on her shoulders. "But yeah, Iori-chan, looks like you were right about her - Chiaki doesn't really like fun, doesn't she?" The super idol sticks her tongue out at you again. "We'll just have to do the number without her, it seems like!"

Iori shakes her head at this. "N-no, Ruri-san--"

"Ruri-chan!" The super idol corrects her, petulantly.

The idol wearing your face looks at you, bearing an expression of saintly patience being stressed, before managing to smile again. "A-alright. Ruri-chan, Chiaki-san doesn't really hate fun. She's...not just used to the work we do, after all." She looks at you, smiling. "We should leave her to do what she does best. Don't you agree, Chiaki-san?"

How do you respond?

That has nothing to do with this, we were given a warning by a ghost in a golden weapon. We should go out there and spot Wendy if possible, take Iori place Sayaka is capable of protecting Ruri but could she defend against another golden weapon. I'm assuming that's how Yuu detected her in the first place.

You get over the initial shock of seeing Ruri being made up to look like you - and with enough effort, you manage to tell her to have fun, but also to be careful. Anything Sayaka tells her to do, she follows to the letter, and that she should always be alert. Just in case something happens.

"Eh?" Iori blinks. "Um...is there anything about to happen, Chiaki-chan?" She looks at you, then at Sayaka, then at Ruri. "There...this isn't going to be like last time, isn't it? Ruri-chan's not in any danger, is she?"

You glance at Sayaka, and the Blueberry glares at you - before giving the barest, most impercetible shake of her head.

Fine. No, you tell Iori. There's no clear and present danger - not yet from what you can see. You have a few suspects that you think might be up to causing trouble, but they're already on their way backstage, escorted by armed security detail who have eager trigger fingers and not much mood for bullshit.

Still, you want her to listen to the blue-haired Eversor at all times, and to be conscious of her surroundings. You're not saying anything will happen, but on the off-chance does, you'll do everything in your power to make sure she comes back home safely.

"A-ah. well." Iori looks uncertain here, wringing her hands behind her back, but she manages to work up a smile after a few moments. "Alright, Chiaki-san. I trust you with my life. Please take care of me." She bows, formally and primly, and you can't help but feel...well. Bad, you suppose, but what? About how you practically stomped on her feelings twice? Or maybe because she's trusting her own life to someone who can't even take care of herself most of the time, much less other people?

Whatever thought train that was going on, however, it was quickly derailed by Trainmaster Ruri and her Ruse Train. On which there are no brakes, or the ability to read the mood.

"Well, this is nice and all, but what about me, Chiaki-chan?" You had no idea that Ruri could pout harder than she did, earlier - but it's happening, and it's all you can do not to give in. Or want to slap it off her face already. "It goes double for me, right? Right?"

...Yeah. Yeah, double. And you'll have to talk to her about her idea of backup plans later. Seriously.

"Hee, sure~!" Ruri winks at you. "I know Chiaki-chan can use a few sneaky tricks up her sleeve!"

Right. Yeah. Sure. Sneaky.

Suddenly, a bell rings from somewhere inside the dressing room, and it's then that Ruri claps her hands. "That's the call, everyone! Come on, everyone, we're up! Noriko-chan, be steady with the webcast camera this time, and be sure to get my good side!" With a flourish, Ruri sweeps the cape of Miracle Midori's costume to the side, before swooping out of the room, Deepthroat in tow.

"Y-yes, Ruri-sama! ...Nnahh, p-please, slow down!"

You shake your head as you watch the idols follow their leader out - only to blink as you realize that Iori's hung around, even after the last costumed performer had already left.

An awkward silence stretches between the both of you, for the briefest of moments. A silence soon broken by her gasp as you take her hand, stopping her from leaving.

"C-Chiaki-san...?" Iori murmurs, her eyes wide behind her fake glasses, turning towards you, going red in the face. "I...um...the performance..."

...You immediately let go with your hand as you tear off the Warmaster Cap with the other. Turning around, you stuff the symbol of rank and office into your inventory with unwarranted vehemence and EXTREME VIOLENCE. God...goddammit. Goddamn hat! GODDAMN KHARN!

"Is anything wrong, Chiaki-san?" You can almost hear the concern in her voice. "Do...do you need some water? Some coffee, maybe? I realize that this has been stressful, and...Ruri-san doesn't really help, does she?"

[2/3]

No. No, she doesn't, but...you'll be fine, you tell her. You turn around to manage a smile of your own, as half-assed as it is.

You just wanted to, um, thank her for the substitution. If you knew she was the prepared sub, then you probably would've said to hell with it, and performed instead. But this thing with the yakuza--

"I know, Chiaki-san, and it's fine. You don't need to thank me, or apologize." Iori smiles. "We're friends now, right? Not clients or...or anything else." She lets out a small sigh at this - one that sounded resigned than anything else - before shaking her head. "There's no need to be awkward. Besides, I did volunteer, and it'll be quite the opportunity for me to sing something I usually balk at." She pauses here. "And...well, if something does happen, then Chiaki-san will come and rescue me, right?" The idol asks this with a smile, a smile totally unlike an idol's smile.

Just a regular smile from a normal girl.

How do you respond?

Thread 109
>What about the performing thing? You're not a part of the all-dancing, all-singing crap of the world. Has she heard what your voice sounds like? You're not getting on that stage--
>"Oh, you are! But you'll be performing as Murder Mayumi, it'll be perfect!" Ruri grins at this, her strangely-glowing eyes twinkling and sparkling. "Oh, and don't worry about your sucky voice, there's always lip-synching! I do that when I've got a sore throat!"
>...Right. You forgot about that. Sucky voice, indeed.
>You'll let your ego soak that bruise. What about her itinerary for today? What's she got lined up?

>No, we explicitly shut down the idea quite recently when we checked in on her pre-concert.
You mean the final pre-concert security briefing we had with Kyosuke, Enishi, Ruri, Sayaka, and ourselves?
Because what we ACTUALLY said was:
>You tell them what you're going to do, too - and similar to Sayaka's, you'll be staying in close contact with Ruri as much as possible for the entire thing. Even if...even if it means you have to contend with the singing and dancing, sure. Just so long as the Principal remains safe

...Yeah. Yeah, of course. It didn't even need to be said.

"Then my worries are unfounded," Iori replies, still smiling, bowing once more towards you. "It's been a pleasure knowing you, Chiaki-san, and I do hope we can spend time with each other in a much more...well, typical setting, rather than the ones we keep finding ourselves in." Her smile turns to a cheerful grin. "Who knows, maybe we can spend time as normal friends once in a blue moon!"

Yeah. Maybe. That'd...be good, yes.

"Iori-chan?" Sayaka pokes her head into the room, blinking as she spots your...well, your singing double. "Come on! Number's about to begin, we're all ready!"

"A-ah, coming, Sayaka-chan!" Iori turns back to you and gives you another wave of her Shield-clamped arm. It's here, though, that you toss her your half-squashed pack of cigarettes - the thing neatly landing on her upraised palm. She blinks at this, puzzled. "Um, Chiaki-san, I don't smoke--"

No, she doesn't, but Murder Mayumi does. You're not telling her to actually smoke one, though - just take one out and stick it between her lips, or teeth. Just to grab onto it. It'd make her look cooler - and if anything, make her cosplay of you accurate.

"O-oh...oh, I see!" Iori nods. "I'll...make sure to use this carefully, Chiaki-san! Anyway, good luck!" She waves at you once more, before finally running over to join Sayaka outside - and leaving you alone with your thoughts and a clear lack of smokes.

It's fine, you tell yourself. That little scene just meant that Iori had indeed moved on. Just like you asked her to. Just like you told her to.

...Idols. Never again.

The crowd grows absolutely insane - cheering, screaming, applauding - before gradually petering out into blissful, symmetrical silence. Silence that only the most popular idol of the world can ask for without even saying a word.

Without opening her eyes, Ruri starts to sing.

It's...well. It's a simple song, granted. Simple lyrics, the beat isn't all that complex, nor is there any sort of aural gymnastics being put into play with the instruments or voicework used. But its message is clear - that love, no matter how strong, no matter how fervent, can tear a complete whole asunder as efficiently as hate could. As efficiently as any weapon could.

Your earbud crackles to life just as Iori - or Murder Mayumi - steps into the song's second chorus. Her voice cold, strong, vehement - the complete opposite of Ruri's warmth, vulnerability and hesitation. Their voices melding as one.

Perfect, you reply. You glance up at the screen once more, before taking hold of the remote control and turning the thing off. The flatscreen television beeps, before its picture cuts ouut just as Iori and Ruri shares an on-screen, mid-song kiss.

The crowd cheers. Blood flies. Another Magical Girl is taken out of the tournament after sustaining “reasonable injuries”. The winner gets her beating delayed for another round and is given a day break until the next round.

I’m not even sure why I’m here. I was just told to go, that I could be evaluated better. Sure, I guess I could use a fight or two around here. Even Eightball said I could use some. But then there are the differences. People are watching our every move. There is a prize for the taking, though this is mostly just about bragging rights. But I think the biggest thing of all is that this is real training. Hitting a big sack of sand is good and all, but here there is danger, there is injury and there will be blood. I guess I’m more experienced in that then some others here.

There are of course rules. No Culexus’ allowed, since it would be down-right unfair. Only use weapons that are a part of you, so no swordsman switching out for spears or knife-throwers going gunslinger. No using the audience, period. Nobody talks about the last time that happened. It’s better that way.

Fights are stopped after “reasonable injuries” are sustained, or death. Death is… easier to pull off, but stopping a fight without doing anything extra might be good in terms of honor, or something. Most don’t try that, they say it gives an extra adrenaline when your life is on the line, makes fights harder, last longer and more appeasing. You could always surrender, of course, but it’s considered the sissy way out.

But maybe… maybe I’ve had enough unnecessary death in my life already. Plus this officio is already filled to the brim with blood-thirsty killers. I’ve heard enough stories about the crème ala crème of the Eighth, and especially about the Wonderland Corps. They are probably looking for more of themselves out here, and their searching is easy.

All you need to do is look into the girl's eyes when they fight. They tell everything.

“Oh, you’re here. Didn’t think I’d see you in a place like this.” I already know where the soft voice comes from as I turn to the petite girl behind me. Short white hair barely touches her bare shoulders as the black/white dress goes down to her knees where her black stockings and boots take over. The biggest show is the red ribbons tied to her wrists that flow behind her, a lead to what she can do as a magical girl.

“Well I knew you would be here, Sami. This stuff is exactly what you like. Complete Eversor potential right here.” I know it’s this personality that makes me unlikable, even as I grin about it, but I’ve been around Sami to know she doesn’t care at all.

“I’m here to practice. If I win then I win.” She scans the room with her violet eyes, devoid of most emotion. It’s even scarier in combat. “I don’t get why people get so bloodthirsty over this stuff. Everyone who dies just gets brought back.”

It’s not really much of a friendship other then just talking every now and then. We just happen to agree with stuff, including the necessity to be on your own to practice. It works out nice, at least when we agree with each other.

“Sami Richardson, Cloey Hughes, next to fight!” The announcement rings over the system, already energizing the audience for the blood to come. Sami already makes her way to the stage.

“Show them pain.” She gives this look at that… I can’t really decipher, and then enters the ring.

I should really teach her a lesson some day.

The two enter the big square that is the arena. It looks like her opponent, Cloey, is a vindicare from the revolver clearly stashed on her side. There’s probably one on the other side to. She doesn’t even bother transforming from the looks of it, though it’s probably because of her cheeky cowboy outfit. Sami’s already ready to go.

“Three, two, one, fight!”

FWOOSH

Samis’ first move is intimidation, immediately flourishing her ribbons to two extra, then four, eight, until she’s nearly surrounded in them. Cloey tries to take a few shots, but nothing gets through the barrier.

Then it’s over in seconds. Quick and clean, charging in followed by a few ribbon cuts to the abdomen, the arms and one straight to the head for a decapitation. All the while her expression never falters. It's what makes her so devastating in combat. Either she never saw her coming so quickly or never had a chance to use her ability.

"The winner is Sami in our fastest match yet!" The crowd cheers, but Sami just leaves the arena and heads straight for the exit. A few come into the arena to gather the body and soul gem for reviving her, cleaning it up for the next fight.

My turn.

>No, I mean when we popped in when she was changing
That was last thread, and again, no, we did not bring up us not going out to sing, at all.

The only subjects discussed were that the Tojo Group was here, that we didn't make a scene with them, then Kyosuke/Krauzer came up, we comforted Sayaka, then one of the Squad Hiryu girls told us that Mine was making a break for his limo.

So no, you are misremembering things, and that's what's being argued here.

>> ☐ -That- Guy 09/11/13(Wed)13:25 No.27163235

While making the tournament voluntary made things easier for the one's who weren't broken by reality yet, it has a slight downside; where not every girl knows what to expect when they enter. The last fight was over so quick because Sami knew what had to be done, while I could see the terror in the other's face moments before her head was removed from her body. I hope the same doesn't happen to my fight.

"Gina Falette, Alexi Gomez, next to fight!" The crowd cheers are a bit louder this time. True to Eightballs words, that mission in the museum made me quite popular among the newbie crowd. I know that it's natural to look up to someone, but it doesn't need to be the first MG who does something so "cool and awesome".

…Okay, maybe I was asking for it for being so flashy, but at least I got a fight ahead of me with-

…Is that a mancatcher? Well, it's a variation of one, but damn! It's a spear in the front with a scythe-like curved blade in the back, meant to impale and drag people back. Due to the double-sided weapon, it's held by a handle connected to the hilt.

Well this should be fun.

"Three, two, one, fight!"

…And she goes invisible. My fucking day.

I put as much focus as I can in the shield and walk out to the center. Even with any heightened senses I've gotten from becoming a magical girl won't help me for long. I need to react first to her going onto me, and the shield should…

There!

Too late, but it absorbs the first attack. Turning towards her I summon and swing the mace at her weapon to get it away, but she maintains grip.

That's when I realize I don't know how to fight against this weapon.

For a while I just delay the fight, reading her patterns and techniques. It may be boring but this is a part of practice. Retirements happen every year and there's no telling me when the next one will be on my hands. The more you know about someone the easier they become to deal with, like Sami. Or if you want to turn it around, me.

"Come ON you stupid! Just fucking fight already!" She's getting agitated for her lack of bloodlust as I successfully dodge or parry her attacks. But fine, if she wants action…

I force her weapon to slide a different direction using the small gap in my mace then desummon it. If I can't fight her like that, I can bring the fight where it's uncomfortable for her. I dash in for an elbow to the chest, a knee to the stomach, grabbing her free arm and putting it in a lock behind her where-

OW. Of course I forget it's a fucking mancatcher. The scythe rear of the weapon finds a nice place in my backside, and it's slowly digging in further. My magic boils as it seeks an exit point. I wrap an arm around her neck and release it there, a direct bolt to her upper body.

Now it's fighting time.

We broke up after that. Well, more like we decided to stop putting each other in a painful position where neither of us could move so we could find our footing again.

That… sounds odd when I put it like that.

My opponent, Alexi I think it was, wastes no time in charging back at me with her weapon raised flat and in front of her. It's an offensive move in a defensive form, so I just need to make her decide between the two or loose balance. I put up the gap in the mace again to catch the bar and use its forward force to slide myself under her, bringing the mace up as I do to hit her near her…

Well, nobody should really be hit there, ever. Men can make fun of it all they want, but it still fucking hurts. That's why it works for me.

She doubles over, giving me the opportunity strike. One swift strike against her hips with the mace. Bones crack and break, the leg nearly disjoints, the spine rattles from the vibrations and she falls to the floor in more pain. After all of this she still attempts to get up, but trembles under her current load of pain, leaving her on her hands and knees.

"This was never a fight." I coldly state as I walk to her, mace in hand and still itching to strike. "This is a lesson to you, to NEVER fight with someone like me!" The coup de grace is one massive blow to the center of her spine from up high and brought down hard. The spine breaks and shatters in a few places, even the ribs feel it. The heart stops for one second and the wind is knocked out of her.

My opponent falls completely unconscious, and soon after I'm declared the winner. Whoopy-fucking-doo.

I'm not so certain yet how I think of the crowds cheers. Is it because they want me to succeed? Are they proud of me incapacitating one of their fellow girls? Or are they just all savoring the bloodlust, for each round that someone nearly dies or does die?

Hell, if they needed more rabbits why don't they just look at the audience?

Still, I savor the reactions. Their yelling, cheering, applauding, it makes you feel better. It's somewhat good after almost killing a fellow girl, something to get your mind off of what had just happened in the few minutes past. I nod my head and wave at them as I walk myself out of the arena and out of the building. No smiling, though. That's what they're looking for. Just a limp, backstab still hurts like hell.

"Good job." To my surprise, Sami stayed in the arena and joins me on the way out of the building. "Could have done it quicker. Why did you wait?"

"Was practice, ow." I hold onto my back, still bleeding out. My magic takes care of it a little but it still hurts. "Just in case I ever get called to do a retirement. Plus I can now safely assure myself I want to try out that weapon."

"Collecting trophies now?" Sami asks me, completely deadpan.

“Is there a problem with liking weapons?” I meant this partly as a joke, but her response was a sign of things to come.

(And I'm done! Feedback is always appreciated!)

I'm very disappointed with this development, chiaki has an unreliable memory, but she is very determined and usually gets the job done.even if she has to wade through the blood and the shit. Now it seems that every time she makes a decision, she immediately chooses a new choice when it's brought up, even if merely an hour or two has passed.

This is caused not by character struggle, but merely by the audience participation changing from game to game. How can anyone build any trust in chiaki when from hour to hour her mindset completely shifts and she totally forgets what she said prior or promised to do.

I can't imagine what it would be like to have a friend/boss like that.

We've got evidence saying that we were going to go up on stage until the Yakuza situation made us reconsider.

For the record, I'm fine if we reconsidered because of a change in the situation; that's perfectly normal and what a good security detail should do, adapt to changing situations.

But what I'm trying to prove, and what I can't stand, is when people say that things happened that didn't actually happen, and then shit on people that call them out on their mistake.

As can be seen by the votes, no, Decu went with the most voted option of going with the cosplay cover.
Deculture did not "flat-out ignore" what the players want, because the majority of the players got what they asked for, which was to play along and not try to shoot Ruri down in front of a world-wide Internet audience.

Just because you think it happened, doesn't mean it happened, and we can prove it because it's all archived.

>> ☐ Anonymous 09/11/13(Wed)16:18 No.27165378

I don't see why it matters. Who cares what Ruri thinks of Chiaki (she certainly didn't react like we'd promised her shit...), any performance would be contingent on not having more important stuff to do, which is the case, not performing is far more IC for even reformed Chiaki, and it won this vote handily.

>> ☐ Anonymous 09/11/13(Wed)16:26 No.27165485

>>27165378
What matters is people incorrectly remembering things and making decisions based on those incorrectly remembered details, and then shouting down anyone that tries to correct them about it.

Yes, Chiaki performing on stage would be contingent on not having something more important, and deciding that finding out what the Yakuza were running from is a valid reason to reconsider going on stage.
But people were acting as if we'd never agreed to it, declaring that we had shot down any intention of getting up on stage, when we had done no such thing.

This brings into question what other details or promises we might have forgotten about or could be misremembering.
Anons like this >>27163734 are part of the problem.

>>27165485
I don't think it's a problem, the reason so many thought that she'd been shut down is that actually performing is both massively OOC, and massively favored (as shown by this vote), and it's been suggested and backed up in votes several times, people just didn't notice it never ended up actually winning one of these votes. I can't think of anything else which would be in a similar situation.

>Well, certain characters are indeed taking stock of everything Chiaki does

Also, of how our actions are perceived by Chiaki's subordinates; as this anon said >>27163557

>>27165575
Actually performing isn't massively out of character, as you put it, because it's part of our job.
Refusing to go out to perform this round wasn't because Chiaki didn't want to, but because we need the information from Mine of the Tojo Group about what he has planned.

>and it's been suggested and backed up in votes several times
See, this never happened.

Performing was never part of our job, and it was certainly never perceived as part of it by anons at any point. I 100% believe that people would have voted against performing even if nothing had come up, maaaaaybe changed their minds due to worry for Iori getting targetted out there but not before. The atmosphere in the threads for this storyline has generally been anti-Ruri, pro-doing-our-job-and-no-more after all. Do you have anything to back up your belief that a majority would otherwise be pro-performing?

>See, this never happened.
Of course it has, as the recent argument has shown it was both suggested and backed up by plenty of people back when it first came up, and I personally customed shutting it down in another vote later on. None of them won, no, but plenty of support for it. And either way, complications did indeed show up, and people did indeed massively vote against it, and Ruri's reaction was more that of someone who was hoping to coerce Chiaki into going on stage, rather than a broken promise (with her theatrics surely she would have thrown in a 'you promised!' with her begging, if she actually thought Chiaki had done so).

>Do you have anything to back up your belief that a majority would otherwise be pro-performing?
Every time that Ruri said that we were performing, we went along with it, and it was included in what Chiaki said she would do without massive outcry at either point.

There may have been support for what you voted for, but the fact that you never won means that there was voting for the other side.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 09/22/13(Sun)08:32 No.27361743

You are a Magical Girl, and you’re about to interrogate a bunch of filthy rich recording company executives about what’s exactly got them spooked enough that they’d want to leave just as your client’s grand concert had just started.

It’s a convenient stroke of luck, considering that you’re REALLY in the mood to shoot some kneecaps off. Or maybe just tear them off manually with your hands, or whatever. You'll play it by ear.

It’s all about moving on, and becoming a better person, and not dwelling on the past.

Because fuck everything there is about idols. Everything.

>>27361743

Of course, you kind of know why the executives are spooked as they are, their badly tailored coat-and-ties making them look like worried penguins scurrying about mindlessly. Yoshitaka Mine, President of Hakuho-hai and a representative of one of the biggest yakuza groups in Japan, Tojo Group, had been urgently herding them out of the stadium and into a limousine before you had them rounded up by Kyosuke’s armed gorillas. It doesn’t really explain the exact reason, though.

Of course, you had the limousine blown up by your own squad of Vindicares. It’s currently a smoking wreck just outside the stadium, one that had attracted a few of the stadium staff and was now dousing the flames with fire extinguishers. This isn’t your first idol mission.

Anyway, you’ve got the executives – four of them, to be exact – sitting in one room. You were just about to ask about Mine, when you realized that Kyosuke’s men had him separated from the executives and guarded in another room entirely, in a surprising show of competence and consideration. No worries of the yak answering for them, or trying to threaten them to keep silent.

Beyond the backstage area, you can still hear the sounds of the concert – the pounding bass, the shitty J-POP blasting from huge speakers, and the screaming of the crowd – melding into one roaring din, muffled by the walls. The very floor vibrating slightly with the beat.

…Well. Anyway.

What do you do now?

You decided to interrogate the executives first. Let the yak freeze his nuts off for a while longer while inside the equipment room that Kyosuke's men had appropriated for his holding cell. Easier to deal with someone used to having a lot of clout and power after he's stewed in his own juices for a while, alone and without his usual attache of brutes.

Besides, the warmup will be appreciated. It's been a while since you actually worked properly - and no, running errands and babysitting for an idol does not count as work. At least, you don't count it as work.

Just before you could enter the room where the executives are held, however, it's here that your smartphone starts to vibrate. You blink at this, before pulling the device out. It's a call, from Kyuubey. You immediately accept it and hold the device up to your ear.

"Ah, Matsuda. There you are." The Incubator's voice is a bit faint from the cheering in the background. "Sorry about the ambient noise, I'm calling from the general assembly room. Our girls are very vocal about how much of a fan they are of your client."

Right. Well. What's he calling for? You've got a date to keep with some kneecaps, here.

"Yes, well. I'm calling about that."

...Here it comes.

"Now, now. I know this seems a certain way, but I do my best not to micromanage everyone in my payroll - most especially my Warmaster. I simply try and...provide direction, so we're always on the same page in terms of office policy." The mutant cat pauses here momentarily. "That is what I'm doing here. Providing direction. And the direction I'd like you to take is the one where you try not to ruin the great PR you've been building up for us so far by doing something counter-productive."

Like what?

"Like shooting a certain recording company executive or two in the kneecaps," Kyuubey replies.

...Goddamn mutant bastard cat.

How do you respond?

I don't know, you can de-magnetize metal easily. In a robot that's advaned enough to seamlessly mimic a human being full ECM shielding might also not be too hard to expect. I'd suggest taking her to a motor garage and putting her next to one of those 500kg-mega magnets they use to trigger magnetic valves in engine blocks or gearboxes. It'll do something and I bet Misaka has one of those lying around.

The way I see it is that we talk all this shit about "Kill. Maim. Kneecap." between posts, but when it comes to it we don't do something that might have bad consequences in the future, like a shadow war between companies. No. We'll go in there and ask questions, when they hesitate we ask again and then if that doesn't work we'll do a show of force. Like say pulling out the gold chainaxes from the shield (Because you know it's going to happen at some point).

Or [Retarded plan that will drop Sayaka points by a lot maybe] Tell Sayaka she'll need to play pretend for a bit, handcuff her and make one of the guards bring her in the room, we will pretend to think she's involved with the yakuza, she'll deny it of course and when she refuses to speak we kneecap her and while typing this I remembered we're in a place with many uninvolved people. Hnh. Well. You weren't really planning on REALLY shooting them, just--

"Please don't insult our working relationship by lying to me, Matsuda." There's the slightest note of reproach in Kyuubey's voice as he cuts you off. "I have your best interests at heart, and your worst ones written down and notarized in case you need proof that will hold up in court. If at all possible, try to leave them as you found them - with their knees intact."

...Damn cat. Fine, okay. You'll do your best not to. No promises. It's not like you're interrogating them to find out just what kind of shit involving your client might be going down, right? It's not like you're doing this for the benefit of the mission, right?

"I'm glad we can come to an understanding, Matsuda," replies Kyuubey, in the most shit-eating voice you've ever heard him reply in. "I have complete trust in you, both as my Warmaster and my proxy." A moment's pause, once more. "Of course, the overt threat of having their kneecaps shot out might be enough. You do have that gift for that kind of diplomacy - it's just a shame that you carry them out just as much as you threaten them."

Oh, so you can't shoot them, but you can at least make it look like they would?

"Well, as long as you maintain the illusion that they might get their kneecaps blown out, but to not actually do it..." Kyuubey replies. "I'll leave it up to you to decide what route to take best. I am simply advising that the actual act of shooting their kneecaps out be left as the very last, penultimate resort."

...Right. But what about Mine, then?

There's a moment of silence, here, before Kyuubey replies. A reply that, while delivered in his same usual tones, is made much more chilling by the fact that he doesn't seem to think much of just what he said.

"As long as it's kept out of sight, I could hardly care less what happens to him, Matsuda." He clears his throat, once. "Good evening to you."

The call ends there, and you shove your smartphone back into your inventory.You heard it from the mutant cat himself. The executives are not to be shot unless it's just about the only thing you can do, and Mine...well. Kyuubey's practically told you that you could shove him facefirst into a woodchipper and he wouldn't mind.

Sure, you'll always have your disagreements with the mutant cat, but he knows how you work, at least.

Shoving your hands into your jacket's pockets, you step into the room where they're holding the executives. All four of them sitting in cheap monoblock plastic chairs, pulled out from makeup stalls. All of them visibly sweating, clutching cups of tea with one hand and their smartphones in the other. One of them in particular is looking almost ready to spill, moreso when you saw him glance up at your hat's emblem.

How do you start this interrogation?

You stare at them for a few moments, while allowing them to get a good look at you in return. The uneasy silence in the room allowing what little of the concert's din to float through the open door. ...The first bars of A Magical Girl's Only Wish, if you're hearing it correctly. The concert seems to be getting into full swing now, and it's a pity you're not there to see Sayaka really work it.

It's here that you step around the table that Kyosuke's men were also kind enough to set up for you, with the executives all seated on one side, facing the other that had a single, solitary chair. Meant for you, most likely, and it's in this chair that you take a seat in, carefully, quietly. Taking your time to get comfortable, even with the knowledge that time isn't exactly on your side, here. But then again, it isn't on theirs, either. The mixed look of impatience and despair on their faces proof enough of that.

After a few more moments of fidgeting, it's here that you stare at them again - each in turn - before reaching into the depths of your jacket to pull out the Golden Desert Eagle from its concealed holster. The cold metal immediately growing flesh-warm to your touch, eager, hungry.

You hear, very faintly, their collective intake of breath as the room's harsh fluorescent lighting caught the polished golden metal. The gleam sliding, silklike, along the barrel as you draw the bulky firearm out in full. A comically-oversized firearm even in a grown man's hands, much more made disproportionate in yours.

One click, as you disengage the safety.

Another as you carefully slip out the magazine, giving it a cursory check before sliding it back in.

The third and final one echoes throughout the silent room as you place it carefully on the table, in front of you.

And once that they've managed to tear their eyes away from the Desert Eagle, glancing back at you with jaw-slack faces, it's hear that you smile.

"Gentlemen," You start, keeping your voice pleasant, level, something made difficult by how all of them flinched even before the first syllable left your lips. "Is there a problem? Were the accommodations not to your liking?"

"E-excuse me, young lady," One of the executives cut you off, sweat positively pouring down his balding head. "I-I do believe there's been a bit of a misunderstanding, we--"

"--Would you mind telling me the reason for your rush?" You keep smiling as you continue. "I heard from security that there has been an accident with your vehicle; it is being cleared away as we speak. I am sure we can find you cabs after the concert."

One of them had started to murmur incoherently under his breath, jowls quivering as he gripped his smartphone in a sweaty, white-knuckled grip.

"Can't...can't stay here..." The executive gabbled. "I'm not...I've got a family..."

"Nakamura, shut up!" The executive at the far end - a particularly squat-looking one with a receding hairline concealed with what looks to be a particularly shameless combover and lots of hair gel - snaps at his gabbling compatriot. "You don't have to tell this kid anything! Do you idiots forget what the Tojo Group can do?!"

"I'm...I'm not going to die here....got a family..." The previous executive shakes his head, positively panicking now. He turns to you, pointing one shaking, well-manicured finger. "Y-you. What's...what's your name? G-give me your name, miss." He all but rips out something from the inside of his suit, you see it's a slightly sweaty checkbook.

I wonder, what kind of insurance policy do the record companies have on the idols on stage right now?

Insurance policies on their contracts too?

Insurance on the stadium?

Say for some reason they needed a huge amount of money, either to pay off a debt, or just plain greed. They contact Tojo group with an idea, maybe some of our idols are getting out of hand and we want to collect on what we can while we can. Arrange for an incident at a time and date, and we'll give you a big cut.

Tojo goes to the 10th, offers an idea that can put not just one Meguca into despair, but many others watching around the world as the most popular idol ever that loves magical girls and wishes them happiness and pure love gets killed by a witch they're helpless to stop.

You look down at the executive's open checkbook - his hand, poised with an expensive-looking pen over it, already dripping sweat onto the paper - and you shake your head, the smile still on your face.

"Do I look like I need money?" You ask the middle-aged executive named Nakamura, your voice still level, still polite.

"N-no, of...of course not, but--" The executive tries, one hand reaching up to wipe his suit's sleeve on his bedewed forehead. "L-look, whatever they're paying you, I-I can double it, triple it, m-maybe some stock options--"

You slam your hand down on the table, open-palmed, the sound a clear and shocking bang that makes all four executives jump in their seats. Nakamura in particular almost falls out of his - and you can tell that the man's just about close to breaking down.

You've seen their type - the usually spineless sort that got way in over his head because someone strong-armed him into. Rich and sheltered, he'd always counted on his money getting him a convenient way out - and now that it's not working, his world is just about crashing around his ears. The sort that would crawl through dirt and mud and shit just to save his ass, even if it meant dragging his friends down into the crap with him.

"Tell me," You start again, still in the same maddeningly-patient tone. "...why you're so desperate to leave, then, and I'll think about letting you go. If you're concerned about the Tojo Group, I may even be able to arrange for protection." You pause here, before turning to glance at the executive who'd tried to shut Nakamura up earlier. "...But until I start getting the answers I want, then we're all going to enjoy the entire concert together."

There's a sudden dripping sound from underneath the table, faint yet clear as day. The scent of ammonia detectable even in the amount of makeup and perfume in the dressing room you've appropriated as an interrogation room.

"For fuck's sake, Nakamura..." Combover Executive growls underneath his breath, before moving his chair a few inches away from the now-blubbering family man. His other companions following suit moments later.

...Well. Apparently you've made someone piss themselves without even so much as touching them. Is that a first? You don't quite remember.

"...Listen, girlie." It's here that Combover lets out a weary, tired sigh. "Fine. You've made your point. Yes, we're...in a hurry to get out of here. I'll give you that." He nods at you. "But let me tell you, you don't get to where we are by just being fat old men earning too much money off of idols and girly boys. To be where we are, you have to be smart about it." He points a gnarled finger to his temple. "Real smart. And right now, young lady, I think the smart thing to do would be to go with you. For now, at least."

The executive clears his throat, shooting the sobbing Nakamura a dirty look before continuing. "That said, Mine didn't tell us anything. Nothing concrete. But I did hear him fighting with someone over the phone - seemed like someone at the other end of the line had told him some bad news, bad news he didn't quite expect or take very well." He pauses here to wipe sweat off his brow with a monogrammed handkerchief. "It looks to me that whoever he was talking to is going to do something they didn't quite agree on. I heard him tell them not to even think about doing it here. About it not being part of the contract."

Silence, here, as you wait for him to continue. He blinks at you, before shaking his head.

"That's all you're getting out of me - and us. Now, can we fucking leave already?"

...Well. It doesn't seem like he's lying. It's hard to tell, though - despite what you've been doing, Combover looks remarkably calm, despite sweating just as much as Nakamura.

You stare at Combover for a few moments more, making him sweat - before finally standing up from your seat and picking up the Golden Desert Eagle off of the table. You make sure to let them see that you're not making any move to holster it, but simply holding it by your side.

It's here that you thank them for their time, and tell them that they're free to go. Security will escort them out and into a conveyance of their choosing. Of course, if you find out that they've deliberately misinformed you, then you will be in touch.

"Understood, but unnecessary," Combover grunts as he stands up, along with the rest of the executives. "We're not that stupid, girlie. We've been negotiating contracts and dealing with yakuza for half of our lives. You...magical girls... are just like them, as far as we're concerned. The only thing different is that you're just a bit more expensive, and you smell better. " He utters the term like someone tasting cancerous bile and being told it was the finest cuisine money can buy.

...In retrospect, maybe you should've shot out his kneecaps for that, but you were already on your way out then. Making a beeline right for the room where Mine is being held - which, of course, is just next door from the executives'. The security detail posted in front of the door seems to be occupied in stopping Mine's own goons from getting into the room, but they part quickly enough for you to step through without breaking your stride. You pull the door close behind you, just as the Tojo Group representative looks up from his seat, a lit cigarette held delicately between two fingers.

For someone in a hurry to get out of here, he looks calm, almost bored. He even has the balls to smile at you. "Ah. Miss Magical Girl, we meet again. Do you smoke?" He reaches for something inside his jacket. "I have here some splendid--"

You cut him off as you continue moving forward, reaching out and grabbing a handful of his collar - hauling him off his chair, upsetting the table, and shoving him facefirst against the cold metal wall of the equipment room. He lets out a rather unmanly squawk as you smash his face into the wall again, just with enough force to hurt. The impact is a solid, metallic noise, like a gong muffled with cloth but struck hard enough to reverberate.

"Please, allow me to explain--" Mine tries, while at the same time trying to dislodge you - he may be impeccably dressed, but the man is just as well-built as Kyosuke, probably even more so. However, you're not in the mood to play fair - and you kick the back of his legs in, forcing him to kneel. He's just about to hiss in pain when you press the cold mouth of the Desert Eagle's barrel against the back of his knee. Optimal kneecap blasting range.

"Start talking, fuckface." You all but snarl at him, the trigger pulled to a hair's breadth to completion.

"...I'm not at liberty to say," Mine manages to say calmly and levelly. "It's...it's a matter between me and the people I hired. Please, don't do anything you may regret, Miss Matsuda."

...Oh, so he knows your name, now?

"...Yes. The...squad I hired. They told me about you." The yakuza representative seems to be suddenly aware of his slip, wincing. "...Please, can't we discuss this like rational adults...?"

You reply by pulling the trigger - and the Desert Eagle bucks harshly in your grip as it spits out fire and brimstone in its usual deafening roar of a discharge. But instead of spraying yourself with blood and bits of knee, all you get is the faint whiff of gunpowder and seared metal - the spot on the wall right beside Yoshitaka Mine's still-intact leg joint bearing a new fist-sized hole in it, its edges still a hot, molten red.

"Eight seconds." You state stonily, curtly, in a tone that you hope conveys the notion that your patience will only last eight seconds and not one second more. "Seven. Six."

"...Alright. Alright, Miss Matsuda. You win." Mine gulps audibly. "Fine. I had...I had nothing planned for this concert, not in the way you think." He tries to look at you, but you're not letting up the pressure much, making it an exercise in futility. "All I was going to do was to visit Miss Kirishima's room when the concert's done. Ask forgiveness for my disgraceful display back there at the Hotel." Mine takes a deep breath. "I realize now that...that might have colored your perception of me, some. Seeing as we're here, and all."

You grunt irritably at this. He's not talking fast enough for your liking.

"...I'm getting to it, please, Miss Matsuda." The yakuza representative takes another deep, shuddering breath. "The squad I hired...they warned me about...an attack. Another group is here, among the audience, waiting and watching for the right move. They have no Officio, but they have a leader." He shakes his head. "They call her their Prophet, and that her vengeance is at hand."

...Hnh. This Prophet, again.

...Hnh. This Prophet, again.

"They advised me to leave immediately, and take the executives with me out. They told me that this group is gunning for one specific person - and that person is you, Miss Matsuda." Mine manages to smile, here. "Which is a bit ironic, considering that you're the one supposed to protect your client in the first place. Instead, you've brought the danger to her." He chuckles, a low, breathless sound. "Is...is that to your satisfaction, Miss Matsuda?"

You're just about to reply, when suddenly your earbud comes to life with a crackle of static.

"Matsuda-sama?" It's Enishi. "Matsuda-sama, I know you're busy, but we have a situation. Ayumu of Squad Hiryu isn't responding, and her readout is a flatline--"

Another crackle of static, and then, an unfamiliar voice crackles in your ear. One with a rather smooth, dignified accent, like someone brought up reading poetry and high literature, that kind of thing.

"Your little sniper is fine, Murderer. Or, at least, her Soul Gem is." The voice is smooth, silky, not unlike Kirika on a good day. "I can't guarantee it will stay that way, however, if you choose to conduct yourself in the uncouth manner you and your Officio seem happy enough to revel in. Like pigs in shit."

How do you react?

We need to know more about who and what we're dealing with before we go making threats. We're at a complete disadvantage right now and anything we say is just baseless threats which will be immediately seen as such.

“Sami?” I called out to the open. Immediately faces turned to me and only half turned away a second later. Don’t really blame them; I’m known to be more active during dusk and nightfall. But a call in by Eightball is a call I couldn’t really deny, and apparently I wouldn’t be alone for his little interrogation.

Still, people didn’t expect me to ever show myself in day time. I couldn’t tell if they were wondering why I was there at the time or if they were looking at me and thinking “that’s one of the qualifiers for the tournament.” I couldn’t care less about it back then; I just wanted to make sure Eightball knew something after the interview.

I am not a morning person. Do not ever expect me to become a morning person. If you call me up early somebody will have bloody jelly for a head.

…Guess I was feeling merciful that day.

I walked straight to the end of the room to the elevators when one of them opened in front of me. A few girls walked past me but the surprise was the only one left in the elevator when I got on.

“You’re still in that?” The casual question was asked as I joined Sami, transformed in her dress and ribbons combo.

“Not much blood, doesn’t matter. Then there’s you, hypocrite.” She eyed my own dress, black and that same shade of blue while having more dots of crimson on it then on her.

“Yea, I guess we’re both lazy.”

“You’re lazy.”

“You don’t care.”

We stopped after that as the elevator began to ascend. I realized then why she was there; we both fought the day before and did well. Eighty had told me he wanted a few words with those he thought showed potential in the tournament.

I already had been watched by him in the past. I wanted to see who else he saw.

“Mornin’ bitches!” A classic greeting by Eightball as we walked out of the elevator and passed by a girl with long, orange hair who grinned at me as she walked by. “And I’ll be catchin’ you later Megan!”

Megan huh? I’ll probably see her again later.

“Gina, you were all bitchin about the tourney, but look at you now! Totally wiped that poor sucka! You getting on the good road to winning, I tell you. Now, Sami…” He turned his head to her while she was doing her best not to yell. “Eightball ain’t got much to say to you. That match? Fuckin brutal, it spoke for itself. Wasted her in no time flat! You serious about gettin that gold aren’t you?

“I did what would make me win.” She stated coldly, turning her head away. Sami never had the best… relations with Eightball, ever since I knew her. Didn’t know why and figured that if a cold person gets irritated by something, you don’t ask, especially if they consider you a friend.

“Aw, come on now Sami-girl. You scared a lot of the other bitches by tearing that girl a new one! When she came back to she didn’t know what the fuck happened! You’ve been-”

“Eighty, please.” I interrupted his speech, hoping he would get the notice.

“Gina, you shut the fuck up for a bit, okay? Just tryin ta make sure all my good bitches know I’m proud of em!” He… kinda did. “Alright, earth-ta mother-fuckin Sami. . .”

Oh boy, I thought at the time, this will be a while. And it would.

The ten minutes afterwards were Eightball trying to sweet-talk Sami into talking more, but her responses were either short, non-descriptive or unsatisfactory to Eighty. I knew that she was hard to crack, but he didn't need to try that hard. Whatever Sami had against Eightball, he was only making it worse. I could tell from her face.

His phone rang on the table, making a nice interruption. "Fucking damn it, what the hell is it now?" He opened the phone while I looked back at Sami, who was more then relieved.

"The fuck is it Mary? …Oh really? We fuckin straight now… She asked for what!?" He busted out laughing at whatever him and what I assume was the warmaster-in-training was talking about. "Fuckin Japaneese. Just make sure the suit fits er like a glove as we be rollin. I'll thank my bro for sendin his bitches over. Eightball out." He sets the phone down and looks back at us. "You girls be free to go, I gotta see that I pay my respects. A brotha gotta thank his brothers."

"Later, Eighty." I did a respectful bow and turned to leave. Sami on the other hand wasted no time heading to the elevator, immediately getting in as it came up and opened.

"Never good with him huh?" She intentionally avoided my gaze and my question, tapping her foot against the floor as the elevator started going down. "If it helps you calm down, you can come to my place." It was nothing I really minded, I never had any problem with visitors before, but I knew Sami was… different. Like I was.

"…Sure."

Other magical girls didn't bother us as we exited the building. For a long time, we didn't talk. I could tell she was conflicted then, and I knew there was still a lot I didn't know about her. But I was reminded of the day before, and what she told me.

"You were right yesterday." She turned to me as we began walking down the sidewalk. "What you said about collecting weapons. I didn't really think about it then but you made a point. The difference here is that when the world comes looking for me, I'll be ready."

"Better be." Her cold response told me she wasn't going to cooperate that well. With the opportunity of location I decided to change the subject.

"We first met around here, a few months ago." My eyes scan the area, a normal California costal town that's hiding two deadly organizations. "Funny how you started the conversation, asking me why I was perched on a rooftop."

“You didn’t know why.”

“It’s comfortable.” That was true, at least for me as well. The outfits are usually on-spot for most girls, though there are some… questionable combinations. I briefly considered asking how Eightball could get all those fashion ideas for so many girls, but I found out we were out of time.

“Well, we’re here. Again."

My apartment was fair, at best. Not too bland but not a whole lot to look at either; walls of blue, black carpet and very few pictures. At least it looked more modern then others. The furniture was comfy at least, save for that one rocking chair that I forgot its origin. I didn’t like to keep anything dirty or messy for too long, but I knew regardless of that Sami wouldn’t care.

“To an extent we both prefer being alone.” I reminded her, entering in last and closing the door. “The first time you came here you ranted on about every minute detail and hoped I got annoyed enough to let you go.”

“Which didn’t happen.”

“You did do your best, I’ll admit.” Chuckling, I looked over where she was. Surprisingly she was looking at the mirror, her hands touching the blood stains on the dress. Her ribbons began moving too, stretching out then relaxing. She once said her ribbons felt like a part of her, which was part of the reason she didn’t like getting out of her magical outfit, since they also vanished.

She looked back at me after a while and I could tell she was looking at my bloodstains as well. “You have more blood on yourself then I do.”

“You’re smaller.”

“You should change.”

“I, what?” She never bothered with me on stuff like that before, why now? I stared at her in shock as she opened the closet and looked at my clothes inside. “Well, I guess I should but…” I watched her take some clothes and fling them at me.

“Get out and go change.”

Sami is not someone I would ever consider for fashion, but looking at the full-body mirror showed she did have some taste. A black and purple skirt reached my feet while the top half of me was blue shirt with a black, red and gold Chinese dragon coloring on it that spans my entire chest despite my proportions (Sami was jealous of me, but a D isn’t really -that- big). My black hair didn’t get in the way since it only went down to the shoulders, but it also didn’t hide my worn-out face, only made more apparent by my dejected red eyes.

Eventually I walked away from the mirror, wondering how much I could really go before I couldn’t recognize myself anymore.

“You want anything?” I asked her, walking over to the kitchen area. “Still got a lot of stuff I haven’t finished yet.”

“I’m good.” Her reaction was bland as she gazed at something across the room. Just knowing what direction she was looking at I knew what object had gotten her attention.

“I really haven’t picked up that in a long time.” Turning my head to the piano at the far side of the room, I couldn’t remember the last time I played music. “Probably should, every night something doesn’t go wrong when I wonder around just means it’s going to happen later.”

“Playing music is safe?”

“Safer then braving the midnight streets, even if I’m a magical girl.” Almost automatically I walked over to the piano, an old wooden model that was handed down to me…

“One of the bloody gifts?”

“Yea. . .” We once talked about our histories and how we became magical girls and decided not to bring it up again. It turned out I wasn’t alone in the ruined childhood department.

“Why did you stop?"

“There was no reason to keep playing.” She should have known what I meant, but. . .

“Then play for me.”

Sami never failed to disappoint in the surprises factor that day. After getting myself down on the chair I lifted the cover and ran my fingers over the keys. It took a few moments of random key pressing before I somehow knew what to play. An ode to the shadow of the earth, I played it slowly.

“The darkest night, with no moon
Blankets over all, no one is immune.
The light of man, across the world
Hides the shadow, which we’ve furled.

Nations crumble, people die
Before our eyes, time flies by
We can’t stay still, for too long
For as we wait, life goes on.

People can say, nothing to loose
Some still tell, of freedom to choose.
The iron hand, still grips us all
We can’t escape, until we fall.

Leaders rise, and hold our fears
While in the dark, feed on tears

When will we see, what has gone
When we're content, how life goes on.

Will there ever come a time
When we will look at crime
And see our race's blackened core,
When we realize
We must cauterize
The source of blood under the door.

Civilization, out greatest illusion
Along with dreams, of revolution
If we never, look past the door
We'll never know, what's next in store.

Time is spent, lives are wasted
Humanity now, can't be sated
Still we hold, and press on
For we all know, life goes on.

And as we pray for the dawn,
Life goes on… life goes on."

"That was the first song I was taught." I explained to her after I finished. "I didn't really understand back then, but now I understand. She tried to warn me."

"She couldn't have warned you." Sami retorted. "There's a difference between someone who cares and someone who knows you."

"I get it, but…" The sigh didn't do much for me. My thoughts were messy and clouded. It's just, what was I supposed to say?

"Nothing will change the past, especially not thinking about it." I angrily muttered out, catching her off guard. You know that as much as I do, even if you were better off then I was."

"We never reached a consensus on that argument." Sami stated, and she was right. It was touchy, but in a way we could somehow connect with each other. "The best you can do is keep doing what makes you feel comfortable."

I got up and looked at her. To anyone else it would be shameful to have me be talked down by someone smaller and possibly younger then me. I myself had all the intention of talking back to her. But I knew better than that.

"Gina?" She asked me as I hugged her softly but with enough force to keep her from getting away if she wanted to.

"And this is why we're friends." I broke away from her and smiled, giving her a part on the shoulder. "I can think of things from here. Maybe. I can always call."

"My cell phone's broken."

"Oh." I watched her calmly walk away from me and to the door. When she opened the door she turned back to me.

"What is it that they're saying now, 'May the Blessed Lady protect?'" I shrugged in response as she closed the door and left. People are thinking of stranger and stranger things. If there is a "Blessed Lady", I wouldn't mind meeting her.

Well, there's still time in life for a lot of things. Life goes on, indeed.

Their job was specifically mentioned to have opposing vantage points to monitor the crowd AND EACH OTHER.

If one of them got captured, then either the others are dead, enishi is a mole, the whole team is compromised, or they're really fucking incompetent. All of those are reasons to let her die. We're not a lovey dovey warmaster, we're the girl once known as Murderface, one more dead MG is nothing, this bitch on the mic needs to step up her game and come at us directly to even get a halffuck.

Hey, I'm gonna go ahead and give a request up for writefaggery.

I've been contemplating what a normal human would do in a world like this if he wants to take the fite to the magical girls as it is wont to happen sooner or later.

So I was contemplating a handful of MGs hanging out in an abandoned building putting the thumbscrews to one dude they want info out of when someone geared up like pic related stomps into the room with a belt-fed AA12 with buckshot loaded and begins blasting away. One gets gibbed trying to get close to him, the others leg it out the backdoor. Only a few steps from the building a grenade launcher blows them off their feet and one of them to pieces while a sniper picks off another. Only one MG left, she tries to flee but the massive autoshotgun guy comes around the corner and smashes her to the ground, then shoots her in one knee. She blacks out a bit.

The song bit could have been done a bit more elegantly than just slapping the lyrics down. That part seemed really sloppily done. Other than that, the flow and word choice could use a lot of work. Seems like you're trying too hard to make it dark and just going straight into 2EDGY territory.

That makes no sense. There was enough time for Enishi and the rest of the team to notice Ayumu (and ONLY Ayumu) wasn't responding, and contact Chiaki to give her that information, which means 10+ seconds at least. If contact with the whole team (or even one more) was lost, whether due to signal interference or them being taken out, that would have been mentioned. Therefore, they weren't all taken out at the same time.

Again, she either literally disappeared completely in front of their eyes a la invisibility (which seems a lot of trouble if you're just gonna chunk her for her gem anyway), or they're useless as fuck. Or Decu didn't remember they kept watch on eachother.

Comes down to, we have a squad unaffiliated with any Officio with a "Prophet" at the helm of their movements. They managed to take one of our girls by surprise, even when we'd specifically ordered an overwatch.

They have the advantage right now, as the element of surprise (we know nothing about them) and a superior strategic position (a "Prophet")... pointless bravado is really, absolutely the poorest choice that could be made here.

I think the problem here is that, well... judging from their actions, they know that a direct confrontation with Timestop Mc.Murderface will end in their deaths.

So they're getting as many advantages as they can.

Why attack us in the tunnel when they can send us Mami lookalike corpses, threaten the entire concert, and take out our squad one by one unless we "cooperate"?

Really... we're at an extreme disadvantage right now. We need more info and if just make a bluff that we CAN'T back up, we're going to get called out on it and we're going to have a massive allied body count for out first mission as Warmaster.

Noticing after they've already executed their plan and abandoned stealth isn't exactly doing her credit, and that still leaves the illusion-detecting capability of the rest of Squad Hiryuu looking pretty bad.

Really, it's not even a power thing - every character will have weaknesses that can be exploited, after all. But when you set up a perimeter, have it guarded against everything you can think of, and it's breached not because of a huge gap in your preparation but 'lol your enemy has the perfect power to make all your preparation useless' (this is assuming it's a callidus ability like >>27368026, still room for Decu to outthink us instead of course), that just makes it feel like the preparation was pointless in the first place and could be skipped entirely.

Given the utter bullshit that happened upstairs, Chiaki CANNOT fight these guys. And she will not go to meet them on their terms, if they want to talk to her, they need to talk to her in person. She can arrange for a neutral meeting at her officio. It's stupid for her to negotiate with these ladies.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 09/24/13(Tue)08:42 No.27397076

You ask the unfamiliar voice currently purring in your ear the basics - namely, who the hell they thought they were, what's it going to take for them to fuck off, and just what the fuck did they do to one of your snipers. All while still making the high-class representative of one of the biggest yakuzas in Japan continue to kowtow to the wall with one hand, while the other aimed a Golden Desert Eagle at one of his kneecaps.

"In due time, Murderer." The voice is whispery, almost hissing each syllable. "Let's talk a bit more before we start exchanging personal details. Although, I suppose I do have the advantage here." A breathy giggle. "Tell me first, though - did you enjoy the gifts I left for you? I made sure you'd appreciate them."

Your eyes narrow at this. So she's owning up to sending you that package, then? And that surprise your convoy nearly ran over on the way here? That was all her, too?

"Guilty as charged, I'm afraid." Another giggle, this time terminating into a sigh. "It was quite fun, to be honest. - making the girl look like your precious Tomoe Mami. I treated it like an art project, you know. A splash of color here, some careful embroidery to get the details right...and, of course, a few choice cuts here and there to make things neat and tidy."

Mine trashes in your grip, here, nearly dislodging you - and you absently slam him against the wall again to make him stop. He does so well enough, his forehead impacting against brushed steel with a gong-like sound, and he falls limp in your grasp with a groan.

You reply just as you let go of Mine, allowing the yakuza representative to fall in a boneless heap on the dusty floor. Is it at all reasonable, then, that you're talking to the Prophet?

"...How did you...?" The voice seems surprised, but recovers quickly enough. "...No. As flattering as it may be, I am not The One Who Sees The Ten Thousand Futures. She is pure, and has yet to stain her hands with innocent blood. We do it for her instead, as her vanguard. Willingly and wholeheartedly, we will shed blood in her name, to protect her and this world from you."

...It sounds like you're up against another nutjob, here. Someone who gets off on murder like it's some sort of fetish, or something. Bringing to mind another psycho that cut your arm off and then got reduced to hamburger immediately afterwards a few lifetimes ago.

How do you respond?

You growl out your reply just as you stalk out of Mine's impromptu interrogation room, gesturing towards Mine with the Golden Desert Eagle as you pass by the security detail waiting outside. She does love to hear herself talk, doesn't she? Does she get off on being overly theatrical, or is overacting horribly something she wished for instead?

"...Charming, Murderer. Exactly what I expected of you. Absolutely no appreciation for drama, for the beautiful sadness of the moment. I believe that, besides the boon of ridding the world of its most despicable peril, I will also be providing society at large an extremely valuable service by killing you. Society ill needs a Magical Girl with no affectation for the finer things, much less a Warmaster."

Ignoring the obvious bait, you remind her that for all the talking she's been doing, she hasn't yet finished answering all your questions. If she's looking for this conversation to get any further, then she'll need to give you something more than titles and cryptic bullshit. Hell, if you needed any more of that, then you'd just fiddle with your phone's diary app for a bit.

"...It always makes me die a little bit, inside, knowing that you're the kind of shit I have to deal with, in order to protect her." And just like that, the dignified accent and the lyrical vocabulary is gone, like a switch flipped. "The name is Lucius, Chiaki Matsuda. Now you know the name the Prophet gave me, and the name of the one who will bring you to justice."

Lucius? So, like Lucy, then? Or does she sleep with a lot of people?

"I don't--" The reply is barked, almost snarled, before it's cut off. "...No. Lucius. Say it properly. I know you have a hard time with that unrefined tongue of yours, but please do make the effort to."

Fine. Whatever. Now, what will it take for her to give you back your sniper's Soul Gem and then fuck off to whatever hole she came from?

"...This isn't really the time for you to make demands, you realize?" She sighs, the exhalation of air ruined with static. "But very well, here are my terms, if you want your underling's Soul Gem that badly. Stand your security detail down - and when I say that, I mean your Vindicare Squad AND the foolish little Callidus you've got bumbling around - and come to the pitcher's mound at the stadium's baseball diamond. Alone, please. And once I confirm this, I will approach you myself and make the exchange personally."

You very nearly laugh at this. Is...is this bitch serious? Does she think you're that stupid, to fall for a setup like that?

"Please. Such bald-faced deception is expected more from your ilk." A cackle. "No, no, Matsuda. I will grudgingly admit that you've been prudent with this concert's security. Predictable, but prudent. Your little sniper put up quite a fight, too - she killed one of my squad before I could execute the killing blow." She sighs, here. "Poor Amelia. And she was so confident, so full of herself."

Lucius clears her throat. "In any case, Matsuda. I have allowed what's left of my strike team - the strike team I had planned to attack your client with, to humiliate you in front of the entire world by executing your client in mid-song - to mingle with the crowd. At the moment, they are untransformed. Upon my signal, they will transform and self-destruct their Soul Gems - and you know full well the kind of damage that can cause. Whether I give the signal or not depends on you, Matsuda."

The fuck. If she's got walking time bombs in the crowd, then why doesn't she just go ahead with it, then? Why go through all this trouble?

"Because this is my Plan B, Matsuda." The smile in Lucius' voice is almost palpable. "Single, honorable combat. You and me. With the entire world watching - and to a rather catchy tune, at that."

"Oh, of course." Lucius laughs. "I have a shrine of her in my quarters. And yes, I accepted this assignment knowing full well I'd have to end her career myself. But I took comfort in the fact that artists such as herself are only truly appreciated once they've been murdered."

That's...hnh. Well. You can't argue with that.

"Quite. But enough of that. Those are my terms, Matsuda. Ten minutes from now, Ruri-sama will sing my favorite song - Waltz of the Spider Lilies. You should be at the pitcher's mound, alone, the moment the first stanza leaves her lips. Or I will give the signal." A moment. "Oh, and I assume you're smart enough to realize that I will also give the signal if you try to evacuate the premises with your client. She may escape this unscathed, but her fans - and her reputation - certainly won't."

The well-spoken murderer giggles one last time. "I look forward to killing you, Chiaki Matsuda." You then hear the tell-tale click of someone switching off from the frequency.

"...Jesus Christ, she's just as annoying as Kirika." You hear Sayaka suddenly spit, her voice full of venom. "It's a trap, Murderface. Another one. Don't tell me you're stupid enough to fall for it."

I'm coming backstage now, we'll discuss strategy on the way. 10 minutes is a lot of time, after all."

Okay I'm thinking, since the MGs don't need to have bodies to be exploded, it's gonna be hard to think up any way to prevent them from 'sploding if she decides she wants them to go boom. Unless we can figure out a way to reliably identify them all in <10 minutes and smash their gems.

We've got magical girl assets in the crowd, can we use them to help mitigate the explosions?

Alternately, jam all communications so they can't give a kill order. That's the other plan.

Now, if I was her, I'd just have rigged the pitcher's mound with explosives. Single honourable combat with sufficient high explosives enough to kill/incapacitate.

[x] Call Kyubey. We've got suicide magical girls ready to explode, should we exfiltrate the client and our people, and forget the reputation and her fans, or do we make an attempt to save everyone?

We don't really care about the fans that much. Our sniper's a write-off for now. Mainly is the issue worth risking OUR magical girls and the client? That's the bosses call.

>> ☐ Anonymous 09/24/13(Tue)11:04 No.27398228

Okay, let's rationalize this. Obviously, the whole 'protecting the prophet' thing she claims to be all about isn't her real motivation, because even this plan alone is a terrible way of going about it, but her original one - killing Ruri to make Chiaki look bad - and making the Mami look-a-likes are both about a thousand times dumber in that case. At least this current one might kill Chiaki instead of just enrage her. And yet, doing it for 'the prophet', and her general but unexplained hatred, is about all we've gotten out of her so far. Finding out who she is/why she's got it in for Chiaki is probably going to help a lot in working out way through this.

~~If this is Oriko, I've got no idea who the prophet might turn out to be. Unless this is a 'the prophet is Mami that's why they'll 'kill' Mami because she won't be Mami any more, see, hyuk hyuk aren't we good we've got more riddles coming up just wait' kind of situation. But you'd think Chiaki might remember Oriko's voice, and I don't see why she'd bother hiding her name/identity. But I also can't think of anyone else who'd have it in for Chiaki this bad. So...someone from Murderface era maybe? In which case there's not much thinking and reasoning we can do to find out where they're coming from.~~

>jam all communications
The signal doesn't have to come by radio. It could be magical, or even something as simple as a flare. No guarantee of success, and unlikely since it's an obvious first response.

Attempting to exfiltrate will only result in the principal dying partway to the exit rather than on stage.

I'm guessing the prophet gave Lucius a part of her plan and now she's acting on her own initiative and "for the sake of the prophet". Looking at it from the point of view of a fanatic: "if I succeed ahead of schedule, I will be exalted!"

It feels like the two are somewhat unrelated. If this really was about protecting/helping the prophet then they would go for plans that at least had a chance of killing Chiaki, while simultaneously not being traceable. But their three plans so far amounts to: piss off Chiaki for no gain with fake Mami heads, piss off Chiaki for little gain by killing Ruri and making her look incompetent (abandoned), and possibly kill off Chiaki...but implicating the prophet in the process. Those aren't the plans of someone for whom the prophet's well-being is their top priority. More like those of someone with a bone to pick, who happens to be allied with or serving the prophet to further that goal.

You continue walking, pushing past a gaggle of extras doing their level best to pull off their ridiculous costumes to pull on even gaudier ones. Of course you're know it's a goddamn trap, Lucius practically admitted as such. But the alternative is letting a bunch of civilians get killed - and you're not going to let your first mission as Warmaster end up with that kind of collateral damage. Besides, what would Mami say?

"...Ngh. Well, at least your heart's in the right place for once," Sayaka grumbles. "Anyway, we should probably come up with something and fast - not much time left before her favorite song." A moment. "For someone completely fucking insane, though, she's got taste."

What's that song about, anyway? Waltz of the Spider Lilies?

"Slow song, with bits of uptempo here and there. Kind of like a Nocturne. Someone mourning about how their Magical Girl girlfriend didn't come back one night."

Apt. ...Wait, is it still safe to use this frequency? Lucius could still be listening--

"I heard her sign off, Matsuda-sama," comes Enishi's breathless reply. "I've remotely disabled Ayumu's headset just in case, though. We should be secure enough to plan." A moment's silence. "M-Matsuda-sama, I apologize for this lapse of security, I should have been able to--"

You shake your head, before cutting her off. No. No apologies right now. The mission comes first - any finger-pointing or blaming will have to wait until after the debriefing. Right now, you want everyone on the same page on what to do before your ten minutes are up.

"...Very well. I am at your disposal, Matsuda-sama. Please use me as you will." The contrite tone in Enishi's voice is quickly replaced by a grim, determined one. "My Warmaster's will be done."

"Likewise." Sayaka replies, after a moment's hesitation. "They don't sound like they're going for Ruri, anyway."

It may be possible that a magical girl may have developed a means to let girls break their contracts, or fake a witchout somehow and then obscure them.

Alternately, maybe there's an Incubator that just doesn't care if some girls leave the Officio to do other things.

"We're listening, Miss Matsuda." comes Kyosuke's grim reply. "Miss Kirishima's safety is paramount, but I'm sure she would want us to help protect her fans, too."

"...Squad Hiryu reporting." A tearful voice comes on the frequency, but one with barely-kept rage. "Warmaster, Ayumu was one of ours, and we should've been watching her more carefully when she relocated. It's our fault, but we're not going to screw up again. Tell us what to do, and we'll do it. We'll get those bitches back for Ayumu-chan."

...Well. Seems like everyone's more or less at your disposal, here. Good to know.

What kind of plan do you come up with?

[]Exfiltration. Have them be prepared to get Ruri out the moment something goes wrong. The casualties will be regrettable, but at least the client will be safe.
[]Contigency. Have Enishi coordinate with Squad Hiryu and Kyosuke's men to check for any suspicious Magical Girls about to transform, and have them detain or kill on sight while you fight Lucius.
[]Subterfuge. Have Enishi disguise Sayaka as you while you keep Ruri guard.
[]Have them be on guard while you call Kyuubey and ask for Muramasa to be delivered to you.

>Do we have a way to detect magical girls?
Yes, Enishi can detect them.
But so far, we have not been shown to be able to do it.

Also, Soul Gem self-destruct can still be done by the Soul Gem itself; the Magical Girl's mind and soul are in the Soul Gem, not the meat-body that they can just resleave into. Grabbing all the Soul Gems would just leave us holding ALL the bombs that can still detonate themselves as soon as they realize they're cut off from their bodies, which would be pretty easy for them to realize.

Whether the Soul Gem can detonate on its own or not is debatable. Kyouko physically manipulated her gem by kissing it to get it to detonate, and it fits in with the comments about body and soul being dependent on each other.

The body dies without the Soul Gem and the Soul Gem dies and blinks out if separated from the body for too long.

Fits with the treatment Midori was given as a prisoner. Her Soul Gem was attuned to her body a few times while she was in the silent room to keep either from dying.

To be clear the crowd is in the bleachers/stands, or on the field itself right now? Or both?

We're in a stadium, I'm assuming it's the same stadium as before, it wouldn't do to be standing there like a badass in the middle of a moshpit though, not that we would be moshed, rather the other way around. Perhaps if we could tell the stage boss that a super secret surprise is coming out to the field and the people need to back off for it? We're just lacking in detail on a lot of things here.
